NEXT PRIORITY FOR GOVERNMENT

PM Seeks Unemployment Cut

Soaring Buck Raising Goosebumps

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—National pride may be soaring as the Canadian dollar almost achieves parity with U.S. currency, but here in the capital the bouncy buck is only raising some goosebumps.

The federal finance department has been remarkably loath to acknowledge let alone comment on the situation.

Strange, Compelling Explanation

However, one eminent economist — no names, no pack drill — suggested a strange but compelling explanation for the government reluctance to chat about the development.

He pointed out that while there are several reasons traced for the strong foreign demand for Canadian currency, there is total silence on why there is no countervailing Canadian demand for foreign currencies.

In other words, the imbalance of payments producing the demand for Canadian dollars is a measure of the growing weakeness rather than strength of the national economy — the direct result of the government's own deflationary policy.

"What is happening is that domestic demand is being curtailed because our economy is slowing down — indeed, as the unemployment figures show, it is slowing down much more than any other industrial nation — and consequently there is a much weaker demand for imports," the economist said.

Export Markets Relatively Strong

"This is occuring at a time when export markets are still relatively strong, a not infrequent conjunction. The same sort of thing happened in the 1950s when there was much slack in our economy at home but the Canadian dollar rose six cents above the U.S. dollar."

Thus when financial experts point out that foreign tourists are buying up Canadian dollars heavily for visits here it doesn't necessarily mean there are unusually larger numbers of them heading this way.

It also could mean that with a 6.6 per cent unemployment rate there are just fewer Canadians around this year with Canadian dollars to sell to finance American Express vacations abroad.

In that case, domestic weakness rather than external strength would account for the developing imbalance which the exchange rates reflect.

"Of course, as the Canadian dollar keeps going up, it will tend to discourage exports and encourage imports — but this compensating effect could take some time to show itself and thereby intensify the slackening of economic growth," the economist observed gloomily.

In any event, he contended it would be highly dangerous to re-peg the Canadian dollar at its current level, as hard experience in the 1950s proved.

Looking Ahead Three or Four Years

"First, looking ahead three or four years when export levels might taper off, it wouldn't be the right rate for Canada but it would be hard to get it down again — to devalue our dollar."

(Remember Donald Fleming's ordeal as finance minister in 1962?)

"And second, having just shown again that we will unpeg our dollar when forced, it would be very difficult indeed to defend a high-pegged dollar against the natural pressures of the exchange market.

He added that it would be mostly unlikely the international monetary fund would increase pressure on Canada to peg its currency when going through a volatile period.

"Certainly, it would be very, very difficult to make a judgment now on what the appropriate rate for the Canadian dollar should be," he said.

There are some indications that the cabinet thinks so, too, and it's one judgment it won't rush into.

Truce Stills Gunfire In Suez Canal Zone

By The Canadian Press

The banks of the Suez Canal were reported "quiet" today for the first time in three years.

But only hours after a United States-initiated ceasefire went into effect along the canal at midnight (3 p.m. PDT Friday) there were two reports of firing along the frontier with Jordan, with three Israeli soldiers wounded.

"The southern command reports quiet," an Israeli military spokesman said as the ceasefire became effective along the canal area.

But several rockets were reported fired from Jordan at the Israeli Dead Sea potash works within hours of the ceasefire and the military command said Arab gunners in Jordan wounded three Israeli soldiers in an ambush early today. The Israelis returned the fire after the ambush in the southern Golan Height of Syria, a spokesman said.

NO CASUALTIES

The military said in Tel Aviv there were no casualties in the rocket attack on the potash works and no information on who fired the rockets. Arab guerrillas were believed responsible.

Israel's deputy premier, Yigal Allon, said in an interview on the state radio that his government would hold Jordan responsible for any failure to control guerrillas operating from her territory.

"If terrorists or any other forces should renew attacks on Israeli villages and towns, then Israel would be obliged to invoke its right of self-defence," he said.

The ceasefire is viewed as a first step toward indirect Arab-Israeli peace talks. It was announced Friday in Washington, Cairo, Jerusalem and the United Nations in New York.

The ceasefire prompted limited optimism for settlement of the hostilities that have existed among the Middle Eastern neighbors since Israel became a state in 1948.

At the United Nations, special envoy Gunnar V. Jarring of Sweden scheduled meetings today with Israeli, Egyptian and Jordanian diplomats on mechanics of the ceasefire, which is to continue at least through Nov. 5.

They were expected to discuss possible cities for the negotiations — presumably New York, Geneva or Nicosia, Cyprus. The U.S. proposal called for the governments involved to name representatives for talks "according to such procedure and at such places and times" as Jarring might recommend.

'Winning Price Battle'

Times News Services

OCEAN FALLS — Ottawa is near the end of its battle against inflation and beginning to fight unemployment, Prime Minister Trudeau indicated here Friday.

The federal government is in a position to ease restraints because Canada has been more successful than any other western nation in its drive against inflation, he told a meeting in this coastal logging town of 2,500.

"The next priority is unemployment," he said.

The prime minister was winding up a six-day tour of B.C. and the north.

OTTAWA ACTIONS

Current unemployment — 6.6 per cent of the labor force — has been partly a result of government actions that slow the economy and defeat inflation, he said.

Because some sectors were still trying "to take more out of the economy than they put in," there were still inflationary pressures.

He said labor costs were a major cause of inflation as wage and salary boosts in the second quarter of this year had outpaced price and profit increases.

"Who's inflating now? It's labor."

CAN BORROW NOW

The prime minister told a later meeting of about 1,200 people in Prince Rupert that the government now is in a position to borrow new funds in the money market and reinvest them as a stimulant to the Canadian economy.

Trudeau appeared to take great enjoyment from question and answer sessions.

The audiences have been generally large, friendly and loud in their applause for the prime minister. Aides described the trip as an outstanding success. He is to return to Ottawa Sunday.

Trudeau told audiences Friday his reason for making the trip, which covered many areas never visited by a prime minister, was to talk and explain the overall context in which government operates.

Trudeau's stiffest test had been expected here when he was confronted by fishermen, angered at what they claim is interference from Soviet fishing vessels off the west coast.

At Friday night's public meeting however, fishermen asked only one question deal-

Guidelines Don't Apply To Postmen

MONTREAL — Postmaster-General Eric Kierans held out hope Friday for an early settlement of the national postal dispute.

He said his optimism was based on new-found "manoeuvrability" stemming from his understanding that six per cent guidelines do not apply to postmen.

"Both sides should move from their original positions," he said in an interview. "The momentum will then pick up, leading to a settlement."

Kierans said the six per cent guideline "has nothing to do with the post office" in its negotiations with the unions.

He said the negotiations had already started and "the guidelines came along later."

The postmaster-general said he has exerted pressure on the treasury negotiators in their talks with the Canadian Council of Postal Unions.

Tie Boosts To Inflation —Bennett

VANCOUVER (CP)— Premier W. A. C. Bennett said Friday he's suggested to Ottawa that its wage guidelines should be for increases amounting to three per cent more than the current rate of inflation.

"If the inflation is six per cent, the workers should get a nine per cent increase. If inflation is zero, they get only three per cent."

TOLD OTTAWA

Bennett said he has passed on the idea to Ottawa and the federal Prices and Incomes Commission.

He told a press conference he supports restraint "but I didn't suggest six per cent" — Ottawa's guideline.

"The six per cent is not a sound business approach," the premier said.

"That's Ottawa's trouble, they do not have any businessmen in their cabinet. How can you sell workers on a six-per-cent increase if inflation is eight per cent?

"I advocated a three per cent basic genuine increase in wages. We can expect a normal three per cent growth in economy to take care of that."

COMMITTEE HIT

Bennett also took a swing at the Commons committee studying tax reform, which sat recently in Victoria.

The committee members, said Bennett, were just on a political junket trying to whitewash the white paper on taxation.

Mail Strike Ends —Until Next Week

VANCOUVER (CP) — Postal workers returned to work in British Columbia today following a 24-hour strike that shut down mail service throughout the province.

Jim McCall, strike zone co-ordinator for the lower B.C. mainland, hinted that post offices in the province would be hit by rotating strikes again next week.

"We don't usually strike on the weekends, because it doesn't affect the service that much," he said. "But next week they will all be strikeable days.

"Monday is another era entirely."

Post offices in B.C. and the Yukon were shut down by the strike Friday. In B.C., only the dispatch office at Vancouver International Airport operated.

TEAR GAS ENDS SITDOWN IN B.C. PENITENTIARY

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — About 320 British Columbia penitentiary prisoners who staged an eight-hour sit-down protest overnight returned to their cells after an early-morning confrontation with prison guards and RCMP at the New Westminster penitentiary.

The death last Tuesday of Walten Brass, a 27-year-old Saskatchewan prisoner, was believed to have sparked the protest. A coroner's jury later ruled his death was caused by cerebral hemorrhage.

Prisoners said Brass was beaten by prison guards, and Friday night at 8 p.m. prisoners refused to return to their cells at the end of an exercise period.

Bonfires were started with recreation room ping-pong tables, but were extinguished by RCMP and guards.

Off-duty guards and police reinforcements were called as the prisoners continued to protest in the exercise area, surrounded by a 10-foot wire fence and 30-foot guard towers equipped with searchlights.

ORDERED BACK

At 3:20 a.m. an order was given to the men to return to their cells, but only a handful obeyed.

Several canisters of tear gas then were lobbed into the exercise area, which was surrounded by an estimated 125 members of the RCMP and 75 prison guards.

About two-thirds of the men then returned to their cells voluntarily and the remaining 100 men were lined up against the prison wall and escorted back.

The prisoners demanded an end to so-called "skin-frisks," in which they were stripped naked, and asked that the incident of Brass's death be referred to the parliamentary committee on justice.

A penitentiary spokesman said the demands were unjustifiable and would not be met.

NEW OFFICIALS FOR ISLAND RCMP

The 320-man Vancouver Island RCMP detachment has a new superintendent.

James Nelson, 48, newly promoted from the rank of inspector, has been busy flying to the Island's 25 detachments since taking over the job in early July.

He has visited seven of the detachments and will see the other 18 within a month.

In another change recently, the RCMP announced the retirement of Chief Superintendent E. A. Pennock, Victoria administrative officer. He has been replaced by Superintendent W. R. Pilkey of Ottawa, who will take over administrative duties in E Division.

WELFARE REBUTTAL

Runaway Costs B.C.'s Problem

B.C.'s welfare costs are "out of control," Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said today, but it's up to the provincial and federal governments, not the municipalities, to do something about it.

Curtis, speaking as president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, said Phil Gaglardi, minister in charge of welfare, does not appear to understand how his department functions.

Gaglardi said in Kamloops Friday this province is getting a reputation in the rest of Canada as a "soft touch" for welfare aid.

He said cities like Vancouver and Victoria which this year have high welfare costs should screen applicants and cut down on the number of people who receive aid.

Curtis, in a prepared statement, said:

'OUT OF CONTROL'

"Welfare costs in B.C. are pretty well out of control, and it isn't sufficient for the welfare minister to rather childishly suggest municipalities on their own can reduce costs."

"Municipalities in dispensing social assistance are acting under very strict rules imposed from above. In each civic welfare office the administrator functions under provincial government acts, regulations and policies.

"Admittedly our people have the right to interpret, but that gives them comparatively little latitude.

'SHOULD RESIGN'

"If Mr. Gaglardi does not understand this basic truth he should resign as Minster of Rehabilitation and Social Improvement," Curtis said.

"His suggestion that municipalities should screen applicants is quite absurd because he must know that our refusal to grant aid to a bona fide recipient would be overruled very quickly.

"If in fact some recipients are not totally entitled to the form and quantity of the assitance they now receive, then some rules should be changed at the federal and provincial levels."

Ratepayers to Study View Royal Proposal

The ratepayers are strongly opposed to multiple dwellings and industrial buildings in their area.

Last December they rejected a sewer referendum, mainly on grounds installation of sewers would be followed by an influx of developers.

Now Green Isle Estates Ltd. has renewed an application to the regional board for rezoning 38 acres astride the old highway on the east side of Craigflower Creek.

WAREHOUSE FIRST

A warehouse is the first building planned. It would be followed by a town house or condominium.

A previous application was turned down because of the lack of sewage facilities, but the company now intends to build its own sewer and join to the regional sewer system.

"This is nothing but a plan to bring in sewers by the back door," said Capt. A. R. Trail, president of the ratepayers association.

Al Beasley, View Royal's representative on the regional board, will attend Monday's meeting which will be held in the community hall at 8 p.m.

'URGENT'

"We don't usually meet during the summer months," Trail said, "but this is sufficiently urgent that the ratepayers executive felt we should have a meeting for those who are still in town so that we can let the regional board know how we feel."

ing with government plans for handling the Russians.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, accompanying the prime minister on the last leg of the trip, said Canada wants to control shipping and mining in all coastal waters on its continental shelf.

This was the government's aim but it would try to get the support of a majority of member countries in the United Nations before taking action to exert such control.

Another major theme in Trudeau's remaks was his concern with pollution problems.

He told the Prince Rupert meeting Canada is at a stage where it had to decide in some cases between rapid industrial development and a slower rate allowing more careful pollution control.

The U.S. had surged ahead economically since the war, "but now they have massive cities with great problems; New York is incredible."

Canadians could still choose what direction to take.

The prime minister visited Bella Coola before wrapping up his tour in Prince Rupert.

He told a civic meeting that the government plans to continue reducing the share of the budget allocated for defence.

He said research in Canada into chemical and biological warfare is purely a defensive matter.

About half of the 2,000 people in Bella Coola turned out to greet the prime minister.

Provincial Novice Boxla Tournaments

Two B.C. novice lacrosse championships will be on the line when a three-day tournament begins next Friday at Memorial Arena.

Victoria, Esquimalt, Coquitlam and either South Vancouver or North Burnaby will be vying for the "A" division title while Saanich, Kitimat, Richmond and Coquitlam battle for the "B" crown.

South Vancouver and North Burnaby are currently playing for the berth.

The "A" series will involve round-robin competition while the "B" squads will compete under a knockout format.

Action begins at 6:30 p.m. Friday and continues at 10 a.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Average Home Costs $42,805

TORONTO (CP) — William Dicker, a city real estate man, says there is no shortage of new houses in Metropolitan Toronto but most people can't afford to buy them.

Mr. Dicker said the average new house in the city costs $42,805, but the average family income only is $6,321.

"How can a family with that income buy a $42,805 house?" he said in an interview.

He said there now are about 1,700 new houses vacant in the city.

Maurice Lamond, another real estate man, predicted that housing prices will not decrease.

"Materials and labor costs are sure to increase," he said. "Nobody is going to accept lower wages."

THE WEATHER

Today's sunshine was nice, but the weatherman says it isn't going to last.

The weather office at Victoria International Airport expects mostly cloudy weather again overnight and Sunday. Temperatures will reach an overnight low of 50, and a high Sunday of 70.

Mideast Mission

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Envoy Gunnar V. Jarring began his newly reactivated Middle East peace mission by talking over procedural matters with Arab and Israeli delegates here today.

He had successive appointments in his office here with Ambassadors Abdullah El-Erian of Egypt, Muhammad H. El-Farra of Jordan and Yosef Tekoah of Israel.

Secretary-General U Thant told a reporter Jarring "is entering into intensive contacts and discussions" with the parties "on procedure—the site, the time and designation of their representatives" for new peace talks.

Jarring is Thant's special representative to the Middle East and Thant announced the reactivation of the envoy's long-suspended peace mission Friday after Egypt, Jordan and Israel all had accepted a United States peace proposal.

Egypt and Israel tossed up a hefty problem for him even before his peace mission was reactivated, it was apparent today.

Outgrow Bedwetting

When?

Half the children wetting the bed at age 5 will still be wetting at age 11. And bedwetting can go ON and ON. Walter C. Alvarez, M.D., Prof. Emeritus, Mayo Clinic, says: "What can the doctor prescribe . . . He can send the child to a urologist or psychiatrist, but rarely can they help . . . We physicians should know that 1 in 100 Navy recruits are quickly dismissed because of enuresis." Pacific International has ended bewetting for tens of thousands in the past two decades, and if not caused by organic defect or disease, we can end the problem for both children and adults. Submerged Cities Found

PALERMO (AP) — The Sicilian Superintendency for Antiquities says two ancient cities that sank following an earthquake 1,808 years ago have been found off Sicily with presumably "priceless treasures" preserved under sea mud.

Umberto Masocco, supervisor for Sicily's antiquities, said Friday divers spotted the ruins of Iocara on the bottom of the sea, near Palermo, and the ruins of Osteode in shallow waters off the island of Itaca.

Masocco said the divers reported they had seen a 3,000-foot stretch of walls with arches on the site of Iocara.

In Rome, the Superintendency for Antiquities of Etruria said an archeological campaign had discovered a Greek temple among the ruins of the Etruscan city of Gravisca, on the Tyrrenian north of Rome.

The superintendency said it was the first time a Greek building was found on Etruscan soil.

NERVE GAS

One Drop Can Kill 7 Million

By RAY DICK

WASHINGTON (CP)—An increasing furore over transportation and disposal of chemical and biological weapons in the United States illustrates a growing public fear of what is being brewed and stored in dark secrecy at military bases around the world.

It is a growing public awareness, some scientific officials say, of the horrifying power of such weapons—some of them so deadly they would make a nuclear bomb seem like a firecracker by comparison.

Introduced by Germany in 1915

What was introduced as poison gas by the Germans in 1915 has evolved to chemical and biological agents so powerful, some scientists say, that one drop can kill seven million people.

While their horrifying aspects have overwhelmed the logic of such weapons and have led to treaties banning their use, the existence of huge stockpiles, built up since the First World War, and methods proposed to dispose of them is leading to as much controversy as their origin or continued development.

The U.S. has huge stockpiles of CBW—the amount is a national secret—which are believed to contain millions of pounds of chemical agents, ranging from mild tear gas used in Vietnam, to poisonous GA, GB and V nerve agents that are odorless, tasteless and invisible and can kill in seconds.

Nixon Renounces Use of Weapons

Until last year, biological or germ weapons were part of this hidden arsenal. President Nixon renounced use of such weapons, ordering existing stocks destroyed and said the U.S. would confine its biological research to defensive measures such as immunization.

The chemical weapons remain, packed in bombs, rockets, artillery shells, grenades and land mines, ready for use, at military depots in the U.S., West Germany and Okinawa.

The U.S., however, is not the only country involved in CBW. Britain and Canada are involved, although on a relatively minor and strictly controlled scale, in such research. Military planners also believe half the members in the United Nations have the technological means of achieving CBW capability.

Canada, the U.S. and Britain, and most of the NATO countries involved in such research, exchange information to prevent duplication of effort.

Russia is believed to have a stockpile of chemical weapons five to eight times as large as the U.S., with supplies being available to the army at battalion level.

Public Protest Begins in Earnest

Public protest began in earnest in the U.S. in 1968 after the accidental killing of 5,000 sheep by nerve gas on a Utah ranch. The public pressure later forced the army to abandon its plan to ship obsolete mustard and nerve gas across the U.S. by train for disposal at sea.

The standard U.S. nerve gas is said to be GB, the type now being disposed of, which kills by inhibiting the enzyme which relaxes muscular contraction. Less than one drop will cause the victim to go into convulsions and die of asphyxiation in minutes.

Until Nixon ordered an end to biological weapons, the army was developing hardy strains of disease capable of resisting vaccines. These ranged from influenza and measles to such deadly germs as tularemia, smallpox, anthrax and plague.

Defence department requests for CBW research funds have been declining in recent years from a peak of $126 million in 1964. This year's request is for $78 million and the department has requested another $17.7 million this year for CBW spending—the major portion of which is for smoke, flame and incendiary bombs and tear gas, herbicides and defoliants for Vietnam.

U.S. officials say production of all nerve agents ceased in 1968. The military has enough stockpiled.

Britain Makes Mostly Antidotes

Britain, with a total chemical research budget of about $1.6 million a year, manufactures at its Nancekuke plant near Cornwall riot control gas for domestic use and for export, antidotes for nerve gas poisons and a small quantity of nerve gas needed for research.

The nerve gas manufactured is described as "very deadly poison" based on discoveries by Germans during the Second World War. Two types described by scientists are G—agents which kill when inhaled and V—agents which kill when absorbed through the skin.

Scientists say one planeload of such gases could depopulate all of Hiroshima, the first city destroyed by an atom bomb.

A working party of leading British scientists said in a July 31 defence ministry report that there are no objections to the existing safety arrangements for the transport of such nerve gases to the main British defence establishment at Porton, about 20 miles west of London.

Quantities involved are so small that no shipments have been made since 1968.

British defence sources say France is not involved in British CBW research, but that information is exchanged with Canada, the U.S., Australia and NATO countries, partly to avoid duplication of research.

Canada Destroyed Stock in 1946

Canada, with a total budgetary expenditure for defence research of $47 million for 1970-71 destroyed its stock of chemical weapons in 1946 and has never had any biological weapons.

A defence department report tabled in the Commons March 17 says research into CBW weapons, which started in 1941 with a joint Canadian British laboratory at Suffield, Alta., has been cut by about 75 per cent since 1947 to enable more research on nuclear defence.

Included in CBW research done at the defence research establishment in Ottawa is development of detection and monitoring devices, protective clothing, respirators, decontamination methods and other protective equipment.

At Suffield, which was taken over by the Canadian defence research board in 1947, psychological effects of various chemicals are studied and methods of treating such casualties.

Protective equipment developed at Ottawa is field-tested at Suffield. Realistic exercises in chemical defence are carried out using chemical simulants against troops.

Suffield also handles work on the detection and identification of biological diseases.

Handled in Experimental Quantities

The defence department report says all chemical and biological materials are handled in the laboratories under controlled conditions and in experimental quantities. Some of the chemicals are released on the large experimental range to test effects on grass, plants and the clothing of troops, but most of the work is done with chemical simulants.

None of the material is released from aircraft and no harmful biological material has been released since the early 1950s.

Canada has ratified the 1925 Geneva Protocal that bans germ and chemical weapons during war. The United Nations General Assembly last December called for strict observance of the protocol and it referred to the Geneva disarmament committee's two draft treaties dealing with biological and chemical weapons.

The two treaties were a draft submitted by Russian and other Communist countries proposing a treaty banning both chemical and biological weapons and a British draft that would ban biological weapons only.

It has been reported that the Geneva disarmament committee is attempting to modify the protocol to ban the production and stockpiling of such weapons.

Ruling Promised On Mail Lockouts

OTTAWA (CP)—The public service staff relations board promised Friday to rule as soon as possible on a union charge that shutdowns of local post offices by the government in response to strike actions elsewhere are illegal.

The urgency of the issue involved in the two-day hearing before the board was made obvious during the day by strike action and shutdowns involving more than 12,000 workers at 112 offices.

Maurice Wright, legal counsel for the Council of Postal Unions, told the board the shutdowns are an attempt by the government to prevent the postmen from legally striking. As such, he said, they are a breach of the Public Service Staff Relations Act which does not authorize the government to lock out its employees in a dispute.

J. A. Scollin, appearing for the federal treasury board, responded that the unions are saying in effect: "Not only do I want to exercise my right to strike, I want a red carpet to do it on."

The shutdowns are not an attempt to intimidate the postmen through the threat of lost wages, he said. They are instead managerial decisions that enable the post office to continue to serve the public, he argued.

The position was based on testimony presented earlier by Tom Bond, assistant deputy minister in charge of postal operations.

WANTED CHANGED

Mr. Bond said the shutdowns were initiated July 7, with the approval of Postmaster-General Eric Kierans, to discourage a specific pattern of rotating strike action whichwas delaying mail delivery by more than a week in some places.

Shortly after the rotating strikes began in June, he said, the unions began to alternate action in a central distributing centre one day with walkouts in tributary centres the next.

"We felt that if by taking the action we did we could get the postal unions to change this pattern we could at least keep a service going," Mr. Bond said.

His testimony abandoned the earlier argument of post office spokesmen that the shutdowns were ordered because strike action was leaving the postmen in the dependent centres with no work to do. In fact, he said, shutdowns were ordered even when mail was available for sorting and delivery.

Jacob Finkelman, chairman of the board, reserved any decision on the host of legal issues presented by the two lawyers. He promised Mr. Wright, however, that a ruling, complete with reasons, would be made as soon as possible.

Mr. Wright urged the board to order the government to desist from the shutdowns immediately and to present the matter in a report to Parliament if the government disobeys. "I think it's extremely important that the unions know where they stand," he said.

TORONTO HIT

The battle tactics of both sides were evident in Toronto Friday. Postal workers walked off the job at the city's central office and postal authorities responded by closing 21 sub-stations.

Strike action also hit in New Brunswick, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. In all, there were 7,160 men on strike at 60 centres and more than 5,000 men sent home without pay from another 52 offices.

Meanwhile, the president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, A. G. W. Sinclair, told Prime Minister Trudeau in a telegram that Parliament should be recalled to order an arbitrated settlement if no progress results from a bargaining session Monday.

"The present impasse cannot be permitted to continue into the busiest months of the year," he stated.

IWA to Serve Strike Notice

VANCOUVER (CP) — Contract negotiations for 4,000 members of the International Woodworkers of America in the British Columbia southern interior were adjourned Friday.

Wyman Trineer, spokesman for the IWA's interior negotiating committee, said strike notice will be served shortly on members of the Interior Lumber Manufacturers Association.

But, he said, talks are expected to resume toward the end of next week.

In Vernon, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Friday urged the IWA men "not to take any precipitous action" pending a report on the coastal forest dispute, which involves 28,000 IWA members.

Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of British Columbia Court of Appeals is expected to hand down his recommendations next week.

Mr. Trineer said: "We are prepared to bargain as long as we can see a reasonable hope of settlement. . . . We have been meeting all week and have recessed for a few days."

The interior IWA workers seek a pay increase of $1.14 an hour on a base rate of $2.98.

The Kelowna local Friday disputed Mr. Trineer's statement Thursday that more than 77 per cent of the men have voted to strike. It said at least one local, in Salmon Arm, hasn't completed its vote.

Mr. Trineer said: "There may be a couple of independent operations which haven't voted yet but the locals with the employers' association have completed their vote."

Taku Officers Face Possible Licence Loss

SEATTLE (AP) — Two officers of the Alaska ferry Taku face possible suspension or revocation of their licences as a result of the grounding of the vessel off Prince Rupert July 28, the Coast Guard said Friday.

The two are second mate Cornelius Norden and chief mate Thomas Aspinwall, a spokesman said.

He said Norden relieved Aspinwall as duty officer a few minutes before the vessel rammed Kinahan Island.

A Coast Guard hearing for the two is to open in Seattle Monday.

The Alaska state ferry system will more rigorously enforce regulations and may fire some crewmen of the Taku as a result of the grounding, the system's marine superintendent said Thursday.

Ninety-Day Wonder

WHAT APPEARED TO BE a most improbable occurrence only a short time ago has now been made a reality: active Israeli-Arab fighting has been halted for what is hoped will be a 90-day truce. The silence along the borders, particularly the Suez area and the Israeli-Jordanian frontier, is a distinct gain in itself. But the back-room reasoning which apparently led Egypt, Jordan and Israel to agree to the cease-fire proposed by the United States has still greater significance.

It is apparent that the three countries, so long embroiled in bombardments and border raids, welcome a halt in the shooting. It seems that each of them sees something to be gained by at least a temporary abandonment of the fighting and a resort to negotiation. In view of fiery pronouncements which have inflamed the Middle East in the past months and years, such a frame of mind represents a vast step forward to possible peace in that part of the globe.

There is no guarantee, of course, that the forthcoming verbal contacts will be successful — certainly it would be over-optimistic to expect any results at an early date. But while the talking continues, with or without a United Nations intermediary, the prospects of peace will be enhanced. Although all parties have declared conditions without which they will not agree to a settlement, they are at least indicating their belief that the conference table might produce terms which they can accept.

Several other factors have been suggested as having encouraged the latest development. For one thing, Egypt's military strength has increased greatly over the past few months, both on the ground and in the air, and the addition of hundreds of Soviet advisers to help Egyptian troops handle the vast array of guns, missiles and aircraft now available has produced a formidably armed neighbor for Israel. Another Six Day War might prove to be a quite different affair from that of 1967. Israel could hardly expect to escape heavy damage to its own territory.

The Russian presence, paradoxically, has had a damping effect on the Middle East situation insofar as Big Power intervention is concerned. For the danger of a head-on clash between the Soviet Union and the United States has mounted steadily with the continued deployment of arms throughout the area. The difficulty of maintaining the struggle on a local basis has greatly increased, and both Moscow and Washington have recognized the terrible potential of the situation. In brief, the Middle East war has become too dangerous.

On the Arab side, there is reason to suspect that President Nasser has joined other Arab leaders in becoming concerned about the increasing strength of the guerrilla forces which in many cases now operate beyond control of their national governments. At a time of publicly inflamed emotions, the guerrilla organizations might present a direct threat to an Arab government which appeared to be softening on the "eradicate Israel" theme. President Nasser is too determined a leader to let a situation arise in Egypt such as has plagued King Hussein and imperilled his throne.

Whether by good fortune or good planning, the United States proposal came at a propitious time. And even though it consists essentially of United Nations recommendations long ago rejected, the new approach promises a great deal that was not earlier to be hoped for.

Ignorance Without Bliss

ONE OF THE EDUCATIONAL benefits emerging from the recent United Nations' first Youth Assembly may not have been expected, but should serve a useful purpose not only for any repeat performances under UN auspices but for all youth group activity.

Some of the innocents among those attending, says one report, were shocked by the manner in which radicals, familiar at many international youth rallies, took over in various instances. In consequence, that element frequently gained far more notice than its numbers — or the numbers it represented — might have claimed legitimately.

The innocents of the first UN Youth Assembly are less innocent now. They are determined not to permit such a development in future. That decision will impose upon them the necessity of learning particular techniques in the operation of assemblies — an understanding of the manner in which experienced and trained people can use a gathering to serve its ends. Involved will be study of procedures, mastery of the rules governing meetings and a sensitive recognition of what is taking place when a gathering is being manipulated.

What the UN Youth Assembly promoters have learned should provide a lesson for others. Ignorance ceases to be bliss when failure to understand techniques leaves an assembly defenceless against the clever and informed operators.

Normal Men and Nerve Gas

IN HIS BOOK "THE POLITICS of Experience," British psychiatrist R. D. Laing writes sardonically that normal men have killed perhaps 100 millions of their fellow normal men in the last 50 years. He goes on to say that "in order to rationalize our industrial-military complex, we have to destroy our capacity both to see clearly any more what is in front of, and to imagine what is beyond, our noses."

So our civilization is not unduly disturbed when informed that the United Sates army wants to dump 15,540 nerve gas rockets into the Atlantic Ocean because it would be increasingly dangerous to wait any longer. United States army generals inform us that the gas would only temporarily contaminate one cubic mile of water. But it is difficult to have much confidence in the generals' dubious assurances when they reveal that, "We know of no way to detoxify these encased munitions safely on land."

In order to re-assure itself the United States army set off a 50-pound dynamite charge and fired armor piercing bullets at two of the steel and concrete encased gas capsules. Nothing happened. However, the gas capsules will be dropped in 16,000 feet of water off the Florida coast where the continuous pressure of tons of water can crush submarines like a grape. Eventually it will penetrate the capsules and free the gas.

Human beings with any sensitivity cannot help wondering what kind of sanity produces such products as nerve gas and normal generals.

Eyesore

The sea wall at Willows Beach which was damaged by last winter's storms, has now been repaired, and the procedure has been followed with interest by many residents of the neighborhood. We feel kindly toward the workmen involved in the project because their activities provide much in the way of spectator interest.

Consequently, I do not believe we should jump to conclusions, and assume that they really intend to leave an enormous eyesore behind them for any long period. Maybe they plan to come back sometime and make some sort of attempt to finish off their labors in a workmanlike manner.

The project for repairing the sea wall involved digging down to quite a depth to install footings for the reinforcements of the wall. This resulted in a high mound of sand and rock and driftwood for a distance of about 100 feet, which was returned to the excavation at the completion of the job. To say that the site was not left in a finished and workmanlike manner would be the understatement of the year.

While on the subject of beach improvement, why not get rid of most of the logs which clutter up Willows Beach from one end to the other? There would be no problem in burning them completely over a period of time.—Gezunkus.

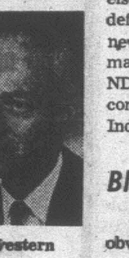
After the Brave NDP Words, Cold Feet



Western

THE NDP, in these trying summer days, is plainly suffering from an attack of nostalgia, an irrational desire to go back to the old CCF home and the ancient certainties of the Regina manifesto. It is characteristic of nostalgia that it is seldom very purposeful. Practically everyone has had a neighbor who talked wistfully of the old country but who never went back except perhaps for the occasional visit. The NDP, to judge from its reaction to the report of Ian Wahn's external affairs committee, is in this position.

According to a commentary published last week, the party is happy to support the report but unhappy over its tone of "misplaced complacency." The puzzling aspect of the document is that the NDP draws up fierce indictments but shrinks from certain obvious conclusions and courses of action. Is it in earnest or is it a paper tiger?

Deficient

The committee report is deficient in the New Democratic view because it fails to go down the line with NDP thinkers on foreign policy. It fails, for example, to recommend Canadian advocacy of the explusion from NATO of dictatorial and colonial regimes in Greece and Portugal.

Anyone can grasp the argument, which is that these regimes deny the fundamental human rights that NATO, according to its treaty, was created to preserve. They also, it is alleged, "pursue policies in defiance of . . . the charter of the United Nations."

However, there is more to this than immediately meets the eye, for as it turns out, "American leadership . . . bolsters these regimes. Also, as we read elsewhere, the United States pursues defence policies which threaten to add new and irreversible momentum to the mad arms race." What is more, the NDP calls for open and vigorous condemnation of the American war in Indochina.

Blackening U.S.

On this showing, the United States is obviously a greater malefactor than the backward governments in Athens and Lisbon. Why not boot the Americans out of NATO and indeed out of the United Nations? Why, after the brave words, the cold feet?

The NDP is also censorious because the Canadian government, although negotiating for recognition of Communist China, has failed to vote for its admission to the United Nations. There are practical arguments in favor of admission. If the case is to be made on moral grounds, however, Chinese credentials are peculiar, whether the test be respect for fundamental human rights or past respect for the United Nations.

NDP policy as regards China and the United States appears to suffer from advanced schizophrenia. One can understand the practical difficulty here. It is not easy to expel the United States, because the Americans might be stubborn about it and they do have a veto. But there ought not to be the same barrier to action in other fields explored by NDP policy makers.

The party is for termination of the defence production-sharing agreements. It recognizes in the spread of multinational corporations a new form of economic imperialism which threatens the development and independence of "smaller nations and their cultures." It finds that some foreign-owned industries like oil and gas are greatly overcapitalized. It rejects vigorously the philosophy that continentalism has important advantages for Canada.

It comes as no surprise that the NDP has plans to cure all this. But while we have always, according to NDP spokesmen, been on the verge of an NDP government, its advent has been unaccountably delayed and there is at least a strong probability of further postponements.

What could the NDP do in these circumstances? It has influential allies among the trade union leaders. Why does if not, through them, urge workers to turn their backs on pay cheques from companies representing economic imperialism — especially when so many are controlled by firms in the morally imperfect American society? On the other hand, why does it fail to admonish the UAW — in Oshawa, Windsor and other centres — which apparently is trying to cash in on continentalism, as represented by the automobile agreement, by demands for large wage increases?

Old CCF Objective

The CCF back in the good old days set out to eradicate capitalism. The NDP now proposes to do the same thing on a wider scale (No nonsense about the "commanding heights") but to do it under cover. Its new plan is to buy back Canada by a large expansion of public ownership particularly in new developments, technologically advanced industries and investment in the disadvantaged areas of Canada. It is for 75 per cent control, although a bit reluctantly, since "it is well known that owner-ship of ten per cent or 20 per cent can and does often mean effective control if the shares are scattered". What the government would not own it would direct; for example, the financial institutions, and other corporations "would be required to invest" in the Canada Development Corporation, which would be an instrument of government planning and development.

This is fairly formidable, if it is to be taken seriously. But if it is, why stop at 75 per cent? If the NDP in 1970 is overwhelmed with yearnings for the old Regina home; if it is appalled because other parties accept a social system in large measure controlled and directed by the immense power of large national and multi-national corporation, why not go back to the manifesto and its stirring call for the eradication of capitalism?

Some Difficulties

One can see minor difficulties: Mr. Schreyer, with his Swedish preferences, backward folk in the West and North who are seeking more of the resource industries that the NDP condemns. But every party has its troubles; and as compensation for a few write-offs, the NDP would have a pure conscience, knowing that it was clearing itself of any complicity in policies involving the burdens and ignominy of "satellite dependency."

Why stop with nostalgia? There must be a beginning. Apart from the general reaffirmation of socialism, the NDP could make a decided impression now by emphasizing the ignominy of the pay cheques accepted from firms with corporate parents in the United States.

Letting Thieu and Ky Decide the Peace Issue

By Frank Mankiewicz and Tom Braden from Washington

IT now appears that the Americans who will die in Indochina as the war goes on (to say nothing of the South Vietnamese, the Laotians and the Cambodians) will be dying not to preserve the Thieu-Ky regime in power but only to preserve President Thieu and Vice-President Ky personally in power. There is no other explanation for the series of events this week, which began with Hanoi making it explicit and public that peace could be negotiated with a coalition government, which could include elements of the present Saigon government, excluding only Thieu and Ky.

That opening was ignored by the United States and at his press conference Thursday night last week the President went even further than he has in the past to close up this possibility of a negotiated peace. We oppose a coalition government, said the President, "whether negotiated or imposed."

Ambassador David Bruce might just as well come home. He has, the President said in effect, all the flexibility President Thieu will give him, which is none.

Hand-Picking

In interviews with U.S. reporters a week ago, Thieu made it abundantly clear that the only government he will accept is one which is the result of an election at which he selects the candidates and the voters. Since his closest opponent in 1967 is still in jail as a result of his campaign, and since Thieu said clearly that those in jail may not run, it is doubtful if he will have any opponents.

The President said he thought a negotiated peace was more likely since the "success" of the Cambodian invasion, but he cannot have been serious. Hanoi had already said that it would no longer insist on an NFL "solution" for the South but only a coalition which could include parts of the present Saigon regime.

Mr. Nixon slammed that door in ruling out any coalition that does not come from an election rigged by Thieu, and we are left where we were — the casualties mount and the economy declines, all to keep in office a pair of mandarins who fought against their own country's independence.

As for the "success" of Cambodia, only the mechanics of a presidential press conference — where cross-examination, or even meaningful questioning, is forbidden — prevent that from exposure. The Communists now have their way in most of that now-unhappy country, and the Cambodian government has had to order the South Vietnamese army back of the Mekong River because of its looting and pillaging in Cambodia when it went to the "aid" of the government.

And the Thais, with one nervous eye on the United States Senate and the other on the General Accounting Office, have delayed their triumphant entry into Cambodia until the price in U.S. dollars can be satisfactorily negotiated. The patriots of Bangkok—facing a salary cut — have begun to talk of staying out of Cambodia so as not to offend the Chinese. Thus, the Nixon doctrine.

Administration Retreat

The retreat by the Administration on a coalition is hard to understand. Before Cambodia, and pointedly thereafter, the President was careful to say that a settlement in Vietnam could take into account "existing political realities."

Dr. Henry Kissinger's people at the White House carefully alerted the press to the significance of the language, which was hardly necessary; in a war which has been fought for political objectives from the beginning by everyone but the United States, the message was clear enough.

"The existing political realities" are that the Viet Cong and the NLF control certain portions of the South Vietnamese countryside — how much is debatable. The inability of Thieu to collect taxes outside the cities is proof enough of this. A cease-fire, coupled with local arrangements reflected in Saigon, could end it all. Thieu and Ky, even though they lack the 20 years necessary for U.S. Civil Service retirement, could be taken care of.

But President Thieu is now our chief negotiator, in Paris and everywhere else, and peace seems far away indeed.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

The year has almost reached harvest time.

Along the roads one can notice leaf colors changing. The Indian plum is now turning a pale yellow. This was the first to show green in the spring. It is a rather strange plant for the leaves seem to undergo many changes in shape and color throughout the growing season.

The wild roses are now brown and dusty looking, with the exception of the odd plant, and some are putting forth a few new leaves that soon wither and fade away.

The cascara seeds are purple and many birds seek them.

There are several places where you can see the fruit of the wild damson turning to its dull black color. This fruit is edible — if you can stand the very sharp, sour taste. The Indians used it as a part of their diet.

Look at the crabapple trees. Here the tiny fruit is becoming a yellowish-red, although this year it is not very plentiful.

Even the maple leaves are drooping. They have fulfilled their task for the year. The new buds are formed and next year's flowers stored so that they will bloom ahead of the leaves.

Look at the red alders. You can spot the newly formed catkins which will be next year's male flowers. On some trees the tiny green cone of the female flower can also be seen.

On the hazel shrubs you will again find the catkins forming, but the tiny scarlet female flower will not appear until early next spring.

The cones on the Douglas fir soon will be "ripe" and even now the little squirrels are beginning to harvest them. It is very interesting to walk a trail and read the signs of the squirrels activities, and see where they have eaten the seed and cast aside the scales. They have not yet started on the hazel nuts for they are not fully developed. How do they know?

Even our garry oak leaves are fast changing. They now have a brown ridge around the leaf. There are very few acorns this year.

Roadsides are brightly colored by the white, dainty blossoms of Queen Ann's lace and the yellow of fall dandelions. Here and there you may find the rusty brown seed-spike of curly dock.

Where the ditches have any moisture left in them you will find the reddish, rounded many-flowered head of one of the knot-weeds. Growing close by, perhaps, you will find some cattails. They too are hardening off and the fluffy seed will soon blow to the winds.

Even in the insect world there is vast change taking place. The mosquito has almost vanished as has the damselfly and the antlion. The red ants are beginning to "thatch" their nests.

This year there have been very few wasps and black hornets. Last year they were abundant. Did the late frost kill off the queens as they emerged from their winter's hibernation or is it one of the great cycles of life to which all things are subject?

The little ponds are all dried up and one wonders about the life that was there in the spring and early summer. There is no doubt that survivors will appear again in the fullness of time. And so life will still continue as it has for centuries.

What Can Be Done To Revive Parliament?

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — It's hardly the season for statistics, so we can't imagine a rush of interest in a release last week from the office of House leader Donald Macdonald.

It tells us that last season the committees of the House met 797 times; heard 1,147 witnesses; reported 50 bills; 21 reports on estimates and another 40 on general subject matters.

And what does all this industry mean? This equivalent of what would have taken over 530 hours of Commons time?

According to Mr. Macdonald it "... appears to indicate not only that the procedural reforms of 1968-69 have made it possible for Parliament to examine government proposals more thoroughly, but the reforms have also substantially increased Parliament's legislative output."

The government's pleasure is not shared by the Opposition, nor by those of us who follow Parliament. It's time to be critical when a change brings such back-slapping by the House leader.

The advantages which the government finds are clear. shifting so much out of the House, depriving the Opposition of the right to play crisis with estimates (i.e., the old game of talking estimates in the House until the government is desperate) has defused the Opposition. A sad senior official of the House told me that this was the dullest House session in his long memory.

The second advantage of the government is that the new committee setup gives its backbenchers much to do — a kind of busy-busy-busy challenge to them. Remember that in numbers they dominate all committees. Despite Mr. Macdonald's denials of explicit discipline, it was clear throughout the session that all but a few of the Liberal MPs on the committees were defensively-minded.

The third advantage for the government is less tangible, but very useful. The majesty of position and the attention given the prime minister and the other ministers by the media has been heightened by the dullness of Parliament, the limpid debates and poor attendance of the ministers.

This bonus is sweetened by the splintering of focus in coverage by the profusion of committees and their meetings. Dozens of important witnesses and associations parade in and out of committee hearings with few reporters observing.

With reason, MPs complain, even government MPs, that they can spend countless hours on slogging cross-examination and get little, if any, attention in the press or on TV.

It's like football where the wiseguys tell you to watch the pulling guard or the middle line-backer. Few fans really do. All their attention is on the quarterback or the men running with the ball. In the present dispensation of Parliament you can guess who the quarterback and the runners are.

TV news is especially vulnerable to the dispersal of Parliament. A reporter knows his editor wants something from 50 seconds to 90 seconds in length. How can he produce anything intelligible in such a snippet from a day with a House committee?

Few observers want a return to the days when Parliament could be tied up by Opposition exploitation of the procedural loopholes to stall and create artificial crises. And even fewer would condemn the expansion of the committees' role, root and branch. What we need are some compensations, both to bring some vitality back in the House and to make committee work more significant.

John Diefenbaker told a few of us the other day the best means of resuscitating the House.

Simply put: The Prime Minister should take it more seriously and he and his ministers should spend more time in it. Mr. Diefenbaker snickers at the excuse that the prime minister is so busy.

The fact is, he says, Mr. Trudeau dislikes the place and the concept of Parliament. It is much too easy to let the Prime Minister away with all the Liberal garbage about participatory democracy.

Why should students in New Zealand or even wheat farmers in Regina have an entitlement to his time which he won't give Parliament? If he can't talk, he doesn't want to listen.

To improve the committees, the government must deliberately ease the check-reins of party discipline on its own supporters. And this concession should be complemented by another which, at first sight, may appear too dangerous.

This is the absolute guarantee that every committee report will be handled by the House, and any considerable group of members should be able to launch a debate on any such report. This would guarantee the importance of a committee's recommendations.

At present, the best work often dies after the report, For example, the government knocked back any acceptance or real debate on the toughest committee report of last session — the public accounts report on the Bonaventure.

The external affairs committee is bringing out a major report on American investment. It will fade into obscurity like the same committee's previous report on Canada in NATO.

These are the dog days in Ottawa, only the big cabinet meetings rouse any attention. It's still a good time for everyone, particularly the Opposition, to think of means to revive Parliament.

The Future Lies Ahead . . . And It Looks Glum

By DAVID CRANE

There is a distinct and disturbing feeling in a growing number of quarters that the idea of stability has been lost in the process of social and technological change.

Instead, society is becoming more complex, more disruptive, more prone to incomprehensible changes. This prospect is underlined in a scenario of Canada in the mid-Nineteen Seventies outlined in a staff document of the Science Council of Canada. In it, Dr. R. W. Jackson has put together a list of 24 possible areas of concern for Canadians that will require urgent attention in the near future.

Unrest in U.S.

The problems of inflation will not have been fundamentally cured by the methods of 1969 to 1971, Dr. Jackson claims. By the mid-Nineteen Seventies there may have been a recession, brought on in part by drastic racial unrest in the United States, from which recovery will be just beginning.

"The conventional mechanisms for economic policy control will be subject to searching criticisms." He adds that Canada may look to Japan, Sweden or the Netherlands for new economic policy approaches.

At the same time, "Canada may increasingly be involved in crisis struggles with foreign ownership" as the country attempts to assert new industrial policies, begins to assert sovereignty over its resources, make a last-ditch resistance to commercial union with the United States or shows leadership by bringing these issues to an international court.

Concern with the environment, Dr. Jackson emphasizes, will continue at an urgent level. Problems of optimum population levels and distribution and of chemical, thermal, acoustic and esthetic pollution "will continually appear as crises."

He predicts growing concern that there will not be enough resources for the world to advance to the current resource-use level of the United States, leading to intensive studies of recycling concepts and greater efforts to regulate the use of resources.

Canadian attempts to conserve resources will conflict with rising demands from the United States, Japan and Europe and, unless it has capitulated earlier, Canadian opposition to a continental resources policy will be at a peak.

Foreign Control

The discovery of oil off the Maritimes will bring into conflict industrial activity, fisheries and environmental concerns, and issues of foreign control which, Dr. Jackson suggests, will not have been resolved by 1975.

He predicts that urban pollution from automobiles will be more serious than ever with Canadians still debating private versus public transportation.

Society itself will be undergoing perplexing and frightening changes.

The social effects of information and computer systems will become more obvious, leading people to exhibit symptoms of a saturation psychosis. "Information pollution will be recognized as a problem," Dr. Jackson says.

"The human problems raised by computerized billing accounting and invasion of privacy by credit-checking systems may become strident."

Guerrilla War

His scenario paints a disturbing picture of the United States with continued internal dissension over military involvements, racial unrest, urban breakdown and poverty. "A civil war, of guerrilla type, may be raging in the United States, with repercussions on her neighbors," he warns, with Canada facing economic repercussions.

Dr. Jackson sees questions of cultural self-determination becoming prevalent around the world and suggests that the issue of separatism in Quebec may intensify by the mid-Nineteen Seventies as Quebec develops more institutional strengths of its own.

In his long list, Dr. Jackson also foresees that ethical problems in medicine and biology will be a strong public concern, because of the development of transplant techniques, life-support mechanisms, drug side-effects and genetic engineering. Ethics, in fact, is likely to become more of a concern throughout the world of science and technology.

The scenario of future problems that conceivably will rise for Canadian political leaders and their policy advisers within government is one that can raise only serious doubts about their ability to deal with them.

Le Dain Adds Confusion To Our Muddled Morality

By ROBERT FULFORD
Saturday Night

"It's okay — well, it's almost okay — to drink Scotch whisky. Go ahead and enjoy yourself. But if I catch the person who sold you the Scotch I'll send the police after him and throw him in jail."

Any minister of the government who said something like this to the citizens would be greeted by bursts of derisive laughter. The logic of the thing is crazy. If it's nearly okay to drink Scotch, why isn't it nearly okay to sell it to somebody for drinking purposes?

Yet this is roughly the position of the government of Canada on marijuana, and that position was more or less institutionalized by the interim report of the Le Dain commission on drugs.

During the last year the government has advised attorneys-general to be lenient towards marijuana users but prosecute traffickers. The Le Dain commission recommended that this system be extended.

It suggested that possession of marijuana (and other psychotropic drugs) be made into a kind of semi-crime, like illegal parking. People caught possessing pot would be fined $100; if unable to pay they still would not be sent to jail. In effect possession would no longer be regarded as criminal.

The 215,000 pot smokers in Canada (Le Dain's estimate) could go on smoking without worrying seriously about the sudden arrival of the police at the door. But those who sold them their pot could, Le Dain suggested, go to the reformatory for up to two years (instead of life, as the law now stands).

This suggests the creation of a new caste of non-people, resembling in some ways the usurers of the Middle Ages; people society relies on but shuns and persecutes. And in fact, even before the Le Dain report appeared, I sensed this mood emerging in the muddled morality of Canadian society.

Increasingly, over the last three years, the pot-smoker has come to be seen with sympathy, at least by the media and certain members of the educated middle class.

Even people who don't smoke pot tend to realize that people who do are sometimes quite intelligent and otherwise acceptable members of society. But those who sell it! Criminals, obviously.

Of course the fact is that in practice the two groups blur into one. Perhaps half the young people who smoke pot regularly also sell it occasionally. In the youth culture itself no moral distinction is made.

But everyone who has spent more than a few minutes thinking about drugs in recent years must sympathize with the commissioners who find themselves in this unfortunate position.

Every royal commission's real task is to discover and articulate a consensus, and on this issue there is no consensus and no hope of one in the near future.

Pot-smokers think anti-pot people are old, bigoted, fascist and hopelessly out of it. Anti-pot people think pot is evil and those who smoke are bad or misguided.

LE DAIN

In each case the opinion is based on what the opinion-holder believes to be unassailable evidence and is buttressed by the weight of a whole culture.

What the Le Dain commission's confusion makes obvious is that the drug debate will not be resolved without a certain harm to the body politic. Careers will probably be damaged, political parties will be divided, the media will go through agonies. It may be painful.

But of course this pain will be nothing compared to the pain of imprisonment inflicted already on hundreds of young people by an evil, thoughtless and repressive law.

What Shy Giants Don't Say

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Sun

There is no question that the able and respected Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz is perfectly capable of ironing out the dispute in the forestry industry by the end of the hearings now taking place in the soothing stillness of Totem Park out at UBC.

Still, one can't resist a comment on one aspect of the propaganda warfare being carried out on both sides.

The forest companies, in crying blue ruin, cite dramatically their earnings for the first six months of 1970 to show how bad things are.

MacMillan Bloedel reports profits are down 56 per cent in the first half. Crown Zellerbach is down 52 per cent. Weldwood had a drop of 98 per cent for the first half and B.C. Forest Products is down 73 per cent.

Yes, but down from what? What the shy giants neglect to point out is that they are drawing their comparisons with one of their greatest profit years in history — 1969.

Certainly things are slow in the timber trade this year. But just as certainly they were magnificently good one year ago.

Where did all that money they made last year go? It fell through a hole in the floor?

In the first half of 1969, MacMillan Bloedel's profits were up 33 per cent from 1968. B.C. Forest Products in the first half of last year was up 44 per cent in profits. By the end of the year the $9 million profit set a company record.

Weldwood in the first half of 1969 had the highest sales and earnings in the company's history. Total 1969 earnings were close to 1968, which were three times higher than any previous year.

Crown Zellerbach's net income for the first half of 1968 was $4.9 million; for the same period of 1969, $8.1 million.

The forest industry's sleight-of-hand with statistics undoubtedly doesn't fool the experts who dig into the entrails (and the IWA is capable of trying to manipulate figures too).

But if the industry indeed wishes to convince the public of its case it could be a bit more honest in admitting that a fall from a peak is not the same as a fall from ground level. Your altitude is still pretty good.

Tringualism—How We Need It

By ART STOTT

It is difficult for some of us to determine, from news reports, whether the bi-and-bi commission is moving into the sweet by-and-by, or whether it's just saying bye-bye. We can't tell whether it's laying down the lines for the future or just expiring after a prolonged and high-spending life.

Whatever it's doing, it seems to me time to launch my campaign for tringualism. Tringualism is a contraction for tri-lingualism, which, in this case, does not mean fluency in three languages.

It does, however, involve a sort of Canadian lingua franca. Its intent is to establish a third force in the languages of the country capable of translating to French-speaking Canadians the French learned recently by English-speaking Canadians who strike a bilingual pose — and vice versa. The need for such a service became apparent to me years ago when I attended at the Empress Hotel a meeting of nationally ranked educators.

As a feature of its wind-up dinner, the committee in charge had arranged for a light-hearted address by a distinguished French-Canadian educator. His opening was conventional, a salutation to the head table. Then he turned to the bulk of dinner guests and said:

"Mesdames, messieurs, je suis bien heureux de vous voir ici ce soir." He paused, and I said to myself, "Oh boy, why didn't I pay more attention to what Miss Burridge tried to teach me in high school and what Madame Sanderson-Morgin later attempted to drive through my thick skull.

My concern was misplaced. The speaker's face lit up with a smile of cheerfulness as he continued: "Doughnut warry, that is the last t'ing I am going to say in Franch tonight." After that he became totally incomprehensible in what he took to be English. All we needed was a translator.

Of course the eminent gentleman spoke English better than I speak French, and no doubt his reading understanding of either tongue was excellent. Somehow, though, he did not come across orally.

This capacity for unintelligibility — a significant gift enjoyed by some politicians in any language — has always impressed me, though not always favorably. And, indeed, I have indulged in it myself, without intent.

After trudging through long hours over long miles of pavement and store aisles on a shopping (as differentiated from buying) junket in Paris, I sat with my wife one afternoon at a sidewalk cafe, enjoying a speedily acquired taste for pinard. It was relatively cheap and highly anaesthetic. I forgot how my feet ached. The lady and I had found Paris delightful and it seemed only right to me to help retire the French national debt, substantial at that time, by investment in vin ordinaire. And a very delightful way, that, to help a country in financial straits.

As the wine performed its magic, it occurred to me that the ladies at the adjacent table, relatively staid ladies who looked as if they would appreciate an interchange of culture, would like to hear about the great French-speaking figure of Canada. So I told them about Maurice Richard. They hadn't invited the discourse and they appeared to know very little about " le hockey." They seemed, also, to know very little about my style of French. Naturally I reverted to pantomime.

Rising from my chair, I stick-handled my way between two other tables, to the astonishment of guests seated there, swung around and smiled at the two ladies with whom I was trying to establish communication. They smiled back, apprehensively, picked up their bags and left hurriedly.

The lady at my table said: "I think we'd better go now. They're probably looking for a gendarme."

The incident is trivial, the gaucherie of a country boy trying to be urbane and facilitate cultural exchange. But it does support my belief in tringualism. Had there been a tringualist with me, familiar with what I was trying to say, he could at least have bought my unwilling audience of two a pinard and the cause of Franco-Canadian amity would have been served magnificently.

Obviously we in Canada must learn to understand the nuances of another tongue, just as the manipulators of the other tongue should understand our Anglo-Saxon straitforwardness — like stick-handling without a stick between tables in a Paris sidewalk cafe.

The point was brought home emphatically to us a year or two ago when our friends in Quebec were explaining the difference between two nations, two people, two cultures, or two tongues. After a couple of months of explanations it was difficult to tell who was confused, the explainers or the explained to.

The solution, of course, is tringualism — or maybe three pinards, which are more easily absorbed.

Judge, Three Others Killed In Shootout After Court Case

By TIM REITERMAN

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — A judge in his black robe of office and three men who marched him and four other hostages at gunpoint from his courtroom were killed Friday in a gun battle outside the Hall of Justice.

Two others were seriously wounded—a convict and a hostage assistant district attorney. Three women jurors, also taken hostage, suffered lesser injuries.

The drama unfolded during a mid-morning trial session in the Marin County Hall of Justice, a blue-domed structure designed by architect Frank Lloyd Wright, 10 miles north of San Francisco.

Witnesses said an intruder in the courtroom brandished an automatic carbine and satchel of pistols, passing them around to three San Quentin prisoners.

The gun battle erupted when they tried to flee in a panel truck. Sheriff's Inspector Ronald Retana said it was unclear whether the first shots came from police or the escapees.

Killed were Judge Harold J. Haley, 65; convicts James D. McClain, 37, and William Arthur Christmas, 27; and the intruder, identified tentatively by prison officials as Jonathan P. Jackson, 17.

SHOT IN BACK

Deputy District Attorney Gary Thomas was shot in the spine and convict Ruchell Magee, 31, was shot in the chest. Both were in hospital, Thomas in serious condition and Magee in fair condition.

One woman juror, Maria Graham, 45, was wounded in the arm.

Two other jurors, Joyce Rodoni and Doris Wittner, were treated for minor injuries and released.

McCalin, serving five years to life for burglary in Solano County, was on trial for the 1969 stabbing of a San Quentin prison guard.

Magee and Christmas were in court as convict witnesses in the five-day-old proceedings, when the intruder whipped out a pistol and shouted: "This is it! Everybody line up!"

McClain, with a pistol at the judge's head, forced deputies to remove shackles from himself and Magee, who was on the witness stand.

MUZZLE TO CHIN

After a bailiff slipped out of the room to warn nearby sheriff's deputies, McClain telephoned the sheriff's office and yelled: "Call off your dog, pigs, or we'll kill everyone in the room!"

They taped a short shotgun around Judge Haley's neck with the muzzle tucked under his chin, then headed for an elevator. They waved highway flares which they said were sticks of dynamite.

Encountering news photographer Jim Kean in the hallway, one shouted: "You take all the pictures you want! We are the revolutionaries."

Kean, a photographer for the San Rafael Independent-Journal, snapped off a series of dramatic photos without being molested.

"They may have wanted to make some announcement because they were yelling to me: 'We want the Soledad Brothers freed by 12 o'clock,'" he related.

The so-called Soledad Brothers are three black convicts awaiting trial on charges of murdering a white guard at Soledad prison last January. The slaying came three days after another white guard shot three black prisoners to death during a racial brawl in a prison exercise yard.

The intruder and three convicts involved Friday all were Negroes.

On the ground level, two shotgun-wielding deputies and Sheriff's Lieut. Thomas Lightfoot met the group.

Lightfoot said McClain held the gun at Haley's head and cried: "Drop it or we'll blow his head off!"

When Lightfoot failed to comply, one gunman fired three shots over his head as the men fled with their hostages, he said.

They hurried to a van 300 yards away, then began to drive under the building's archway as 100 police converged on the scene, Lightfoot said.

Assistant Coroner Eugene R. Fontaine said he saw a San Quentin officer holding a .30-30 rifle run in front of the van and yell: "Halt!"

The shooting then began, but it was unclear who fired the first shot, he said.

Fontaine said he heard a shotgun blast within the truck as the shooting began. He said the judge's wounds indicated this was the shot that killed him.

Cambodians Halt Red Offensive

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Cambodian forces backed by fighter-bombers fought their way into full control of the heavily-damaged crossroads town of Skoun as a one-week Communist offensive on the northern front seemed to be running out of steam, the Cambodian high command reported today.

A military spokesman said Cambodians captured the town Friday, ending a seven-day occupation by the Communist troops.

Skoun, a district headquarters 40 miles northeast of Phnom Penh, was considered the most critical point for the government during the broad northern offensive that started Aug. 1.

The spokesman said the Cambodians lost 10 men killed in recapturing the town, and a commander at the scene told Cambodian journalists he believes about 500 Communist troops were killed during the week of fighting.

Air strikes covering the Cambodian counter-attack came from the United States and South Vietnamese air forces as well as Cambodia's tiny force of T-28 fighter-bombers.

The spokesman also reported a fresh attack by Communist troops against the outer defences of Phnom Penh during the night on a village 115 miles north of the capital.

Five Cambodian troops were wounded during the action.

The fighting early today involved a Communist unit attempting to infiltrate Phnom Penh itself, the spokesman said. But pressure on the capital now is quite low compared with late May and June when a major attack on the capital by a large force seemed imminent, he said.

A Radio Phnom Penh broadcast monitored in Saigon said Premier Lon Nol probably will proclaim Cambodia a republic in two months. Lon Nol, who overthrew Prince Norodom Sihanouk March 18, has said several times in the past he intends to proclaim a republican government, but he has never fixed the date.

Italy Hears Colombo Plan

ROME (Reuters) — Emilio Colombo, new premier of Italy, prepared today to outline his platform to his cabinet before presenting it to both houses of parliament.

Colombo, who formed a four-party coalition government earlier this week, also planned to swear in 58 undersecretaries today in the final step before seeking approval of parliament for his government.

'I Was Barely Breathing . . . But I Kept Snapping'

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Two newspaper photographers were in the midst of the bid for freedom by San Quentin convicts that left four men, one of them a judge, dead after a shootout with police Friday.

"I was barely breathing. . . but I kept snapping," photographer Jim Kean said after taking a spectacular series of pictures of an escape attempt in which a friend, Judge Harold J. Haley, was killed and three gunmen died in a shootout in the parking lot of the Marin County Hall of Justice.

"They told me they were revolutionaries and I could take all the pictures I wanted," Kean said. They led the judge past him in the hall.

Kean, 47, long-time photographer for the San Rafael Independent-Journal, said he sped to the courthouse after hearing on the police frequency radio in his car that there was some trouble.

"On a hunch, I ran to the court benches," he said. "I went around a corner and there was this guy with two guns.

"Then I saw another man with his arm around the neck of a woman.

"Another down the hall with a carbine was covering several policemen and disarming them."

Kean said he had known the slain judge since childhood. Both grew up in San Rafael and their mothers were long-time friends.

Another Independent-Journal photographer, Roger Bockrath, said he was downstairs in a parking lot when the judge was taken to a van.

He said he was taking pictures from behind a highway patrol car as one of the convicts had a gun against the judge's neck.

YOUTH CHARGED IN SHOOTINGS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A youth who told police he came here from Calgary several months ago was charged Friday with wounding two passersby Thursday night with a rifle from the roof of a West End apartment building.

Leslie John Betts, 20, charged with possession of a dangerous weapon and two counts of assault causing bodily harm was to appear in provincial court today.

Karl Pedersen, 76, of Copenhagen, and Aage Lauritzen, 44, of suburban Richmond, Mr. Pedersen's son-in-law, were wounded.

Senator Wins Fourth Bid

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Senator Albert Gore, an anti-Vietnam liberal, won the Democratic Party's nomination Thursday night to run for a fourth term in the U.S. Senate from Tennessee.

Gore, whose anti-war stand and votes against the nominations of G. Harrold Carswell and Clement Haynsworth to the U.S. Supreme Court became issues in the primary battle, beat down a challenge by former television reporter Hudley Crockett.

Defence Counsel Urges Kasabian Freed Now

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Linda Kasabian, who has told her story of the Sharon Tate murders after being promised immunity from prosecution, may walk out of jail a free woman Monday when that immunity is set to be formalized.

Although the pig-tailed young mother of two is still under cross-examination in the murder trial of Charles M. Manson and three women followers, the defence wants her immunity granted Monday. They hope it will encourage her to change her story.

"Linda Kasabian took the witness stand in a dual role," defence lawyer Paul Fitzgerald said after court adjourned Friday. "She was both a witness and a defendant and she knew that anything she said could incriminate her."

He said that the defence believes that Mrs. Kasabian, the state's chief witness, tailored her testimony to please prosecutors who have promised her immunity.

"Once she's given immunity, she might recant," said Fitzgerald, lawyer for Patricia Krenwinkel, 22.

HEARING SET

A hearing on the immunity grant was set at defence request for Monday morning when the trial resumes.

Once immune, she could leave the jail where she has been held since her arrest last December on the same charges as those facing the other defendants. Prosecutors said she could remain in jail for a time if she chose to do so for her safety.

The prosecution has said it will try to provide protection for Mrs. Kasabian, 21, once a member of Manson's nomadic hippie-style "family." Her lawyers have reported threats on the woman's life. During one court session last week, one said the shaggy-haired Manson told her: "You really blew it, Linda. You better say your prayers."

In court Friday, one of her lawyers, Gary Fleischman said he saw Manson look at the witness and whisk his finger across his throat, in a motion to indicate a throat being slit. Mrs. Kasabian has testified, often tearfully, that Manson ordered the knife and gunshot slayings of Miss Tate and six others last Aug. 9 and 10. She said she saw two victims killed and saw another fleeing from Miss Krenwinkel as she gave chase with an upraised knife.

The request for immediate immunity came after emotional testimony in which Mrs. Kasabian sobbed on the witness stand and cried out, "Oh God!" when shown one of several pictures of bloody bodies at the scene of last summer's multiple slayings.

SPEAKS TO FOUR

With tears streaming down her face, she turned to Manson and the girl co-defedant adns wept, "How could you do that?"

Manson's lawyer, Irving Kanarek, asked Mrs. Kasabian why she was crying.

"I can't believe they could do that," she replied.

"You said you were in a state of shock at the time. How do you know you didn't do it?"

"I know I didn't do that," Mrs. Kasabian said, her voice rising to the point of hysteria. "I didn't have that kind of thing in me to do that kind of animalistic thing. I just know I didn't do it, Mr. Kanarek!"

On Thursday the witness collapsed in tears as Kanarek thrust before her a photo of Miss Tate in death—the blonde, pregnant actress bathed in blood from 16 stab wounds. She began weeping Friday when shown a picture of dead heiress Abigail Folger, also slain at the Tate residence.

"The gown," Mrs. Kasabian whispered, "the white gown." She had testified to seeing a woman clad in a nightgown running across the law.

"I didn't see her face," she testified. "I just saw her gown and long hair."

MAIN SPEAKER at the convention of Union of B.C. municipalities in Penticton Sept. 16 will be Maurice Tessier, Quebec minister of municipal affairs. Announcement was made by UBCM president Hugh Curtis, mayor of Saanich.

DIRTY DEAL FROM HISTORY?

Hong Kong PoWs 'Forgotten'

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Bill Foster, a wartime sailor, believes history has dealt the prisoners of Hong Kong a dirty deal.

A quarter-century after the Japanese surrender, Foster finds that "people just don't want to know about us any more."

It was on Aug. 15, 1945, that the Canadian, British and other Allied soldiers in Hong Kong discovered that the Japanese guards had withdrawn and they were free to walk out of their prison camps—those that were able to walk or crawl.

"We didn't know about the A-bomb over Hiroshima or anything," says Foster, now a North London garage owner. "We suddenly found that the Japs around the camp had disappeared. Everybody walked out in a daze."

Foster, a chief petty officer at the time, surrendered to the Japanese after his ship was blown up in 1941. In the prison camps he met young Canadian soldiers from the Winnipeg Grenadiers and the Royal Rifles of Canada.

"We had a rough deal but the Canadians had the roughest deal of all. We had some training before we got into action. Most of the Canadians seemed to be no more than raw recruits. Some had no training at all. They seemed to be mere lads, no more than 16 or so."

The years in prison grew into a continuous struggle against starvation and death, Foster recalled.

"In the last few weeks we gathered up the dogs and cats that the officers had and threw them into the pot. After that we subsisted mainly on rice, seaweed and roots.

"My weight dropped to about 65 pounds. I seemed to go blind and paralysed for a long time. But there was no doctor, no medicine. We were starving all the time. Our guards didn't seem to care. They beat us for no reason, but they were hungry, too."

Foster says prison life reduced and virtually eliminated class and rank distinctions.

"We all came down to the same level—digging into the dustbins for scraps of food. We were all hungry and we were all trying to keep our senses. A lot of us died but as far as England is concerned, those who died are forgotten."

Of the Canadians, Foster recalls that "they were a great bunch of boys. One of them taught me French. They were a bloody good lot."

Now, looking back after 25 years, Foster says he can never become friends of the Japanese. He thinks of the Canadians who shared his suffering and says:

"I would like to see my old friends—just to tell them that I have not forgotten."

Cure for Doldrums: Mix Up News Jobs

By JOHN LeBLANC

LONDON (CP) — All-Change Week on The Evening Standard has meant financial page readers getting their advice from the TV critic, the cricket correspondent more or less evaluating a military plane and the political editor covering a golf tournament.

And that's only part of it.

The top golf expert has been acting as TV critic; a male gossip columnist has been covering women's fashion and football and a woman feature writer has intruded on hallowed male territory to cover a Test cricket series.

All this unorthodoxy came about when the Beaverbrook-founded Standard—with British news in the mid-summer doldrums—decided to do something drastic to liven up the pages. It's been going on all this week.

The reading has been refreshing.

Toronto-born Milton Shulman, Britain's No. 1 spearsman of mass-appeal TV programs, has sharpened up his financial harpoon and taken aim at such things as gobbledygook in company reports and stockbrokers who hand out advice to clients without knowing what they're talking about.

Shulman suggests brokers giving share tips should be made to tick off a list of sources such as:

"I had a rather alcoholic lunch with the company chairman and although the details escape me, he sounded optimistic."

BAR IS SPOT

Anne Sharpley, invading the sacred precincts of the press box at Lords, gave wives something to think about by noting that the big concentration of male spectators is around the Taverners Bar and that viewers rarely arous from their torpor except to get up for another drink.

During a Test match at Leeds, she also noted that the Monday morning wash was out beside the grounds, something regular cricket writers had failed to mention before.

Diairist (gossip columnist) Julian Norridge was sent to look over London's Chelsea team and came back with a full tabloid-size page on how the players' hair styles have changed over the years. He's also been doubling for fashion editor Suzy Menkes, who replaced film critic Alexander Walker, who's been writing Angus McGill's humor column.

From the punditry of Westminster, political editor Robert Carvel has switched to covering the Ulster Open golf tournament in Belfast but soon got into the swing.

Education editor Alison Truefitt, who learned to drive a year ago, took over the automobile column and cricket correspondent John Thicknesse reported on a flight in the RAF's sub-hunting Nimrod plane, mostly to the effect that he got airsick.

Red Cross Helps

TORONTO (CP) — The Red Cross Society of Canada announced Friday it has sent $17,000 to aid victims of floods, landslides and droughts overseas. The money will help victims of floods and landslides in East Pakistan and Nepal and drought victims nearing starvation in Yemen.

Oils Feature Listless Week

By ART JOHNSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets drifted moderately higher this week, with the only large movement occurring at the end of the four-day period.

Oil stocks led the advance for the fourth-consecutive week.

During the first three days of the week trading was slow to moderate. Investors said the listlessness is typical of August.

The slack month is explained by observers as a resting period for markets, with many investors vacationing or otherwise ignoring stocks.

Share turnover and prices rose Friday, however, after a cease-fire in the Middle East was announced.

At the Toronto Stock Exchange, the industrial index jumped up 1.03 points to 158.05, the largest change on a daily basis since July 29.

Volume was 2.01 million shares, the first time trading exceeded two million since July 28.

MARKETS FIRM

Markets showed a general firmness throughout the week, with advanced on three of the four trading days.

Share turnover was also fairly steady. At Toronto, trading reached about 1.5 million shares each day, with the exception of Friday's active session.

An announcement by the federal government Friday that assistance to Canadian gold-miningcompanies would be continued for the next 2½ years produced little reaction among gold shares.

Cornfeld's Demand Rejected

GENEVA (Reuters) — A demand by Bernard Cornfeld, founder of Investors Overseas Services, to return as chairman of the mutual funds group has been rejected by the IOS board, a company spokesman said today.

The spokesman said the board reached an agreement in principle with the non-American subsidiary of International Controls Corp. of New Jersey providing for management assistance to IOS, immediate interim financing of $10 million and an additional $5 million if needed upon mutual agreement of the parties.

Bond Prices

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Canadian bond market were lower in active trading this week.

On the short end, issues were down ⅛ point while long term and major corporate issues lost from ⅛ to ⅝ point.

Mid-term issues lost up to 1⅛ points as many investors sold in order to buy the new Canada issue.

The new Canada issue, totalling $200 millions, was well received by investors according to most dealers.

U.S. Consumers Cautious

By CAROLE MARTIN

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumers in the U.S. are spending a bit more but still aren't ready to throw caution to the wind, statistics released during the last week show.

"The buying fever that prevailed during last year certainly hasn't emerged yet," one federal government economist observed after the Federal Reserve Board issued its report on consumer credit in June.

The June consumer instalment debt rose $441 million on a seasonally adjusted basis from the $415 million increase in May, but was well below the $795 million increase a year earlier.

Officials said that while last month's increase was the sharpest since November, the figures indicated "that many people are still pretty cautious."

A federal survey released Wednesday showed that consumer expectations of buying homes during the remainder of 1970 have increased but that expected purchases of cars are unchanged from an April poll.

Top government economists are said to be relying heavily on stepped-up consumer buying plans in the second half of this year to shake the economy out of its recent sluggishness.

U.S. commerce department officials said households with above-median income have increased their buying expectations more than the average of all households.

"This may be the most significant result, as higher-income households often have a better record of realizing their expectation," one analyst said.

MECHANICAL ENGINEER
FOR MARINE RESEARCH

The Defence Research Board has a requirement for a mechanical engineer at the Defence Research Establishment Pacific, Esquimalt, B.C.

The position calls for a man with an inventive mind and facility in devising solutions for unusual mechanical problems associated with physical research in the marine environment. Competence in general machine design and stress analysis is an essential prerequisite, and some maritime experience would be advantageous.

The salary level will be commensurate with the qualifications of the applicant. Apply to Director-General, D.R.E.P., F.M.O., Victoria, B.C.

MANAGEMENT CAREERS AVAILABLE........

Industrial, commercial, professional and governmental organizations across Canada constantly search for qualified management personnel.

The Certified General Accountants' Association in co-operation with the University of British Columbia offers a course of study which over the years has proven excellent training for people with management potential.

Employed in the field of financial management and earning a full salary, by evening lectures or correspondence, the student accomplishes an in-depth study of managerial subjects leading to the professional designation "C.G.A."

The course, approximately five years in length, is offered by lecture at U.B.C., partially at University of Victoria and most regional colleges or by correspondence. University entrance or commercial accountancy specialty is required. Registration will close on August 30, and applications and enquiries should be sent to THE REGISTRAR:

Domtar

First half earnings rose 27 per cent to $9.1 million (61 cents a share) reports Domtar Ltd. for the period ended June 30. Sales were $232.6 million, up $9.2 million.

A year ago the company had earnings of $7.3 million (48 cents), based on sales of $223.4 million.

In the quarter, Domtar had earnings of $4.9 million (33 cents), against $4.8 million (31 cents).

R. L. Crain

R. L. Crain Ltd, sales hit a record $10.8 million in the first half of 1970, resulting in net earnings of 31 cents a share, down 13 cents, or $534,000 against $775,000 a year ago. In the period ending June 30, 1969, Crain reported sales of $10.6 million.

The company expects capital expenditures to level off this year, with reflection in improved productivity.

Slackened business activity is demonstrated by longer re-order cycles of customers, Crain said.

Johnston

Johnston Terminals and Storage Ltd. reports net income of $219,000, (39 cents a share), in the first half of this year, compared with $131,000 (21 cents), in the first half of 1969. Revenues increased to $10.89 million from $9.89 million.

Kaiser Resources

Kaiser Resources Ltd. shipped nearly 300,000 tons of coking coal — equal to six medium-sized bulk carrier cargoes — druing July from its Westshore Terminals facility, Roberts Bank.

The company also reports the election of five additional Canadians to the board of directors: Graham R. Dawson, and R. T. Hagar, both of Vancouver; Paul G. Desmarais, and J. L. Walker of Montreal, and W. B. Macdonald, Toronto.

YOUR TAXES

Bulletin Sheds Light

By I. H. ASPER

One of the most important and welcome developments in the administration of the tax system in recent years is the Department of National Revenue's more frequent release of information bulletins.

An information bulletin is normally a statement of the tax division's policy regarding its interpretation of the law or its policy of enforcing it in given situations. These bulletins don't have the force of law but are merely guidelines and as such are valuable to taxpayers and their advisers in charting their course through complex or grey areas of the law.

Even though the department's bulletins aren't binding on anyone, including the government, the periodic issue of these policy statements prevents unnecessary litigation and dispute between taxpayer and tax collector, because whether they are valid or not, few tax advisers would recommend a course of action which flies in the face of a tax department contrary view.

WORKING AT BEST

The tax division's current policy release is an example of the system working at its best. Information Bulletin No. 47 deals with the department's attitude in situations where one sells something to a close relative, say his child, but does not get paid immediately. Instead he takes a promissory note for the full entire purchase price but because of the relationship, the note calls for no interest to be paid. There's the potential tax rub.

This type of situation arises every day across Canada. The father, as part of his estate planning, sells the shares of the family business to his sons or to a family holding company; or he sells the farm, cottage, life insurance policy, investment portfolio, or what have you.

The children rarely have the cash with which to pay and interest costs would compound their inability to take over the family assets. As well, paying the interest costs on the unpaid purchase price would create different tax problems. Often as part of the estate planning process, the father will make tax-free gifts to his children each year by forgiving part of their indebtedness to him. This has been an almost classical pattern for estate planning in Canada for over a decade now.

DISPLEASURE

Recently, however, there have been murmurs of displeasure from tax officials. They have allowed it to be rumored that they may attack these transactions, even though the tax courts appear to have affixed their good housekeeping seal. The presumed basis of attack is this: where one sells an asset and is paid in cash, he will usually invest that cash, earn income and pay tax.

When he sells and isn't paid immediately, then traditionally, the unpaid balance should bear interest at current rates. Thus he will earn interest income on which he will pay tax. But there the unpaid purchase price owing by his son bears no interest, then, the tax officials argue he is foregoing income, and in effect, making a gift to his son each year equal to the amount of interest the son would have paid if he had owed the money to a bank.

This could be quite expensive tax-wise. Suppose the father sold the business to his son for $100,000 and the current average interest rates were 10 per cent. In year one, the alleged gift of the unpaid interest of $10,000 would attract gift tax of $1200, assuming the father had used up his gift tax exemption. And because of the new gift tax rules which provide that one's gift tax rate is based on the cumulative value of all gifts he's made in previous years, the amount of gift tax payable would increase with each passing year.

To counter the tax department's argument, tax advisers have pointed to the court cases which say that no taxpayer is forced to make income if he doesn't want to and if he is prepared, through generosity or whatever, to stand aside and pave the way for others to make the profit instead of him there can be no adverse tax consequences to him.

ISSUE RESOLVED

The issue has been satisfactorily resolved without litigation by the issuing of information bulletin No. 47. The tax department's proposed solution is that where the money owing by the son is payable on demand, then there will be no gift tax assessed in respect of the fact that the debt bears no interest. If the promissory note bears no interest, but also is not repayable for a stated number of years then the department proposes to calculate the present value of such a non-interest bearing long term note and then assess gift tax against the father on the difference between the face value of the note and its market value.

In other words, a note for $100,000 payable without interest in 20 years might be worth only $50,000. Thus the difference of $50,000 would be treated as a taxable gift.

Whether or not the courts would uphold the tax department's compromise solution, or in fact render an even harsher verdict, is something that perhaps some venturesome taxpayer might one day test. In the meantime, the tax department's information bulletin goes a long distance toward compromising tax opinions, restores tax certainty to a cloudy region of tax practice and indicates a reasonable approach to thorny tax issues — all of which can only improve taxpayer morale.

BILL WALKER

When Wilf Sadler came home from Longview, Wash., two years ago this September, he wasn't at all certain that he would ever be heading in that direction again. As a matter of fact neither was his doctor, or his nurses, or even his friends. The odds were against it.

But yesterday, there he was, in his position as Pacific Northwest Regional Director of Babe Ruth Baseball, duty bound for Centralia, Wash., and this year's regional northwest tournament.

And he took with him the crack Nanaimo team, which recently won the Island championship at Lake Cowichan.

"I think Nanaimo has a very good chance," he said. "They have a good sound team, and excellent pitching, and that is precisely what they will need in the tougher competition in the United States."

And Wilf should be considered as an expert on this phase of the diamond sport. He took the New Westminster team to the championship series in 1959 after they had won the regional title here, and he was with North Vancouver at the World Series in 1965, the mainlanders being eliminated after winning their first game, 7-0.

"This Nanaimo team is better," he said. And he particularly praised Glen Ford, one of the team coaches. A former player with Burnaby Villa, Ford recently was transferred to the Island and has done much, along with manager Doug Sutherland, to bring the Nanaimo club to its present peak.

Upon what also can he base his optimism?

Seventeen years ago when Babe Ruth Baseball first came to the Island, Wilf was one of those who stepped forward and offered his assistance. He then was a young man of 37. Baseball and soccer were his loves.

Since then he has gone through all the hoops, local, Island, provincial. He has been in his present regional position for four years and also is on the International board of Babe Ruth Baseball, a post he has held for three years.

Two years ago, Wilf was off on what had virtually become his annual vacation — the tournament trail of Babe Ruth Baseball, culminating with the World Series at Klammath Falls, Oregon. He was accompanied by his wife, Betty, and daughter, Francis.

This World Series over, the Sadler family was homeward bound when suddenly, almost instant disaster was only a breath away.

A car shot out of a side street onto the highway. There was no way of avoiding the crash. The car was struck by the Sadler car, both occupants of the other vehicle were killed, and Wilf, his wife and daughter were left mangled in the wreck of their own automobile.

Wilf had several of his ribs broken, both lungs punctured, one leg shattered, other undetermined injuries, and to complicate matters, pneumonia had set in. He was given little chance to live, not even through the first day. His wife had both her shoulders broken and his daughter was seriously injured as well.

For five days, Wilf fought for every breath, and his life, and he won. Sixteen days later, he was allowed to leave Cowlitz Hospital in Longview and return home under the supervision of a doctor and a nurse.

He was in hospital another 20 days here before going home to what has been a continuous recuperation period.

Since then he has been the best outpatient a hospital ever had, has had the bottom part of his leg practically "solidified" as he put it, and has lost 80 per cent of its use. His chest isn't "what it should be," either, he will admit "and yes, I undergo therapy every day at Ove Witt's.

No, he isn't working. He was manager of an oil company's home delivery service at the time of the accident, and the question of damages from the accident is still before the courts in Washington.

"But I get by," he'll say between his regular duties — director of the Lower Island Junior and Juvenile Soccr League, Victoria and District Baseball Association Director; chairman of the fund-raising committee, and Babe Ruth Baseball, among chores, all of them voluntary.

He has been president of the Victoria West Football Club, and was vice-president of the O'Keefes soccer team when the accident occurred.

A week ago Wednesday it was his birthday, and he was at a garden party at the home of George Pearkes to help celebrate it.

"I'm 54, a grandfather three times over, and proud of every one of them," he said.

"But now about this tournament . . . he continued . . . you can reach me at . . . ."

Wilf Sadler didn't have the time to sit and chat.

But really, how do you feel now, the reporter asked:

"Gosh, I don't know," he replied candidly.

"It's been tough, sure, and hard on the wife, because she can't work, either; but she helps me with some of my sport stuff, and we're both here, and pretty lucky at that, I suppose."

Then he added:

"When I came out of that hospital, I made up my mind then that I would get back to next year's Babe Ruth tournament.

"I did. I haven't had time since then to worry about being sick."

Baseball, and sports in general, it would seem, owe Wilf Sadler a deep debt of gratitude.

With each passing day it becomes longer overdue.

Tommy-Joe Needs Six To Top Parker's Mark

HAMILTON (CP) — Ordinarily, Tommy-Joe Coffey doesn't pay much attention to how many times his name goes into the football record books, but tonight is a little different.

The veteran place kicker and pass-catching specialists with Hamilton Tiger-Cats could become the Canadian Football League's all-time scoring leader when Ticats meet Saskatchewan Roughriders in the league's first east-west interlocking game.

aThe 32-yer-ld fmaeraor ll-star from West Texas State has 745 points going into the second game of his 11th CFL season and needs just six more to pass Jackie Parker, now coach of British Columbia Lions, who played for Edmonton Eskimos, Toronto Argonauts and Lions.

Coffey, who already owns the CFL record for most pass completions with 553, usually takes the attitude that such records are "nice to have, but they don't put any bread on the table."

But becoming the all-time scoring leader is something else.

"You like to think your name is going into that record book," says Coffey. "I mean, it's going to be there a long time after I'm no longer around."

Scoring six more points shouldn't be difficult for Coffey who collected 11 in Hamilton's season opener against Ottawa last week.

BALDING ON THE BEACH

One of favorites to win B.C. Open golf championship, veteran touring professional Al Balding blasts shot from sand trap at Richmond Country Club course. Toronto veteran, who made this trip to "beach" on second hole, fired 69 in Friday's opening round and was two shots behind leaders as second 18-hole tour in 54-hole event started today. Cats Flash Optimism; To Play Prairie Clubs

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria Cougars, expecting to ice their "strongest team ever," plan to play two exhibition games against Western Canada League clubs in September.

The announcement was made Friday by new owner Eric Bishop.

At the same time, Bishop, manager-coach Ron Maxwell and director Bob Reid served up these tidbits for followers of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League team:

- Cougars have taken over complete sponsorship of the junior "B" Cubs, who play in the Esquimalt-based League along with Butler Brothers, University of Victoria Vikings, North American Stockers and Chemainus.
- Reid and president Bill Ferguson have been asked, and agreed, to remain as directors of the Cougars.
- A whopping total of 85 players have been invited to Cougars' training camp next month.
- Bishop, objecting to inferences that he might be "fronting" for a Western Canada League operator, strongly denied any ties "with any WCHL owner."

CALGARY FIRST

The exhibition games at Memorial Arena are tentatively set for Sept. 23 and 27. Calgary Centennials will supply the opposition for the first game while the second-game opponent won't be known until next week.

"Two other clubs want to come out," said Bishop, "but we can only accommodate one of the two. Calgary, however, is definite."

The takeover of the junior "B" team is considered by Maxwell as an obvious necessity. "With an affiliate right here in town," said Maxwell, "we shouldn't have any player problems."

Maxwell admitted not all of the 85 players invited to camp will accept Victoria's invitation. Still, he envisions the largest training camp in the four-year history of the junior club.

STRONGEST EVER?

Discussion of pre-season preparations prompted Reid, who will fill a post as "director of player personnel," to declart Cougars "will have the strongest team in history." Virtually every member of last year's team is expected back.

The junior "B" club will be managed by Ray Turcotte and coached by Keith Lawrence.

Bishop, whose purchase of the Cougars must be approved at a BCJHL meeting in Penticton on Aug. 15, strongly objected to suggestions that he may be fronting for Scotty Munro, owner of the Calgary Centennials.

"While I know most of the WCHL operators, not one has a dime's interest in this venture."

SPORTING GROUP

He added that seven other Calgarians have helped provide financial backing. He named curlers Jimmy Shields Calgary Stampeder football players Bob Standen, Jim Seymour, Bud Milner and Freddie Wilmot, and Eddie Awid, a native of Edmonton now living in Calgary.

Ferguson said a concentrated season-ticket drive will get under way shortly. A total of 1,300 premium seats for the 30-game schedule will be sold at $45 (or $1.50 per game). Remaining seats will be scaled at $37.50.

The only price increase will affect the 1,300 prime seats, which weren't scaled in previous years. Single-game purchase of tickets will cost $2 while remaining seats will sell for last year's price of $1.50.

Pensioner sand students will be entitled to a 50-cent discount.

BLUES PASS UP VISIT; ROYALS FACE COUGARS

Tonight's scheduled Western Canada Soccer League game between the Victoria Royals and Winnipeg Blues at Royal Athletic Park has been postponed apparently, due to transportation difficulties encountered by the Prairie Division team. No new date has as yet been set for the postponed match.

A postponed game between the Royals and Vancouver Cougars last Wednesday has been re-scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Sunday in Vancouver.

Relaxed Bachelor Coming on Strong

TORONTO (CP) — Keith Carpenter, 29, who has been playing tennis since he was seven, believes the relaxed life of a bachelor helps his game.

"It gives me more time to play," he said in an interview Friday after he defeated Harry Fauquier of Toronto 6-2, 8-6 in the men's singles quarter-final of the Canadian closed tennis championship.

Carpenter, who won the Ontario Open last year, had been ill with mononucleosis for three months.

Today he will meet John Sharpe, Toronto stockbroker, who survived cramps in each leg to outlast Bob Puddicombe of Vancouver 8-6, 4-6, 9-7.

DOUBLES SET TODAY

In the doubles semi-finals Robin Eliott and Bob Howes of Vancouver will meet Belkin, who plays out of Montreal, and Sharpe. Carpenter and Fauquier will play Bedard and Puddicombe.

Seeded first are Sharpe and Belkin, with Carpenter and Fauquier seeded second.

Elliott and Howes defeated Jim Boyce and Dale Power of Toronto 1-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Women's singles semi-final opponents were decided when second-seeded Jane O'Hara of Toronto beat Benita Senn, also of Toronto, 6-1, 6-1.

Bomber Post For Heighton

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League have announced signing Jim Heighton, a defensive tackle and former B.C. Lions regular.

Heighton, six-foot-three and 245 pounds, fills a gap left when Peter Palmer was sidelined by a virus earlier this week. Heighton played the 1969 season with the Lions after a jump directly from high school to Victoria Steelers of the Continental League, but lost his job this season.

GAME AT ESQUIMALT NEXT SATURDAY

Puck Pros Turning Out

A total of 15 National, Western, Central and American Hockey League players will donate their time and talent Aug. 15, when the Esquimalt Sports Centre holds its second annual Pro-Am Hockey Game.

Head coach of Esquimalt's summer hockey school, Milan Marcetta of the WHL Phoenix Roadrunners, has lined up some impressive professional talent to play a Vancouver Island amateur team.

Professionals scheduled to play with Marcetta include Larry Cahan, captain of the NHL Los Angeles Kings; Larry McNabb, who played last season with Hershey Bears, and Bruce Carmichael, high scoring left winger formerly with Victoria Maple Leafs and now with Salt Lake City Golden Eagles.

Malcolm Ashford, an NHL official who graduated to pro status through Victoria hockey leagues, will referee the game.

All proceeds will be donated to the Esquimalt Minor Hockey Association.

Eagle Helps Wakeham To Opening-Round 67

Four Tie for Open Lead Morgan Close With 69

RICHMOND—Defending champion Bill Wakeham faced a large field of challengers today in the second round of the British Columbia Open golf tournament after serving notice Friday that he'll be tough to beat.

The 29-year-old Victoria pro, who has won the B.C. title two years running, rammed in a 60-foot putt for an eagle-three to take a five under-par 67 and a share of the lead with three others as the 6,815-yard Richmond Country Club's par 36-36-72 took a beating in the first-round.

Tied with Wakeham were Vancouver's Doug Reid, Brian Allin of Santa Barbara, Calif., and Ernesto Perez, the stocky Mexican Open champion from Tijuana.

Hard on their heels was Don Scott of Seattle, Washington State amateur champion, who missed a chance to tie the leaders when he muffed an approach shot on the last hole. He apparently was distracted in his backswing by a whirring movie camera operated by a television station's camera man.

A total of 29 players broke par Friday and another 16 were grouped at even par.

Silverberg Three Strokes Off Pace

Pre-tournament favorite Al Balding of Toronto was among five who carded opening 69s—two strokes off the pace. The others were John Morgan of Victoria, Pafe Botts of Los Angeles, Al Mengert of Tacoma and Bill Collins of Santa Barbara.

Right behind with 70s were Bill Wright, Jr., of Edmonton, Don Ross of Surrey, Al Kennedy of Vancouver, Dick Silverberg of Glen Meadows, Bernie Salter of Tacoma and Ted Naff of Bellevue, Wash.

In addition to Wakeham, Morgan and Silverberg, four other Islanders were in contending position. Cowichan professional Norm Boden carded 37-34—71 while Mike Rivers of Nanaimo, amateur Gord Whan of Cowichan and Oak Bay's Vaughan Trapp all came in with par-matching 72s.

Gallery favorites Dick Munn, former Victorian, and veteran Stan Leonard turned in disappointing rounds. Munn, blaming his grief on his putter, had a 74 while Leonard was a stroke behind.

Wakeham's eagle came on the par-five seventh hole, which was the 16th hole he played Friday after playing the back nine first.

He hit the green with an eight-iron shot and rolled the long putt in after studying the line carefully. He also carded four birdies after going one over on the fourth hole he played.

Both he and Perez came within inches of tying the course record of 66.

Wakeham rolled a 15-foot putt to the rim of the cup on his 17th hole—"The shadow was looking in, but it wouldn't drop."

Perez, a smooth-swinging 22-year-old with ambitions to play the United States pro tour, had a shot at a birdie that would have given him the lead alone on the last hole. But his 20-foot putt went a foot past the hole after missing by a whisker as a small child cried near the green.

"I didn't hear it at all," said Perez of the wail that had his gallery on edge.

SHOT WELL THROUGHOUT

Reid had five birdies and par on all the other holes, including an amazing recovery shot for a par 4 on the third hole. He rated the eight iron shot he hit from a tough lie in the rough to within a foot of the pin as "almost better than the birds." He sank 15-foot putts on the 16th and 13th holes for birdies.

Allin was the surprise. He made the turn at one-under 35 and seemed to be going nowhere, then turned in a powerful 32 on the front nine—which he played last—to tie the leaders.

Bob Johnson of Tacoma, who was the sensation of Thursday's pro-am preliminary when he dropped a hole-in-one on the par-three ninth hole, was among 13 players tied at 71.

The field of 204—135 pros and 69 amateurs—will be cut to the low 100 and ties for Sunday's final round.

Holly Botham Stays in Front

OAK RIDGES, Ont — In her fifth bid for the title, Holly Botham of Haney, B.C., captured the Canadian junior women's golf championship here Friday, posting an 11-over-par 85 for a 54-hole total of 247.

Her winning score was five shots better than second-place Sandra Baker of Fostoria, Ohio, who had 83.

Miss Botham, an 18-year-old UBC student, was on the B.C. team that won the Canadian junior women's interprovincial team golf championship Thursday. She was the leader after all three rounds.

FINISHES WITH 80

Denise Wojton of Wolfville, Nova Scotia, placed third after stroking an 80 for 258. Lise Vautour of Maple Green, New Brunswick, finishing with an 83, and Pam Mackay of Ashburn, Ont., with an 85, tied for fourth at 261.

CITY LITTLE LEAGUERS FACED UPHILL BATTLE

PRINCE GEORGE — Victoria American faced an uphill struggle as action resumed today in the British Columbia Little League baseball championship tournament.

Americans were trailing East Trail 4-3 in a game that was halted after three innings Friday because of darkness. The losing team in the first-round contest will later face North Vancouver Jaycees, who were nipped 3-2 by Vancouver Victoria Drive Friday in the opening game of the double-loss-elimination tourney.

American's Dave Rands put his team ahead 3-0 in the first inning with a three-run homer, which scored Charlie Fisher and Derry Donaldson.

East Trail bunched all of its runs in the third inning before the game was called.

Spot in Final For City Colts

PORT COQUITLAM — Following an 8-4 victory over Vancouver Quadra Friday, Victoria All-Stars will meet the winner of this afternoon's game between Kitimat and Castlegar in the first games of the winners' bracket final tonight in the four-team B.C. Colt League baseball championship tournament.

In the opening game of the double-knockout affair, the Islanders had to battle from behind Friday as they gave away three unearned runs to Quadra in the first inning, but rallied for four tallies in each of the third and sixth frames.

Mike Lee started Victoria's come-back with a third-inning double. An error, a double by Tom Craig and singles by Kip Jones and Glen Wallis completed the third-inning eroption.

Caddies Needed For Senior Meet

Caddies in demand.

That's the word from Victoria Golf Club professional Paul Trapp, who will need about 120 bag-toters for the Seniors' Pacific North West Association tournament which starts Monday.

An estimated 60 caddies also will be required Sunday.

Caddy candidates are asked to contact the Oak Bay pro shop.

'Wait and See' Advice for Bob

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts' team doctor has confirmed that flanker Bobby Taylor suffered a torn cartilage in his right knee during Tuesday's Eastern Football Conference game.

But Dr. John Palmer said lack of swelling or fluid on the knee may indicate the injury is not severe. He said it would take a week to determine whether Taylor "can get back to playing or requires immediate surgery."

Taylor scored two touchdowns in Toronto's 34-27 loss to Montreal Alouettes before he twisted the knee late in the game.

Seniors Tee Off With Team Match

Hasty Lesson Helping Shaw

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Tom Shaw credits a quick trip home for a consultation with his old club pro for the sudden improvement in his game.

"I was doing just two things wrong," the 27-year-old Shaw said.

"I was hitting them short and hitting them crooked. And that just won't get it done out here."

Shaw, however, got it done Friday, shooting a four-under-par 66 and moving into a tie with George Archer for the second-round lead in the $150,000 American Golf Classic.

FOUR UNDER PAR

They had matching 36-hole totals of 136, four-under-par on the tough 7,180-yard Firestone Country Club course. Archer, the first-round leader, retained a share of the top spot with a second-round 69.

Lurking just one stroke back, however, was Australian Bruce Crampton, winner of last week's rich Westchester classic. The 34-year-old tour veteran had a 68 for 137.

Tom Shaw	70-66—136

Philarino Nipped

VANCOUVER (CP) — Story Hill, a four-year-old Kentucky-bred filly, passed Philarino in the last few strides Friday night in the feature eighth race at Exhibition Park.

Bazil Frazier booted her home in 1:45 flat to pay $9.20, $4.30 and $3.80 to Philarino's $3.20 and $3.10. Trojan Knight was third and paid $4.40. Favored Nancy Hawk ran fourth out of the money.

Renfrew Skips Rink To Bowling Crown

First title to be decided in the Greater Victoria District Lawn Bowling Association's annual men's tournament has been captured by a Victoria rink skipped by Hugh Renfrew.

Playing on his home greens at Beacon Hill, Renfrew guided clubmates Joe Davidson, Bert Middleton and Matt Yule to a 19-10 triumph over Seattle rivals in the rinks final.

Originally scheduled for today, the final was moved ahead because of illness in Lambrecht's family.

BURNSIDE TEAM LOSES

The up-Island team of Tom Dickson, Harry Tuck and Frank Lee downed Burnside's Alex Donald, Bill Cruikshank and Sid Smithurst 23-14 and, in an all-Victoria contest, Danny Millar, Lionel Nichols and Bert Bennett defeated Hector Tapp, John McNair and Tom McKeachie 19-14.

Colin Fleck and Bill Turner of Burnside downed Victoria's Renfrew and Al Jones, 13-9, Thursday to reach the finals in doubles competition, also being played today.

Richardson and Slade notched an 11-8 victory over South Vancouver's Tom Owen and Joe Dull to also reach the doubles final.

Sore-Armed Moose Finds Mets Have Tonic Effect

Pirates Boost Hold on Top Spot

By The Associated Press

There are all kinds of treatments to make ailing pitchers feel better. The tonic for Bob Moose seems to be the New York Mets.

The young Pittsburgh Pirates right-hander threw a no-hitter the last time he faced the Mets last September.

He didn't do that again Friday but he did come up with a four-hit, 6-1 victory in which he showed no signs of the arm trouble that had held him to two starts since June 28.

The complete game victory, fifth in a row for the Pittsburgh pitching staff, shot the Pirates' lead over the Mets in the National League East up to 3½ games.

In other action Philadelphia Phillies downed Chicago Cubs 4-1, Cincinnati Reds edged Los Angeles Dodgers 4-2, Houston Astros trounced San Francisco Giants 22-1, St. Louis Cardinals nipped Montreal Expos 2-1 and Atlanta Braves beat San Diego Padres 8-2, before losing to the Padres 6-1.

SHOWED COMMAND

Belted by Montreal last Sunday, Moose was in control all the way against the Mets. New York's run came in the fourth when Bud Harrelson walked, Ken Boswell singled and Harrelson scored on a doubleplay.

Pittsburgh tied the game in the bottom of the fourth, then broke it open with five in the sixth. Willie Stargell hit his 22nd homer, Moose doubled in a run and 5-foot-4 Fred Patek blasted a three-run homer, his first of the season.

Tony Taylor's pinch, two-run single snapped a 1-1 tie in the eighth inning for Philadelphia and dropped the Cubs 5½ games behind Pittsburgh. Billy Williams, who struck as a pinch hitter with the bases loaded in the Cubs ninth, extended his NL record of consecutive games played to 1,093.

Trailing 2-1, Cincinnati came up with three runs in the eighth and opened up a 13-game lead over second-place Los Angeles in the West. Lee May's two-run double was the big blow in the inning.

DODGERS LED BRIEFLY

The Dodgers had taken a 2-0 lead on Tom Haller's two-run homer in the second. Johnny Bench belted his 38th homer for Cincinnati in the fourth.

Doug Rader slammed a three-run homer and John Edwards cracked a two-run triple and an RBI single in Houston's rout of San Francisco.

St. Louis scored runs on Joe Torre's single and a wild pitch by Dan McGinn and Bob Gibson fired a five-hitter against Montreal. It was Gibson's 15th victory against five losses and the Cardinals' 10th in 12 games.

Orlando Cepeda's three-run homer, his 25th, and a two-run blast by Hank Aaron, his 32nd, keyed Atlanta's first-game victary over San Diego. Aaron also singled in a run.

Pitcher Purchased

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Indians have sold lefthanded pitcher Dick Ellsworth to Milwaukee Brewers for an undisclosed sum. Ellsworth was 3-3 for the Indians this season.

Opening Test For City Club

KELOWNA — Victoria All-Stars were scheduled to make their first start today in the three-day, five team tournament for the provincial senior amateur baseball championship.

In opening-round games Friday, Vancouver CYO stopped a West Kootenay League team of all-stars, 4-0, and Kelowna downed Quesnel, 9-2.

Four games are scheduled for today and three more for Sunday. The winner advances to the Canadian final in Brandon, Manitoba, August 28-31.

Skeet Shot Runs 160 To Win World Crown

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Harry Stillwell of Oreland, Pa., broke 160 consecutive birds Wednesday to win a 12-way shootoff for the world's 20-gauge skeet-shooting championship.

Stillwell and 12 others, including Barney Hartman of Ottawa, shattered 100 targets in regulation competition to go into the shootoff. Stillwell won the title when Dr. Archie Coffee of Charlotte, N.C., missed his 60th bird in the shootoff.

Soccer Veterans Continue Series

Victoria's soccer oldtimers had their victory string in danger today when they stepped out at Adanac Park in Vancouver for the concluding match in their annual series against Vancouver booting veterans.

Winners of the total-goals, home-and-home series for five straight years, the Victoria oldsters were held to a 3-3 deadlock at home in the opener of the current competition.

Twins Win Again In Extra Innings

By The Associated Press

Oakland Athletics' Bert Campaneris belted a first-pitch homer off Minnesota Twins' Jim Perry Friday night. But the Twins had the last laugh.

Jim Holt's leadoff home run in the 11th inning gave the Twins a 2-1 win as Perry became the first 17-game winner in the majors. He scattered only four hits.

It was the second consecutive sudden-death victory for the Twins. George Mitterwald beat California Angels 2-1 Thursday night with a leadoff home run the 14th.

Elsewhere in the American League, Cleveland Indians tripped Baltimore Orioles 10-4; New York Yankees downed Detroit Tigers 5-1; California shaded Chicago White Sox 6-4; Boston Red Sox defeated Washington Senators 3-1 and Kansas City Royals swept a twi-night twin bill from Milwaukee Brewers, 4-0 and 10-2.

FIRST GAME WINNER

Perry, 17-9, stymied Oakland after Campaneris' first inning blast and the Twins bounced back on Rich Reese's second-inning homer off Catfish Hunter before Holt greeted Marcel Lachemann in the 11th with his first game-winning homer.

The Indians, hitless against Baltimore's Tom Phoebus for 5 2-3 innings, chased him and battered two relievers in a seven-run seventh. Two-run singles by Ted Uhlaender and Graig Nettles keyed the uprising and Uhlaender homered in the eight.

Airtight relief pitching by Gary Waslewski and Jack Aker propelled the Yankees past Detroit. New York broke a 1-1 tie on a wild pitch by Les Cain in the sixth and added three runs in the eighth.

Century Takes Opening Game

Century Inn, first-place finisher in the Stuffy McGinnis Softball League's regular-season schedule, got powerful batting from Ferd Pillon and Flay Hall to blast Bell's Men's Wear 7-1 Friday in the opening game of a best-of-five, semi-final playoff at Heywood Avenue Park.

Colwood Inn and Labatts begin the other semi-final series Sunday at 6:45 p.m. and Century resumes the series with Bell's Monday night.

A four-run rally in the fourth inning, capped by a three-run homer by Pillon, proved to be the turning point Friday.

Darrell Lorimer slammed a one-run homer for Bell's in the top of the fourth frame to tie the score after Jack Lusk had put Century ahead 1-0 in the second.

Lusk, who scored three times, slammed two doubles and received a base on balls.

Hanoi Raps U.S. Strategy

TOKYO (AP) — North Vietnam said today President Nixon has committed "a serious act of war escalation" by allowing United States pilots to provide direct air support for Cambodian troops.

In a commentary, the North Vietnamese government party daily, Nhan Dan, referred to reports last week that U.S. air power was used to bomb and strafe Communist positions in support of Cambodian troops. The commentary—an article usually written by a ranking official—was broadcast by Hanoi's Vietnam news agency.

Guild Given Time to Pay

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Canadian Merchant Service Guild Friday was granted an additional 18 days in which to pay $75,000 in fines for contempt of court in a lengthy strike earlier this year.

The guild was fined $80,000 for contempt in disobeying court injunctions banning picketing and has paid $5,000. Its 2,300 members are being assessed $60 a head to pay the fines and other costs.

The strike involved 1,250 officers and engineers.

Historic Dwelling Becomes Picturesque Restaurant

Through the vision and hard work of Mr. and Mrs. W. Prior of Victoria, the fine old Pendray residence on Belleville Street enters a new phase, that of The Captain's Palace Restaurant.

Built in 1897 by Mr. W. J. Pendray as a family residence, the estate has been continually pointed out on sightseeing tours. The original charming exterior has been preserved, with its quaint garden of trees and shrubs pruned in animal shapes as they were by the original owner.

The warm and inviting interior has become the unusual setting for a new idea in restaurant atmosphere . . . a blend of yesterday and today; a combination of nostalgia and new experience. As you dine you may well recall happy hours spent on past occasions in this splendid mansion.

'Realist' Works in Show

. . . With Gordon Rice

Alex Colville, Goodridge Roberts, John Chambers, and Ernest Lindner are important Canadian "Realist" painters whose work has not been seen in Victoria for a long time now. Their paintings, other realist work, and abstract pctures by such well-known painters at Riopelle, Pellan, and Harold Town can be seen now (through August 15) at the CIL Collection Exhibit at the Hudson's Bay Company store.

In Lindner's "Fungi" there are bluish-white tree stumps, yellow leaves, green moss, and fungus in tan, purple and orange, all set against a sky of bluish-green. The colors glow, set down in gem-like little brushstrokes reminiscent of early Renaissance painting.

What a contrast to some of the other realist things here, where nuances of color seem to have been deliberately removed in favor of a grey photographic vision! A case in point is the meticulous "North Side" by Willis Romanov. He is one of four painters here (Danby, Rick and Brown are the others) who use a style, imagery and techniques heavily derived from Andrew Wyeth.

Romanov's old building is painted like a scale model, simulating textures of weathered wood and broken glass. He is a precise copyist, but his detailing is reminiscent of model-making, whereas Lindner's detailing seems to enhance the freshness and magic of his forest scene.

The amazing thing is that Lindner's work has so much color without being gaudy, cartoony, or exaggerated. In the shift of light on the tree fungus he finds exquisite nuances of color which alternately seem to fuse and diffuse this color and light.

Christiane Pflug's "Interior at Night" is a weird work and probably not for the purists. It seems at first almost "too cute" and yet there is something compelling about it which holds one's attention. In a somewhat "awkward" composition a tiny Negro girl stands peering out a large window. Her white doll sits on the sill. One then wonders, is this black girl perhaps a doll herself? On close examination you see that this could be true, but doubt it in spite of her stiffly-posed stance and her tininess.

The upper half of the window frame one sees the reflection of the room, with just a corner of the artists's easel. The little landscape outside the bottom of the window seems very mundane, just a building and a lawn across the way, and yet this is one of the most mysterious things about the picture.

The sombre olive colors and lights out there contrast strangely with the brighter (if also moody) oyster-whites of the interior of the room.

Ostensibily a realist work, it is full of subtle shifts of light and emphasis of scale which keep suggesting the illogical logic of dreams and surrealist painting. And it seems logical too that this patiently made and strange picture is the work of an artist with no formal training. One wonders if such training might have robbed her of the freshness and originality seen here?

Goodridge Roberts' brush is rapid, deft, and sure, suggesting to us that he must have quite a body of work done by now. Why do we see so little of it? His picture "Port au Persil" expresses the taste and simplicity of late French Impressionism, with perhaps a more personal kind of coloring.

If one comes close in style to such impressionists of Monet, one must suffer from the comparison, inevitably, and yet if the comparison in quality is not too unfavorable a painter has indeed accomplished something. I should add that I think Roberts has spent his time absorbing the qualities of landscape more than merely absorbing the style of other landscape painters ... otherwise his work would hardly seem as fresh as it does.

John Chambers' large "Three Sisters Waiting" shows three highly faded dark figures in a darkly faded landscape. It is not surprising that he studied for a long time in Spain. There you can find pictures by Goya and Velasquez where figures appear on dark backgrounds which upon closer examination seem to vanish into the paint. Close up, you find only a faint smudge where it seemed sure you distantly saw a face.

Chambers may use the photographic image to help him here, but he pushes this kind of imagery to the limits of uncertainty and suggestiveness. The two sisters to the right seem to be fading away into the equally dim lawn and trees, but the sister to the left seems already gone. A hint of a face is perceptable, a glove, and her outline, marked not by line or color or light but just by a heavier texture of paint.

It is as if in a flash of faith but eerie nostalgia one were able to remember two people but not quite a third, from some lost but significant memory. It is a highly original picture.

Frightened Little Boy at the Station Came a Long Way Since Truro Taunts

By STEPHEN SCOTT

NEW YORK—Godfrey Cambridge spoke lightly, as befits a comedian, But the bitterness was there.

He was telling of the day 24 years ago when he first found out what life would be like as a black man.

That was at the railway station at Truro, N.S., he said, when some railway workers yelled at him: "Yeah! Look at the nigger! There's a little monky, a little nigger!"

Cambridge was 13 — and frightened.

"Yes indeed," he said in an interview.

"That's the first time I heard the magic word .. At the time I just said Wow! and ran inside the station."

Cambridge has come a long way since then. At 37 he commands high prices at American, Canadian and European nightclubs, works the best television programs and made two movies in 1969 alone. Critics say he is an extremely funny comedian and an extremely good actor, in movies and on off Broadway.

GODFREY CAMBRIDGE

Met by Limousine

Instead of being insulted at a strange railway station, he often is met at the airport by a limousine. Few now would call him nigger to his face.

But the memory of that day in Truro when he was on his way home to New York — he had been living with his grandparents in Sydney, N.S. — still lingers.

"I was terrible alone," he said quietly.

"I remember all the sweating, prespiring railroad workers ... I just remember them yelling ...

"And there was nobody there to help me and I just remember the fear of the little boy; that new suitcase that I was too small to lift and just running off into the station, just trying to hide and ... people staring at me and that terrible feeling ..."

Now Cambridge has discovered what it's like to be white. He is the star of a soon-to-be released picture in which he plays a white man who wakes up one morning and finds he is black.

Between scenes Cambridge, converted into a white man during 2½ hours in the makeup room, walked the streets and found that even blacks treat blacks differently than whites. Color of the skin, he concluded sadly, "is what it's all about" in this world.

Cambridge is an independent man. The name of the film was to have been The Night the Sun Came Out, to Cambridge, a title of significance. Columbia pictures changed that to Watermelon Man. Cambridge is so angry he refuses to accept the new title, let alone discuss it.

So then, he said, it was suggested that he go on television and criticize the new title, as a publicity gimmick.

"I said, Man, how cynical can you get," he said.

Cambridge can make one laugh when he talks of the life of "the hunkies, the frogs and the niggers" and other poor folk living "down the well" by the coke ovens in Sydney, where his mother had sent him for a start on his education.

Illicit Games

He told of Uncle Arthur's store where everybody congregated to play chess and "other illicit games" — uncle was a bootlegger.

Every Christmas some "blonde and very Aryan" RCMP officers would raid the store and "they would break his illicit businesses in the gutter."

But the bitterness of segregation, between rich and poor, between poor black and white middle class, is there.

Cambridge's parents moved from British Guiana — now Guyana—to Nova Scotia. His father had been a sugar plantation bookkeeper — a "good nigger" — and his mother a teacher. From Nova Scotia they moved to New York where Cambridge was born in 1933.

"They were more concerned whether you had a good personality or not than whether you could read or write. My mother took the old British idea that she didn't care about my personality ... so long as I read and write. So she just shipped me, pack and parcel, up to Sydney to live with my grandparents."

The Sydney school didn't care about his personality. If he got A's and did his homework everybody was happy.

He's Grateful

"I'm grateful for having gone to school in Canada," he said, and sounded as though it meant it.

There was segregation in Sydney, he said. All the poor lived by the coke ovens and "all sort of had fun together." "Over town", it was all white Anglo-Saxon Protestant, except "we Negroes had one black doctor — "we always have to have one of everything, you know." The Negroes "were taught to be nice and look up to him as an example."

"You knew the jobs that were open to you. You know, you work in the coke ovens."

The Negroes could go "over town" but they couldn't work there. Cambridge said he has "residual" resentment about a big department store where his family had an account but where he, a Negro, would not be allowed to work.

But the poor got on together.

"When you're poor it's amazing how well you get along together. Man, you can get along so well when you are all sucking the same bar of salt. You'd be surprised."

Cambridge, who said he agrees there could be an explosion among the poor of all races of the United States, saie he can also agree with statements that Canadians are fully as hypocritical about race relations as Americans.

"The Canadians say 'We don't have the problem.' Well, they don't have any Negroes."

Then facetiously: "We'll ship you a couple of million. We'll sit them right down in Manitoba there. Let's see how you like that, Charlie.

Hypocritical

"How about Winnipeg? Can you hanedle it? Let's get a little overcrowding in Winnipeg there — for the summer."

Seriously again: "They (Canadians) are hypocritical in that they don't have the problem so then they go about screaming about that they don't have any problem."

Cambridge reached college, but never completed it. He got a part in a play there, but then was written out of it before it could be produced. But he decided to study dramatics.

He appeared on and off Broadway, did some television work and generally maintained himself with a variety of jobs that included popcorn maker, airplane wing cleaner, maternity hospital ambulance driver and New York cab driver.

The big break came in 1964 with three appearances on the Jack Paar TV how. He's been going up ever since.

ROCK ORATORIO TO BE RECORDED

The rock oratorio Joseph, so successfully performed here at First United Church this summer, will be recorded in its special William Sample-Kahlen Wood arrangement by Kerygma Records.

The recording session will take place Monday and the records will become available in early November.

Canadian Dancers Win Ballet Prize

Two of the company's principal dancers, Rothwell, 25, and Miss Potts, 22, were the only Canadians in the competition.

Considered to be one of the most important dance festivals in the world, the Varna competition attracted dancers from 17 countries, including Cuba, Venezuela, Japan, Mongolia, the United States and Russia.

The special prize for the most artistic over-all performance as a duet was awarded to the two Canadians in the contemporary choreography section, for performances of excerpts from Roland Petit's Le Loup and Kraanerg.

There were 22 adjudicators representing 18 countries, including the National Ballet's artistic director, Celia Franca. This internatioal jury was headed by Galina Ulanova.

This was the second win for the National Ballet in its second entry in the Varna competition.

Ruby Keeler Comes Back

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Ruby Keeler, tap-dancing motion picture star of the 1930s, is returning to Broadway this fall after a 41-year absence.

Now a 60-year-old grandmother who in private life is Mrs. John Lowe, the Halifax-born Miss Keeler will play the part of a foster-mother in a revival of Vincent Youman's 1925 hit musical comedy No, No Nanette.

"It's come at a good time for me," she said Thursday. "I lost my husband a year and a half ago. My children are grown."

DOUBLE IMAGE of Alvin Lee from new film 'Woodstock.'

The Show-Stealer Of Woodstock Era

By JOAN ENGELS

When Alvin Lee looks up from his fire-engine red guitar, shakes out his mop of yellow hair and sings "Going Home" in his deep blues voice, the girls in his audience seem ready to bolt from the theatre and go home themselves—just to be there when Alvin arrives.

Like Elvis Presley before him and — like it or not, kids, Rudy Valee before Elvis — Lee has that happy effect on his audiences. In fact, there are those who think that Lee is destined to emerge as the Presley of the Woodstock generation.

Certainly he has some impressive credentials. There are those rugged, muscular good looks. There is the rollicking guitar style that has already led his English rock group, Ten Years After, to the heights of the pop music world.

But most importantly, there is the screen presence that he is now demonstrating in "Woodstock," the new movie documentary of last summer's historic rock festival. He even succeeds in stealing the show from such formidable pop figures as Joan Baez, Jimi Hendrix and Arlo Guthrie.

At 26, Lee may not be the best guitar-player west of Max Yasgur's renowned Woodstock cow pasture, but he's clearly one of the fastest. His funky down-home blues and seraphic riffs had his audience sitting on the edges of their rolled-up sleeping bags.

"There's technical music and pleasant music and emotional music — and I prefer emotional," he says. "I just let it come from nowhere, without thinking. If I ever thought about playing as fast as I do, I couldn't."

Lee, who just completed his fifth successful U.S. tour, is also something of a rarity among today's iconoclastic youth — a big fan of America. "I was very unsure when I first came here," he recalls. "Everyone had been downing America. I was afraid to go out at night.

"People who criticize this country should go and live in Spain for a year. The scope of the United States is tremendous. There are lots of channels for creative people, especially in the arts. It's the freest place in the world."

Freedom has always been important for Alvin Lee. At 13 he was playing the guitar, Chuck Berry style, in his native Nottingham, with the blessings of his jazz-buff parents. At 15, he went down to London to find his style and fortune.

Times were difficult. He shared a flat in a tacky neighborhood with five hungry musicians. "I was always frightened of a 9-to-5 job, and smug that I didn't have one," he reports. "That got me through the no-money periods."

While in London he began to haunt a Jamaican club that specialized in "blue beat and scar" music (Jamaican blues). The atmosphere was uninhibited.

"There was no such thing as an audience," Lee says. "Everyone in the place beat on something. I'd pick up a tambourine or anything and join in."

He also met Big Bill Broonzy, a singer who furthered Lee's interest in the blues. When Lee formed Ten Years After in 1967 along with bass guitarist Leo Lyons, drummer Ric Lee and organist Chick Churchill, it was as a blues band. "At the time we were the heaviest thing going in England," he says. "I don't know why it caught on, but we developed a following right away."

He also developed the technique and skills of a solid guitarist. In this he was influenced by Charlie Christian, a black Oklahoman who played with the Benny Goodman Sextet. "Charlie was the first person to realize the full sound potential of the electric guitar," says Lee.

Nowadays, Lee is doing well enough to worry about taxes. "I'm not rich — I'm comfortable," he says, and his London mews cottage is all of that. It comes replete with a music studio where Lee spends hours mixing musical and non-musical sounds.

"I might hear a pneumatic hammer and think it has a good rhythm," he says. "Some of these sounds turn up on the group's albums."

The Forgotten Audience

Sounding Board

. . . By Audrey Johnson

Many an average person with a taste for theatre or live concerts must be wondering for whom the contemporary playwright, composer and poet are writing.

Too often they come away from the theatre and concert hall confused, irritated and not infrequently revolted or depressed.

In fact, if it were not for the classical repertory and Neil Simon, they are probably saying of the stage that it will self-destruct in 10 years.

They are saying it but without much likelihood of its coming to pass for the theatre has not survived 2,000 years of vicissitudes to succumb to this particular phase.

The generations of playwrights using the theatre as an intense personal utterance, blowing their own minds through the medium of the stage, have made some of the most deathless contributions to theatre literature, but seldom were they the ones responsible for keeping it alive in their own time.

Instead it is the "escape" writer, the dramatist-showman intent on reaching the largest possible audience rather than expressing any profound statement on the human condition, who, in each generation, has maintained the theatre, alive and well, throughout the world.

It is highly unlikely any of them were conscious of adding works of permanent value to theatre literature, but here and there down the years, some of them were doing so.

Shakespeare was first a man of the theatre, a showman. His uniquely shrewd ability to observe and define the nature of man and society did not prevent him from moulding his plays to the tastes of the theatre-going public of his time.

The fact he could express himself in immortal iambics was just one of those coincidental things — the sort of once-in-a-thousand-years explosion of a super-nova.

It was a part of his theatrical genius that he clearly recognized and accepted what far too many playwrights and directors since have ignored through choice or obtuseness: the bulk of an audience is not the initiated intelligentsia at the top and certainly not the superficially interested who form an easily disaffected fringe.

The sustained majority of any audience is made up of ordinary people who are in the auditorium to be moved and entertained because they groove with live theatre.

They have enough understanding to add depth to their reaction, but not so much that they become super analytical.

I have no patience with proponents of the idea that the audience is of no importance.

Theatre, in the simplest terms, is a place where some one expresses something through speech or action or both, and someone else responds to the stimuli.

It happens with just two people present on the stage in an empty hall.

But to be carried through to the ultimate dimension he action must be like a stone dropped into a pool. Just as the rings spread outward from the central impetus to the final boundaries, the stimuli spreads throughout an audience, touching to life vibrations that reflect back to the source.

How else explain the fact that a good actor's well-rehearsed performance finds just that extra dimension when he first "feels" the audience.

Discussing the nature of the dramatic this week, at a Uvic conference, Saturday Review drama editor Henry Hewes told of attending a living theatre performance in which an actor stood, a still, solitary figure on the stage for 15 minutes. That was the play.

It was boring said Hewes. He also reported that much of the audience was embarrassed, self-conscious, restless.

You think such inaction would contain no elements of theatre? You are wrong.

This was action. The actor was doing something that demanded a kind of energy and invoked energy in return.

The stone was dropped in the pool and as Hewes is our witness, the rings spread outward from that impetus.

But the pool was there — the audience. And that made the occasion dramatic. Not the fact that an actor stood alone and silent on a bare stage.

It is not surprising to me to know that the impact of this episode on the drama critic Hewes was longer-lasting than that of a good play.

Readings Cancelled

Readings under the heading of a Celtic Miscellany, tentatively scheluled for this Sunday evening, have been cancelled, according to Victoria Fair officials.

Next in the series will be a French miscellany and it will take place Aug. 16 at McPherson Playhouse.

Tonight's on-stage performance is the 18th century comedy, Turcaret, which will be repeated Tuesday and Thursday next week.

Monday and Thursday's shows will be Bernard Shaw's Androcles and the Lion, and Wednesday's and Saturday's the Elizabethan tragedy, The Duchess of Malfi.

Curtain time for all shows is 8 p.m.

Alma Trio Coming

Four concerts in the regular season of Victoria Symphony Orchestra have been designated Beethoven Festival concerts.

One of these falls on Nov. 1-2, and will feature the Alma Trio in the Beethoven Triple Concerto for piano, violin and cello.

The Alma Trio was organized in 1944 at the Alma Estate of Yehudi Menuhin in California. It presently consists of Andor Toth, violinist, Gabor Rejto, cellist, and William Corbett Jones, pianist, each of whom has an independent reputation as a concert artist.

In addition to the Beethoven work, the trio's violinist and cellist will perform with the orchestra the Brahms Double Concerto in E minor.

Following their symphony appearance the Alma Trio will play the "Archduke" Trio in an all-Beethoven recital at McPherson Playhouse, Nov. 4.

How Many Are Prepared to Speak for Canada?

By GEORGE OAKE

Reading this book is like watching a dimly remembered movie the second time around on television. You recall the theme but the details are fuzzy.

David Godfrey and Melville Watkins take readers through the last decade of domestic indifference reel by reel, starting with Walter Gordon, through the Mercantile Bank episode and the United States guidelines issue, which shook the Canadian dollar, to a final indictment of American economic imperialism. A host of familiar names make cameo appearances: Louis Rasminsky, Eddie Goodman, James Eayrs, Edward Safarian, Abraham Rotstein and even an arrogant J. S. Rockefeller, put in their two cents worth.

GORDON TO WATKINS TO YOU, Edited by Dave Godfrey and Melville Watkins. New Press, Toronto. Paperback. $3.50.

By themselves the collage of Hansard debates, poetry, press clippings, CBC interviews and U.S. corporate law would make the most eager editorial writer yawn. But presented as they are here, interspersed with interpretation, the effect is fascinating and peculiarly involving.

Bit player MP Gilbert Rondeau states the conflict in a House of Commons debate recorded on page 179: "Hence, after one century of Confederation, Canada finds itself controlled to the extent of 85 per cent by the Americans, to whom it turns over billions of dollars in profit each year."

With 178 pages behind you, including 20 pages listing deceased Canadian companies acquired by U.S. interests between 1963 and 1969, it becomes obvious why most of the bit players never make stars.

A few examples of recent U.S. takeovers in British Columbia bring it all back home: Grower's Wine Co. Ltd. acquired by Imperial Tobacco Company; Vancouver Life Magazine acquired by Alaska North West Publishing Co.; White Spot Restaurants Ltd. acquired by General Foods Ltd.; Vancouver Fancy Sausage Co. Ltd. acquired by Kraftco Corporation.

Gone with the wind.

Like the voluminous petticoats of a 19th century lady, the Canadian economy has been peeled off layer by layer. The only cries for national chastity came from Walter Gordon. And he was banished to the political wilderness in case he corrupted the market place of ideas.

According to the new nationalists, the Canadian market place of ideas has been closed for alterations and a new continental decor for some time now. So the questions arise: what did we do as our lady was stripped; where were our governments, and why were our leaders — political and intellectual — so silent?

Is it as Melville Watkins says, "There are too many among us whose self-interest lies in the disintegration of our country?"

It is a legitimate question in so far as the mild tax reforms proposed by Edgar Benson have brought screams of outrage from the chamber of commerce mentality that sometimes seems to dominate our national purpose.

Preparing the task force report on foreign ownership, Watkins writes that "when we handed them" (ministers like Mitchell Sharp and John Turner) "the final document, they said, what, what, I'm not going to advocate that."

WATKINS

In Watkin's words the report was not a radical document, "It said the multinational corporations run this country, so why don't we get them to run it better? Why don't we leave them the power but get more benefits for Canadians?"

Power, and who's got it, is a key concept to the new nationalists. And it is obvious that the multi-national corporations got it, not Social Credit MPs like Gilbert Rondeau. A powerful textile lobby has recently resulted in a surtax on imported shirts; drug prices in Canada are among the highest in the Western world. The lists of how industry influences government goes on and on.

"To redistribute income," according to the authors, "or try to, without redistributing power, doesn't work. That's why the whole furore over the white paper on taxation and the Carter Report is so senseless. Enact it tomorrow and the day after you'll find out it hasn't mattered."

French Canada has been talking in terms of "power" for years; by some tortuous Anglo-Saxon labyrinth a growing number of English Canadian academics have reached the same conclusion as Montreal's taxi drivers.

Along Quebec's Grand Allee and Montreal's Cote des Neiges young people, and increasingly the average worker, laugh bitterly about biculturalism and endless reports on bilingualism. "We want power," is the catholic refrain.

And power, according to Watkins and Godfrey, is vested in the great corporations more than government today. This is a debatable point after the Dennison Mines Affair in which the government prevented a private individual from selling much of Canada's uranium industry to an American firm. But then there was Ford of Canada trying to sell trucks to Communist China and a certain venerable financial house that moved securities out of Montreal on the eve of the Quebec election.

After reading this precise chronicle, many Canadians will be shocked to see how succeeding federal governments have avoided the foreign ownership issue with myriad studies, committees and platitudes. Even the weakest suggestion of government action always requires "further study."

Now the buck has been passed to the Trudeau administration. Two years of white paper blizzards and committee recommendations have rained down on a puzzled electorate.

To Watkins it may be another example of the old "further study" shuck that Canadian governments know so well. "... it is not necessary to be a paranoid or cynic to fear that the Trudeau government may make much of some new policy on ownership of resource industries while quietly acceding to a continental resource policy ..."

If past performances are any criterion, this observation is well-founded, and in what must rank as the supreme Canadian irony, Watkins' views have not only been rejected by the two traditional Canadian political parties, but by his own New Democratic Party as well.

There are some haunting echoes here. In 1963 Walter Gordon was termed "unrealistic" and a "starry-eyed idealist" by his own party. In 1970 that same party is adopting some of his proposals. Canadians have a peculiar habit of making heroes out of those they have hanged. The line stretches from Louis Riel to Walter Gordon. Who knows? By the year 2000 it may be safe enough to put Melville Watkins on a stamp, maybe a U.S. stamp.

RASMINSKY

Whatever place history affords Watkins and his wafflers, they have been responsible for goading more conservative politicians into putting the Canadian independence issue on the chopping block. And the whistle of the executioner's axe can be heard as the book winds up with two proposals for national independence.

Liberal MP Alastair Gillespie advocates "new federal powers to regulate economic activities in the national interest," namely the development of Canadian multinational corporations through Walter Gordon's nascent brain-child, the Canada Development Corporation. Watkins sees independence only through socialism.

Gillespie's views echo the current Liberal party line; the autumn session of Parliament will probably see the birth of the long-gestated Canada Development Corporation plus legislation to keep the tattered remnants of Canada's economy in domestic hands. Watkins sees this as a minimum — an official policy to be held aloft at election time while the selling-out continues in the board rooms.

Only time will tell who's right. But in blaming succeeding governments and being suspicious of the present one's motives Watkins forgets that government can only follow the wishes of the people. And affluent middle-aged Canadians — those who hold the remaining strings attached to the Canadian economy in a limp grip — consider socialism more of a threat than pollution.

This innate conservatism (or should we say greed?) has resulted in mounting consternation over the Trudeau administration's proposed mild economic reforms in taxation and foreign ownership. These people would gag on waffles.

Even more important than our domestic conservatism, Watkins seems to have a put-up or shut-up attitude towards Uncle Sam. A glance at world trouble spots shows that Uncle Sam puts up his planes and shuts up the nationalists wherever he smells socialism on this planet.

Perhaps there is no solution to the dilemma that history and geography have forced upon us. "The Beverley Hillbillies" are still going strong and "This Hour Has Seven Days" is long gone. That speaks for itself. How many of us will speak for Canada rather than our vested interests in the 11th hour remains to be seen.

Why Janet and John Can't Learn to Read

By BOB MITCHELL

In 1956 a Winnipeg housewife accidently discovered her own and other people's children could scarcely read after four years of school. They were to continue their education functionally illiterate.

Fourteen years later Mary Johnson has found out a lot about the workings of departments of education, school administrations and the teaching of reading. But the most important thing she has learned is that kids don't learn to read because somebody is making a buck to keep them illiterate.

PROGRAMMED ILLITERACY IN OUR SCHOOLS by Mary Johnson. Clarity paperback. $3.

She learned, for example, that some reading experts accepted as inevitable children's failure to read via the Curriculum Foundation Series, better known as "Dick and Jane."

"Their resignation was explained, perhaps, by the fact that many of these experts were also authors of the very reading programs by which the children were initially being taught to read."

In days before the textbook industry blossomed people learned to read and write by first learning the sounds of individual letters, then the sounds of groups of letters made when combined into words.

This method—phonics—was considered quite effective because if you knew what letters represented what sounds, presumably you could write and read words you had never seen before.

However, during the 1930s and 1940s phonics fell into disuse beause a different method—the sight method—was adopted in most of Canada and the United States. The Curriculum Foundation Series was adopted by the four western provinces in 1946.

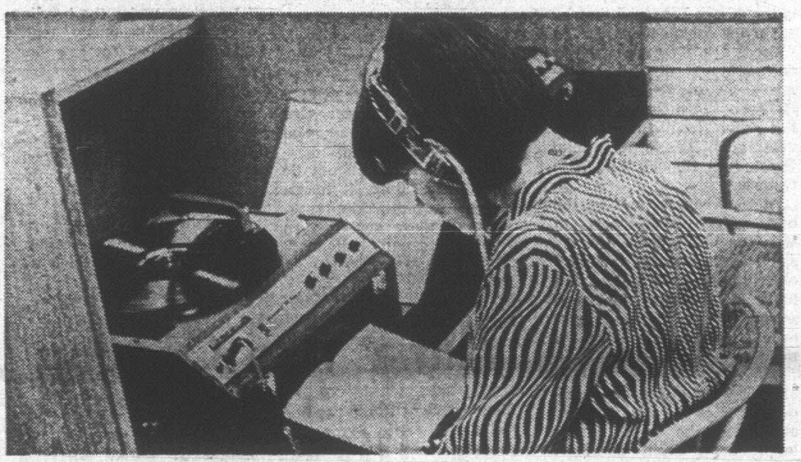
Dick and Jane have been replaced by the Canadian Reading Development Series or "Janet and John," now used in B.C. primary classes, but still the sight method to which Mrs. Johnson and a large number of parents and teachers are opposed.

The method seems to be based on memorization by rote and wild guessing. Mrs. Johnson was able to prove with tape recordings of children reading sentences she made up that after four years of school they were very poor spellers and readers.

With Dick and Jane children memorized by sight a number of basic words. However, when confronted with new words their most common complaint was "We haven't taken this yet."

It was supposed pupils could guess new words by comparing them with fragments of known words. For example, if they wanted to know how to read "swim" the teacher was supposed to say it "begins like swish, ends like him, and tells how we move in the water," as one teacher's manual put it.

Anyway, Mrs. Johnson and other amateur and professional reading experts produced all kinds of evidence showing the folly of the sight method. The result: Dick and Jane was was phased out and Janet and John, which embodied the same method, was introduced, although there was no research to show that was the logical thing to do.



"Unfortunately for the children," she writes, "there is more commercial profit in illiteracy than in independent reading."

The plot thickens when she discovers the main source of profit for the publishers is not the reader itself, which can be used for a period of years, but the workbooks, which are written in by children and therefore have to be renewed each year. They represent about 80 per cent of the cost of teaching reading in the primary years.

Phonics, says the indefatigable housewife, is commercially unsound because it can be taught without reader and workbook, and because children learn to read independently within an average of about six months.

Mary Johnson has worked about 14 years on the reading problem. She hasn't managed to change the official system, but she has established a network of contacts that extends out from Winnipeg all over North America, and yes, even to Victoria.

She's president of a new organization called Reading Methods Research Association, which takes most of its membership from the teaching profession. Proceeds from sale of the book will go to support the group.

Its aim is to encourage scientific testing of the effectiveness of initial reading programs.

"The cause of the reading problem is simple enough," Mrs. Johnson concludes, "a vital ingredient, articulated phonics, is missing from the educational diet of primary school children. The solution is so simple that an untrained mother can provide it in the home."

Growth of Militia To National Status

By R. H. ROY

For the first three decades after Confederation, Canada's Department of Militia and Defence was looked upon as one of the less important departments of government. With the signing of the Treaty of Washington in 1870, and especially with the increasingly cordial relationship between Great Britain and the United States, the militia was chronically faced with the handicap of poor pay, out-of-date weapons, limited training and constant political interference in military affairs.

MINISTERS AND GENERALS, by D. P. Morton. University of Toronto Press. $8.50.

It was an era when Canada depended ultimately on the power of Great Britain for her defence, and consequently accepted as General Officer Commanding a British Major General.

Ministers and Generals is the story of the interaction between the Canadian ministers and British generals between 1867 and 1905.

The generals had a difficult role to play. As professionals, they wanted to bring the Canadian militiamen to the highest state of efficiency. Had they been given the power and authority, they could have done so, but they quickly found that they were responsible to the minister, and further, that the militia was riddled with politics.

An officer's promotion could depend as much on his political affiliation as on his competence, and even in the matter of stores and equipfent, the supplier of the "right" political party insisted on getting the contract if his party was in power.

Discipline could be a problem too. In the early period especially, about 20 per cent of the members of the House of Commons were active or retired officers, and the "political colonel" used his influence to bring pressure on the G.O.C. through the minister, or perhaps to condemn him in the House to protest an action or order which, as a commanding officer of a regiment, he found unwarranted.

Professor Morton has delved deeply into the personal and professional backgrounds of the British generals and has brought to light a considerable amount of new and interesting material.

LAURIER

He has also shown their relationship not only with the Canadian ministers, but with the British Governors-General and, through them, with the Colonial and War Office officials.

As "agents" of the ruling power in London, the G.O.C.'s tried to bind the Canadian militiamen ever closer to imperial policy, but as servants of the Canadian government, they found their task increasingly difficult, especially in the Laurier era.

In describing the difficulties and triumphs of the various ministers and generals, Dr. Morton gives a very good account of the development of the militia from its colonial to national status. The rivalry between the rural and city battalions, the jealousy between the militia and the small permanent force, the apathy of the government towards its armed forces and the sad state of Canada's militia form the background to the theme of Dr. Morton's book.

Ministers and Generals is one of the most interesting accounts written on the Canadian militia in the post-Confederation era. It deals more with people and personalities than policies and strategy, and the author has brought to life an era which, expect for the Riel Rebellion, is all too often ignored or passed over lightly by military historians.

Stripping Away the Self Insulation

By STEVE HUME

We live and move in a cool, nuffled shadow-world of insulation.

We shield ourselves from social realities with laws, conventions, mores and taboos. Repression, psychosis, neurosis on a mass scale — these insulate us from the terrors and ecstasies of psychological reality.

The process of evolution has been a striving for insulation, for putting something between a brutal reality and our collective self. Technology, as it becomes more sophisticated, hastens the process of insulation.

PLEASE TOUCH: A Guided Tour of the Human Potential Movement, by Jane Howard. McGraw-Hill. $9.50.

It takes a lot to penetrate our insulated skins, yet some people are rebelling against such thickening of the outer layers of our selves, seeking avenues to sensitivity.

Jane Howard's book is about those people. A Life magazine staff writer, she toured the world's most advanced nation in search of what she calls the human potential movement.

It is a book about a year's experiences in the emotional involvement of what has become a rapidly evolving and expanding social experiment that seeks to put people back in touch with themselves, each other and their environment.

These sessions take place in the core of the big city and in the wilderness California. They are called T-groups, sensitivity training laboratories, encounter groups and human relations workshops.

With the methodical precision of a journalist, the author travelled to the most established and conservative to the wildest and most free-swinging experimental groups.

Her story of how these groups — part theatre, part therapy, part education, part business and part religion — stripped some of the insulation away from herself makes appealing reading.

A clear, crisp style and unusual flair for descriptive imagery consistently brings her message home — the movement is no longer a retreat for eccentrics, it is a direct causal agent of social change.

But she doesn't just paint a graphic description of a revolutionary way of bringing people together again, she also analyses the phenomenon with the sharp eye and deft cut of a surgeon.

There is praise, but there is also damnation. A fair hearing is given to the critics of sensitivity training as it has been developing lately — the groups can be exploited and lead to emotional problems at the personal level if not handled right.

The author admits that at times she felt she was a victim of fadists; that some sessions "seemed monumental games not of I've Got a Secret, but of I Had A Secret, and Here's What It Was."

"Personally," she says, "I rather like my secrets. I am disinclined to serve them up for a roomful of strangers."

But for all the bad trips she encountered at sensitivity sessions, there were the ones she found valuable and a source of growth and amazement at the richness of herself and others.

She lists at the end of the book many of the institutes and groups she found particularly constructive and moving in useful directions.

She also lists universities and national training laboratories where such sessions take place.

It is interesting to note that one of her extensive appendices is devoted to a list of some major corporations that have used various forms of sensitivity training.

It is the list of corporations, perhaps, that offers the most hope. The list ranges from Alcan through American Airlines, Dow Chemical, Procter and Gamble, Air Canada and the Illinois Central Railroad. There are some 44 familiar names on the list.

Now, if we can make the big corporations sensitive, maybe we stand a thin chance of beating out disaster at the wire.

Mercury Poisoning 'National Disaster'

By VICTOR COHN

WASHINGTON (WP) — Man's intake of poisonous mercury in what is now his slightly poisoned air, food and water has multiplied 10-fold in industrial countries in 35 years. And this may now be causing a wide, unrecognized "mercury epidemic," two scientists said here.

Among the symptoms, testified a Michigan chemistry professor — reading from a medical report — may be "anxiety, excessive self-consciousness, difficulty in concentrating, irritability, resentment of criticism, headache, fatigue, blushing and excessive perspiration."

In other words, replied Sen Philip A. Hart (D.—Mich.), "the symptoms increasingly experienced by many of us."

There was an explosion of laughter — by Hart and by an audience packing a hot, flood-lighted Senate environment subcommittee hearing room.

But the laughter soon stopped as the scientists told how low-level mercury poisoning may end in senility, and consumer advocate Ralph Nader called mercury pollution "a national disaster."

Nader called for "emergency" action by the President, Congress and federal agencies to ban mercury in much of industry and agriculture.

Sen Winston Prouty asked the President to designate mercury "a hazardous substance" to intensify federal action. Hart said that in mercury and other heavy metal pollution — for example, lead and arsenic — "we may now be experiencing the greatest environmental crisis in our history."

"The need for action is obvious," agreed Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania.

Both Michigan and Vermont have banned all commerical fishing, and measures to limit or bar commercial sport fishing have been applied by several other states in many waters.

The list of those whose fish, waters or wildlife have been affected has grown to 23, by current state and federal reports.

"I'm sure that as time goes on" and more officials look, "it will become 48 or 50," said Dr. Kavid Klein, chemistry professor at Hope College, Holland, Mich., a student of mercury for the past two years.

Mercury pollution's fresh history was related by Klein and Dr. Albert Fritsch, a University of Texas chemist introduced by Nader.

Only in 1934, Klein reported, a German chemist found that the average person's mercury intake was only 35 micrograms a week, mostly from natural sources. There is some mercury every place in nature, widely distributed.

In the U.S. today, Klein calculated, a person's mercury intake would be 300 micrograms a week if he ate no meat, 350 if he ate "a little meat" and 750 if he depended almost entirely on highly contaminated fish, at a level now barred from interstate commerce.

What has happened increasingly since 1934 is that industries of many kinds have been using mercury — to make paints, plastics, paper and many chemicals — and agriculture has been using it to treat seeds to kill fungi.

Much has entered food and the atmosphere, Klein said, now "concentrated in a few locations."

Mercury's health hazard, he conceded, is hard to measure, because mercury poisoning must be massive to show obvious results.

But he guessed that children of mothers who eat large amounts of contaminated fish — as Indians on some Canadian waters — might show signs that could be misdiagnosed as cerebral palsy or retardation.

The Food and Drug Administration recently set a safety limit in fish of .5 parts of mercury per million. But Klein told of international conferences on mercury attended by U.S. officials in 1966 and 1967, without action then.

Klein and Fritsch called for tougher federal food standards and stronger federal laws.

Nader went further. Some habitually polluting industrialists should be removed from their jobs, he said; some should be jailed; and some polluting firms should be forced into "environmental bankruptcy," akin to financial bankruptcy.

Barrett, who lives in Coquitlam, talks about the day-to-day life of a family actively involved in politics, about his former job as assistant warden at Haney Correctional Institution and his political ambitions.

Joplin, RN Provide A Stone for Bessie

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Blues-rock singer Janis Joplin and a registered nurse from Philadelphia have split the cost of a tombstone for the "Empress of the Blues," whose grave lay unmarked for more than 30 years.

A grey-black stone was unveiled Friday on the grave of Bessie Smith, who died in an auto accident in 1937. Only blades of grass had marked her grave in Mount Lawn Cemetery in Sharon Hill, near here, because her family lacked money to buy a tombstone.

Some 50 admirers gathered at the graveside Friday for the dedication of the stone, inscribed: "The greatest blues singer in the world will never stop singing—Bessie Smith—1895-1937."

Bessie started singing in a minstrel show in Chattanooga, Tenn., at age 13. Her career skyrocketed in the 1920s when she was reported earning $2,500 a week and recording such songs as Gimme a Pigfoot, Nobody Knows You and Money Blues.

WEEKEND'S TOP TV SHOWS

Tonight

JACKIE GLEASON, 7 p.m., Channel 8. (Repeat) The Honeymooners are off to Spain in this 1966 entry and their camera-snapping spree in the Straw Market opening is right up the Gleason-Carney clown alley. The rest of the hour is more predictable slapstick fun, as Ralph is conned by a gal into an innocent embrace that's photographed by her blackmailing sidekick.

RAY STEVENS, 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. Irreverence remains the basic theme of the summer variety series with Stevens and his group doing very nicely without big name guests. Comic Steve Martin, who amuses himself as well as viewers, leads the Slacks and other Irregular-Regulars. The big moments each week come in the song department and Mama Cass delivers "Hit Record" and Lulu squirms to "After the Feeling." Host Ray Stevens does "Proud Mary" and "One Way Ticket" before he is joined by the group for the rousing closer "Show Me."

MANNIX, 10 p.m., Channel 7. (Repeat). Fairly interesting murder case makes good use of TV replays, studio gadgetry and the presence of Don DeFore as a rasping TV commentator. DeFore's character is a cocky first-class rat, a man who reports the truth, or one-eighth of it, and he receives no love from hero Mannix. DeFore's scenes are the key ones, as the private eye attempts to clear twin sisters in a twisting murder plot tha is often hard to follow.

SATURDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, 9 p.m., Channel 5. "Silent Night, Lonely Night." (1969) This made-for-TV feature, about a brief interlude shared by two lonely people during the Christmas holidays in a New England college town, is the perfect example of what Hollywood terms a "woman's picture." Lloyd Bridges and Shirley Jones play the strangers who come together while each is trying to cope with his own personal problem — Bridges' wife is a mental patient and Miss Jones has discovered her absent husband has had an affair. Naturally, there are many sentimental exchanges that tug at the heartstrings, but the two stars are effective in difficult parts, and the great winter location shots at Amherst, Mass., add an authentic note.

HAWAII FIVE-O, 6:30 p.m., Channel 7. A kidnapper, $300,000 in ransom money and a murder are the main ingredients of tonight's mix in "The Devil and Mr. Frog."

TRUE ADVENTURE, 7 p.m., Channel 12. A Coast Guard ship is followed by the cameras through the Northwest Passage for a look at DEW line installations.

ONCE MORE WITH FELIX, 7:30 p.m., Channels 2, 6. Julie Felix is host for the show with guests Jack McGowran and the singing Dubliners.

CATHERINE McKINNON, 8 p.m., Channel 4. Ralph Cal Bostic, and Tommy Common.

Sunday

ISSUES AND ANSWERS, 1:30 p.m., Channel 4. Ralph Nader, a man who has both a profitable and rewarding career out of protecting consumers by taking on major corporations, is quizzed by newsman Bill Gill and ecology expert Bill Downs.

TO ROME WITH LOVE, 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. (Repeat). The old plot about a teen-ager developing a crush on an older man is on display tonight. Cute, freckled Penny (Susan Neher) lunches with an Italian movie actor and comes up with tse swoons. Penny's tomboy character has become the series' most engaging personality and she's in good form here.

WALT DISNEY, 6 p.m., Channel 2, 7:30 p.m. Channel 5. "Menace on the Mountain" (Repeat). More action in Part II as villian Albert Salmi and his army deserters outgun the civilian soldier who returns from war to find his farm has been taken by force. So it's up to his son (Mitch Vogel) to steal arms from a nearby Yankee camp, and the brave kid is caught in the process. Pace holds up nicely and young Vogel gives an appealing performance.

ED SULLIVAN, 8 p.m., Channels 2, 6, 7, 12. (Repeat). Ed's varied guest list offers something for everyone. Patti Page sings a medley of popular tunes; B. J. Thomas sings his hit, "Raindrops Keep Fallin' on My Head"; Hines, Hines and Dad offer a song and dance routine; Jacques D'Amboise of the New York City Ballet performs; and comics Norm Crosby and Robert Klein contribute routines.

FORSYTE SAGA, 9 p.m., Channels 2, 6. "The Afternoon of a Dryad" (Repeat). Absorbing and moving hour, the most poignant of the three thus far involving Fleur since her marriage to Michael. For one thing, as the scenes progress from one character to another, they hold together and deepen our interest in the developing saga. The depressions of Fleur and Michael yield to the sorrow of Wilfrid, and the subplot of Bicket and his wife's modelling career makes its impact in the story.

EVENING AT POPS, 10 p.m., Channel 9. "Veronica Tyler and the Pops: An Operatic Experience." Soprano Veronica Tyler joins Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops for an exciting evening of music ranging from Puccini to the Beatles.

THE BOLD ONES, 10 p.m., Channel 5. "A Thing Not of God." (Repeat). Very good episode. An attempt to tackle a contemporary problem which is reasonably effective and deserves an "A" for effort. A confused and sincere youngster, who has deserted from the army and sought refuge in a Catholic church, is forcibly abducted by two well-meaning soldiers, who intend to return him to the base where he may resume soldiering. In the scuffle, the parish priest is seriously injured. It is now up to the law to confront the situation and fis the blame. James Broderick is fine as the priest.

COMEDY TONIGHT, 7:30 p.m., Channel 8, 9 p.m., Channel 7. Daytime television is the prime target of a sketch on tonight's edition. Also a follow-up on that recent "Making of a Senator" routine as we watch "Dullman Goes to Washington." Host Bob Klein has a funny bit on half-time activities at football games and he also sings "The Unrequited Lovers' March."

RESTLESS WAVE, 4 p.m., Channels 2, 6. In today's special, second of three programs dealing with the Royal Canadian Navy, the RCN is followed through the first four years of World War II. First-hand accounts of Navy veterans are combined with film from the archives. Among the highlights are the sinking of HMCS Fraser, and an account of how it feels to be pursued by a German submarine wolf pack.

CHALLENGING SEA, 5 p.m., Channel 8. "The Multi-Hulls" takes a look at seagoing vessels equipped with more than one hull. Common examples are the outrigger canoe, the catamaran and the trimaran.

CANADA AT WAR, 10 p.m., Channels 2, 6. Budd Knapp is narrator for tonight's instalment which covers the period June-December 1944. Canadian divisions capture rocket sites at Pas de Calais and advance towards the Battle of the Bulge.

Loggers Halt Work in Cabano In Battle With Lumber Company

CABANO, Que. (CP) — All wood-cutting near this community has been suspended until the Quebec government makes a decision on how to resolve a conflict between residents and a lumber company operating nearby.

Kelvin Drummond, Quebec lands and forests minister, made the announcement Friday following meetings with local officials and citizens' groups involved in a dispute with d'Auteuil Lumber Co.

After meeting with the minister, Mayor Guy Michaud said he hopes all acts of vandalism against the company will end.

Residents of this town, 125 miles northeast of Quebec City, are angry over the company's refusal to build a wallboard factory in the area after being granted wood-cutting rights in nearby woods.

For the last week there have been demonstrations against d'Auteuil Lumber. Bridges and property belonging to the company were burned by demonstrators.

A decision on how to resolve the situation will be reached in Quebec City within two weeks, Mr. Drummond told reporters. He said a committee of government officials and representatives from the regional development council, the Catholic Farmers Union and the municipality will study the problem.

Accompanying Mr. Drummond to Cabano was Claude Simard, minister without portfolio who is attached to the Quebec department of industry and commerce.

WILL AID AREA

Mr. Simard said his department would do as much as possible to obtain new industry for the area.

Although Mayor Michaud said talks with the cabinet ministers were "frank, sincere and honest," not all of those involved in the conflict were satisfied with the visit of the government officials.

Joe Landry, president of the Cabano Survival Committee, said the visit "didn't bring anything specific to the population" and it was "not enough to calm the people."

Claude Desbiens, a member of the committee, said Mr. Drummond's plan is "more cream for the cats, promises and lies."

Before he made the announcement that he would "try to get all cutting suspended for one year while the government looks into the situation," Mr. Drummond was presented with a brief by the regional development council.

The brief insisted that d'Auteuil Lumber, owned by New Brunswick industrialist K.C. Irving, leave the area and that the local forest industry be taken over by a public corporation.

Mr. Drummond said he had met Mr. Irving in Quebec City Thursday. The company offered its co-operation in improving the situation here.

Bonn-Moscow Peace Pact Political Gain for Brandt

By PETER REHAK
AP News Analysis

BONN (AP) — Foreign Minister Walter Scheel's talks in Moscow ended with the earmarks of a West German foreign policy success that should give a boost to Chancellor Willy Brandt's government.

These concessions should take the wind out of the sails of the strong Christian Democratic opposition, whose barbed criticism of the government's Eastern policy has hurt Brandt's coalition of Social Democrats and Free Democrats.

Additionally, Scheel's public exposure during the talks should bring about a rise in the fortunes of the tiny Free Democrats, fighting for their political lives.

The text of the treaty has not yet been published. But Scheel's statements at the Bonn airport upon his return made it clear he was able to get the Soviets to accept German reunification as a goal of the Bonn government.

"Both sides negotiated with great seriousness," Scheel said. "I hope that on the basis of this treaty, our reconciliation with Eastern Europe will come nearer. The agreement opens good possibilities in many areas.

DOOR IS OPEN

"Implanted in the security of our alliance and our friendship with the West, we now have opened a gateway to the East. Through mutual renunciation of use of force we have reached a way of living together which leaves our right to self-determination untouched.

"We did not leave the Soviet government unclear about our view on the necessity to solve satisfactorily the Berlin question. We formally declared that the treaty would not be put into effect as long as such a satisfactory agreement is not reached by the Four Powers.

"Our right to self-determination and our national goal of German unity is beyond doubt."

Scheel said the treaty accepts the present borders of Eastern Europe, but does not stand in the way of possible changes at some future negotiations.

While most Germans do not believe they will see reunification, nor the return of pre-war Germany's eastern territories in their lifetime, they would not like to see the government give up such claims forever—especially without getting anything in return.

If the treaty protects West German positions at some future negotiations, gets some improvements for Berlin and improves Bonn's ties with Moscow, it is bound to find wide acceptance in West Germany.

Don't Have Too Much

A Bavarian band known as the Ratkapelle and a Scottish pipe and drum band from Moose Jaw known as the Sprigs O'Heather will share the 2:30 p.m. bill.

The 11-man Ratkapelle is directed by Bill Ratcliffe who found out all about oom-pah-pah during four years with the RCAF in Baden-Baden, West Germany.

And the Scots, in dress McDonald tartan, is an all-girl outfit that does drill and Highland dancing as well.

Crash Victim Identified

VERNON, B.C. (CP)—Patria Marie O'Brien, 10, of Ladysmith, B.C., was identified by police Friday as one of two persons killed Thursday in the head - on collision of two cars near here.

The other victim was Malcolm Risling, 17, of Vernon, whose sister Charmaine, 16, was in serious condition in hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick O'Brien, the dead girl's parents, were in critical condition Friday. Their sons David, 13, and Robert, 16, were in serious condition.

DOES THE HIGH COST OF DYING OFFEND YOU?

Are you one of the thoughtful ones who is concerned that your relatives may be swept with emotion into paying hundreds too much for your funeral, when such money could be put to far better use among the living? Are you disturbed by costly caskets, displaying of remains, etc? Would you like to sit down in complete privacy with a form we will mail you, and record NOW exactly what type of funeral or memorial service you would like . . . whether you wish friends to send flowers or donate to a charity of your choice . . . whether you would like to donate your eyes or other tissue to help the living? Would you like to see MAXIMUM funeral costs in print, instead of MINIMUMS? Then get our folder. This is not a society for the poor. It is a society for the THOUGHTFUL . . . in all walks of life.

THEY WANT JOBS, EDUCATION . . . . . . AND END TO DISCRIMINATION

Indian Stereotype Is Only in White Mind

Stories By Steve Hume

One of white society's favorite myths about the Indian is that he is lazy, shiftless, doesn't like work and prefers to take life easy on social welfare.

Research by a sociologist and an anthropoligist from the University of Victoria says that the stereotype is nothing more than a myth, and lays a good deal of the blame for current Indian problems at the door of white society.

In a paper entitled Expectations and Demands of Urban and Reserve Indians in Southwest British Columbia, Dr. Godwin Chu and David Stevenson argue that:

"The old stereotype about Indians taking life easy and not wanting to work is clearly untrue. Most of the Indians we interviewed wanted to work, but many could not find jobs.

"Their top priority demand seems to be jobs as well as vocational training that can better qualify them for holding jobs."

The demands and expectations of Indians, both on reserves and in urban settings, remain largely pragmatic and are relatively few, the paper says.

"Nothing in our data would support the impression current among some people that Indians would want to rely on social welfare.

"Quite on the contrary, our data suggests that most of those we interviewed wanted to be on their own. All they expected from the Canadian society in general, and the federal agencies in particular, seemed to be some amount of assistance, not in terms of give-away money, but in terms of training and jobs."

The fault lies, the paper argues, not necessarily with Indians but with the "perceptions about Indians held by the controllers of power and position, the givers of jobs, the renters of houses, and the teachers of basic English."

"While it is usually recognized that Indian people ought to have equal rights and privileges . . . . this problem has often been the subject of discussion rather than the focus of objective, empirical research.

"The Indian people can no longer be regarded as a depository of an old, indigenous culture to be observed, analyzed and perhaps even preserved.

"The Indians, other than being carriers of a unique and exotic culture, have as much right as anyone else in Canada to make an adequate living, to have a voice in the running of their own affairs, and to participate in the decision-making process in Canada as a whole."

The paper suggests that Indians expect better communication, more involvement and more interest from Indian Affairs, and they expect more job opportunities, education and vocational training from Canada Manpower.

Moving to the city reflects a kind of demand on the outside society, the paper says.

Most of the Indians moving to the cities "expected to get jobs or schooling.

"Of those looking for jobs, all but four were counting heavily on Canada Manpower to help them. None were depending on friends or relatives to get them jobs, contrary to the popular notion about mutual reliance among the Indians."

But in examining expectations regarding Canada Manpower counsellors, the researchers found that "just as many were concerned with discrimination as those concerned with the practical issues of efficiency and job assistance."

Most Indians interviewed wanted help from Indian Affairs with housing, financial difficulties and jobs. "Others wanted to see an end to discrimination and favoritism." Only a few wanted to see better efficiency.

"The problem of discrimination appears to be of greater importance to them than the working efficiency of the federal agencies concerned," the paper says.

The data gathered also indicate that education ranks high in the Indians' expectations of society.

"Most of them want their children to have at least high school graduation. To them, education appears to be the only way to get ahead in them was holding onto the them were holding onto the old myth that good luck is all you need to get ahead."

The paper also states that the researchers found evidence that the Indian is faced with the decision of choosing between two worlds — the Indian and that of white society.

For example, the data indicated that those Indians with "a high sense of kinship obligations" have low demands on Canadian society, "perhaps because they are too much bound by the kinship ties to care about what they can expect from the outside society."

Indians who have "succeeded in shedding their traditional kinship obligations," on the other hand, were more apt to have high demands on Canadian society, perhaps because they were no longer tightly bound within the world of the Indians.

"By moving to the city, these Indians have already taken a major step of bringing their demands to the attention of the Canadian society," the paper states.

Conducted last year on grants provided by both the university and Canada Manpower, the study used a questionnaire - interview method of gathering data.

Research was carried out in the field by Indian women, except for the field supervisor who was white. Some 56 urban and 40 reserve Indians were interviewed.

The majority of urban Indians interviewed were from Vancouver and Victoria, while samples were taken from 13 reserves in Vancouver Island and the lower mainland area.

East Saanich, Koksilah, Quamichan, Cowichan, Westholme, Sooke, Becher Bay and Chemainus were among those researched.

Most interviews, conducted in March, 1969, took an average of slightly more than one hour to complete.

The paper is to be published as a chapter in a volume which will be edited by Professor H. J. Massey of York University.

An Exotic Culture Amid Urban Pressures

Getting It Together With the B.C. Chiefs

Dressed casually in sweater and slacks, leaning back from his littered desk with a hot coffee in one hand and a telephone in the other, he looks a far cry from a revolutionary.

The federal department's public relations firm had just released a statement that some 16 young Indian students hired for the summer by the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs was in fact a government program to train them for jobs with Indian Affairs.

Wilson, as administrator of the union, didn't like the implications. The students, of which he is one, were hired by the union, for the union, and didn't want to be associated with the government, he said.

WILSON

His response was straightforward. A phone call to the ranking federal agent in the area. A demand for an apology. The raising of a little hell.

He hung up the phone and came back to the interview at the union's crowded office in the Squamish band's administrative headquarters in North Vancouver.

"This is the kind of thing they always do. You get something going well and then they screw you. And this is going to screw us with a lot of people because it infers we are being trained for departmental positions."

Wilson's militant tone is typical of the attitude towards white bureaucracies that exists within the fledgling union of chiefs which was born in November, 1969 at a Kamloops conference of chiefs.

Despite a tight budget of $60,000 scraped together from independent sources and "no-strings-attached" grants from the federal government, the union recently rejected an offer of money from the B.C. government's First Citizen Fund.

"We shouldn't have to go hat in hand," Wilson says, "we should be able to administer the money ourselves if it is ours."

"I don't think there could be anything more racist than Bennett's remark that he's responsible for the people's money, he can't turn it over to the Indians. It infers Indians aren't people in this province."

The primary aim of the union is to provide a unified voice for B.C.'s 47,000 officially registered Indians.

It consists of delegates from 188 bands in the province, a 14-member chief's council, a three-man executive committee and an administrative post.

A graduate of the University of Victoria in political science who will pursue a law degree at the University of British Colubmia this fall, Wilson is representative of the kind of yonug, militant Indian that currently works with the union.

Only three of the present 20-man administrative staff is over the age of 30, Wilson points out, and the energy and exuberance of youth are reflected in the union's drive to weld the fragmented, often isolated Indian bands of the province into a viable political and economic force.

"The biggest priority now lies in keeping the thing together. This unity thing is something you have to keep harping on. The union has come to the point where people recognize it is the last chance," Wilson says.

From its original staff of three, the union has expanded rapidly. Four students were hired May 1, and since then more students have been added.

"We have to expand even more," Wilson says. "We need another 15 staff—a health liaison officer and a communications worker are priorities."

Wilson says he's sad to leave what he describes as "THE Indian job in the province," but his law degree comes first.

"The union has guaranteed me a job as soon as I complete my degree four years from now. And that's the only place I'd want to work."

He sees the union as an "umbrella organization" that will unite B.C. Indians at a natural, grass-roots level.

"I like to compare it to a parliamentary system—you have elected representatives, the chiefs, and the union provides the parliament.

"I hate to compare it to a white system of government, but speaking with one voice is the over-riding philosophy."

The union, he says, will hopefully end the "lip-service co-operation" offered by white society in the past and encourage a real and co-operative effort to right past wrongs.

"We recognize that white people won't go away. We want true integration and not the disguised assimilation that's been offered in the past. We want an end to the missionary attitude.

"Despite our differences we should be able to get together. We're all people, after all. Under the skin we're all one.

"If the people of the province would live up to the principles they pay lip-service to, the Indian people would be a unified, financially independent minority with a strong voice."

The E&N: Small Gains While the Feds Decide

By Don Vipond

Will the CPR's Dayliner continue to roll between Victoria and Courtenay in the years ahead?

It's a decision in the hands of a federal agency now and it may be months before an announcement.

But there are some more immediate results from a public hearing on the question which concluded in Victoria Friday.

The railway has promised a new schedule which will allow connections with ferries and likely a bigger Dayliner.

The commission, a federal agency controlling the evolution of rail service in the country, has authority to:

● Permit CPR to discontinue the Dayliner service.

● Order it to maintain the service if the commission views it "in the public interest," and possibly award the railway a subsidy. The subsidy could run from a nominal $1 up to 80 per cent of the loss from operating the Dayliner.

The Dayliner united a diverse group of champions this week. Among those who stood up for it at the 2½-day hearing were:

Two provincial MLAs, one of them also a mayor, two other mayors, two aldermen, a writer, a former railway engineer, Indian band representatives, a former American lawyer, a labor officer, a bookkeeper, a psychiatrist, a university student and representatives from ratepayers' association, a regional district, local merchants and a tourist bureau.

In addition, lawyers holding watching briefs for the city of Victoria and the province of Ontario did some close questioning.

The hearing at the Law Courts Building was before the railway traffic committee of the Canadian Transport Commission. Panel members were D. H. Jones, chairman, and J. M. Woodard.

The application to discontinue the Dayliner service, because it is uneconomic, was made by the Canadian Pacific Railway on behalf of the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, which CPR owns. But just who was and who should have been making the application was the subject of a legal argument and is part of the picture the commission will have to resolve.

"We're here as long as necessary to hear everybody," Jones told a crowd of over 100 when the hearing got under way Wednesday morning. And everybody was heard.

At the conclusion of the hearing Friday the chairman said the committee will continue to accept written submissions for the rest of the month. It had received some briefs prior to the hearing.

The CPR, through counsel T. G. Mathers, made only a brief presentation on its application. The Dayliner service has lost over $100,000 in each of the years 1966 through 1968. That wasn't at issue. The commission has already audited and accepted operating loss figures.

The opposition hammered away on three main themes:

● The CPR is running the Dayliner service so inefficiently it couldn't help lose money.

● Profit or loss, the railway is obligated to provide the service under the terms of an agreement dating from before the turn of the century and involving a whopping land grant.

● The service is essential.

A sample of some of the arguments advanced by those who want to see the railway application refused:

Herb Bruch, Esquimalt MLA: "The policy of the CPR is quite obvious. They are trying by every means they can devise to lose money on passenger runs so as to make a case for dropping them . . .

"They have a 'what is good for Bull Moose is good for the country reputation . . .

"The grants to the E and N have a special status in that they were given in trust to Canada, with the agreement of a full service in return . . .

"It would be an unfair imposition on the taxpayer of Canada and especially the British Columbian to be taxed to subsidize a passenger service that has already been more than adequately subsidized by excessive land, timber and mineral grants as well as tax exemptions . . .

"The CPR has not been a good corporate citizen. They have proven incompetent and inept by failing to recognize the trends and changes of our times . . . I for one have no confidence in their intentions and policies and ask you to order them to fulfil their part of the agreement with the people of Vancouver Island . . ."

Paul Hutchison, Uvic student: "It is stated by officials of CPR that people have deserted the railway. It is quite the opposite . . ."

Margaret Kier, bookkeeper living in View Royal: "I'm making a plea from my heart because I just love that trip . . ." Of management of the Dayliner operation she added: " . . . this deadly lethargy has set in."

Duncan Mayor James Quaife: The Esquimalt and Nanaimo rail operation is "somewhat of a joke and nothing short of a farce . . ."

There are many elderly citizens on Vancouver Island, about 1,600 in the Duncan area alone, he said, for which the Dayliner is the main mode of transportation.

"It would appear that if anything is lacking in the Dayliner service it's good management . . ."

Mrs. Lydia Wilks of Qualicum Beach, representing the Bowser-Horne Lake and district ratepayers: "We are ever mindful of the (CPR grant) encumbrances on land against our title deeds . . ."

She suggested an increase to two trains daily, including Sunday, with dining car during the summer months. And the trains should originate in Courtenay, not Victoria.

John Smissaert, an American lawyer who has moved from San Francisco to Victoria: "It's too bad the CPR has developed such a negative attitude . . ."

After outlining successful rail tourist operations in the U.S., he offered to help design advertising material plugging the Dayliner trip and said he was ready to donate slides for post card promotion.

Donald Beaton of Qualicum Beach, chairman of the Nanaimo regional board, said he had watched since 1933 as the rail service deteriorated.

He proposed a two-year delay on the application to give Island communities a chance to make a united presentation.

Larry Ryan, secretary-treasurer of the Victoria Labor Council, argued the dominant factor is a legal agreement with the railway to provide the service.

Arthur Mayse . . .

WHILE WEST COAST trollers were having their troubles with Soviet trawlers this summer, Gulf of Georgia commercial fishermen were coping as best they could with an armada of a different sort. From advices received, they are still doing so.

According to David Prosser of 1124 Mt. Newton Cross Road, commercials who fish the Gulf are losing their tie-up spaces at island wharves to such a host of American pleasure craft as our waters have never carried before.

"They're everywhere," says Prosser, after a holiday voyage that took him and his family north as far as Stuart Island at the mouth of Bute Inlet.

"Last year, we found it interesting. This year, it's an epidemic, and the fishermen aren't at all happy about it. They used to be able to count on wharf space. Now, they're sometimes forced to tie up four abreast."

Dave Prosser, a lean pipe-smoker, is a business machine salesman whose idea of a perfect summer vacation used to be a cruise among the islands. In the second week of July, he set out with his wife and two daughters in his 26-foot Danish Spitzgatter, "Judy."

They followed the Gulf Island chain to Northwest Bay, then crossed under sail to the mainland. It was then that they began to realize the extent of the American pleasure-boat invasion.

"There weren't too many on the Vancouver Island side," Prosser told me, "because a lot of American boatmen prefer to avoid a Gulf of Georgia crossing. But from Powell River on, wherever we put in, U.S.-registered boats had virtually taken over."

They swarmed north from Washington, Oregon and California ports. Some came from Idaho—Prosser figured these must have been trucked or trailered over the mountains—and one cruiser even sported Montana registration.

Dave Prosser is by no means anti-American. As a boatman himself, he sympathizes with American sport sailors whose only good U.S. West Coast cruising ground centres on the San Juan Islands.

"Still," says he, "when you see 80 or 90 per cent of cruisers flying the American flag, you begin to feel like a stranger in your own land. When you spot a Canadian flag, you wave."

The irony, as he sees it, is that the visitors, by their numbers, are destroying the solitude and the sense of wilderness they came north to find. They are creating problems that can't be ignored.

There's the matter of those over-crowded landings. The federal government has rebuilt and enlarged a number of wharves.

But the extra space provided fails to meet the demand imposed, and fishermen who depend on those landings become increasingly hostile.

Since wharf-tending is casual and garbage disposal facilities are rarely provided, water and shore pollution increases.

"The garbage goes overboard," Prosser said. "I doubt there's a beach this side of Queen Charlotte Sound that doesn't have its beer cans and plastic bottles."

Part of the Up-coast grumble is that American spending is largely confined to boat fuel and beer. The cruiser parties bring their own supplies, and, according to islanders the Prossers talked with, load up on oysters and salmon.

What should Ottawa do about a situation that can be expected to grow more acute each year?

Prosser's suggestions:

Levy a tax, to be used for wharf maintenance and control, on U.S. pleasure craft at their point of entry into Canadian waters. Install garbage disposal facilities—if such are provided, boatmen will use them.

Set up a water-borne tourist patrol. It's needed now, and will be urgently required if the Gulf of Georgia becomes a federal marine park.

And his summation:

"We're taking in next to no tourist revenue from this American cruiser congestion, and we're losing a great deal in the quiet, the unspoiled beauty, the solitude that could be found up there even a few years ago."

That, Dave Prosser tells me, is why he means to take spring or fall cruising holidays in future.

His decision formed on the evening he dropped hook in an anchorage where only waterfowl voices once were heard. The inevitable U.S. cruiser pulled in on his heels. From it presently rolled the strains of an organ, played plenty fortissimo.

"I've nothing against organ music in its place," says Dave, "but we'd sooner have listened to the ducks."

Gallery of Beautiful Brides . . .

Miss Frith's and photographer Jorgen Swendsen are joining forces in starting something which we consider quite terrific . . . and about which you'll doubtless be hearing more . . . It's a project called "Gallery of Beautiful Brides" . . . and we're sure that every girl who is altar-bound . . . or even just contemplating matrimony . . . will want to get in on it! . . . On Tuesday, Aug. 20, at 7:15 p.m., in Miss Frith's store . . . the first informal showing of wedding fashions will be held . . . and you're all invited! . . . Bridal gowns . . . bridesmaids' dresses . . . ensembles for mothers of bride and groom . . . stunning going-away outfits . . . will be modelled for your delight and delectation . . . Once each month, hereafter, a similar bridal fashion show will take place . . . The next thing is, brides who buy their gowns at Miss Frith's and have their wedding pictures taken by Svendsen, will all be registered . . . and once a month one of these will be selected and will have her picture used in all advertising during the following month! . . . So you see, there'll literally be a Gallery of Beautiful Brides . . . and you may well be one of them! . . . Don't on any account miss the first bridal fashion show at Miss Frith's on Aug. 20 . . . Miss Frith Fashions, 1619 Douglas St., 383-7181.

Irish fashion has performed a meteoric rise from cottage industry to multi-million dollar world trade.

Beautiful shoes by Bally of Switzerland . . .

High up on the list of the world's finest shoes is the name Bally . . . those beautiful shoes from Switzerland . . . obtainable only in the most exclusive stores . . . We've known for some time that Munday's were planning to carry them this year . . . and could hardly wait for their arrival . . . Well, they're here now . . . not only the shoes themselves, but handbags made especially to go with them . . . perfect matches in leather, color and styling! . . . These Bally shoes for fall have much higher heels than we're used to seeing . . . set back and squared off for a light, graceful look . . . They're all leather-lined, with uppers fitting high around the top line, and gored to literally caress the foot . . . Appropriately enough, one style is named "Caresse" . . . an olive green glove-soft suede with an ornamental one-eyelet silk tie . . . "Halma" . . . in black or brown suede . . . has a big buckle trimmed with grommets . . . "Vitry" is black patent with a brown suede top in spat effect . . . and there's a fourth style in lustrous brown patent which hadn't arrived at this writing, but will likely be in when you read this . . . Price of these elegant, beautifully fitting and originally styled Bally shoes is $48 . . . Handbags cost $37 . . . except for the brown patent, which is a bit bigger, and is tagged at $46 . . . Available now . . . and exclusively . . . at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Fit and Fashion combined in these dresses . . .

Have you ever owned a favorite dress which fitted superbly from the first moment you tried it on . . . and continued to do wonderful things for your figure . . . and your morale . . . every time you wore it? . . . Chances are good it carried the Deja label . . . because in fit, finish and styling, there isn't a finer dress made than a Deja . . . manufactured right here in Canada . . . and priced well within the bounds of reason . . . Wilson's, you'll be happy to know, have ordered quite a number of Deja dresses, pantsuits and costumes . . . some here now . . . others on the way . . . possibly on display, in fact, when this column sees the light of day . . . A strikingly chic Deja pantsuit was in Wilson's window last week . . . a grey double-knit outfit with long sleeveless tunic trimmed with gold . . . gold striped jacket, and superbly fitting pants . . . Understated elegance is the only way to describe the artfully-cut dress with brown, grey and tangerine stripes . . . or the grey, white and camel knit, printed with a chevron design and trimmed with a narrow wool braid . . . If Wilson's haven't your size on hand, they'll order it for you to arrive in jig time . . . and most styles may be had in sizes from 6 to 20 . . . so if you've ever despaired of finding smart clothes 6 to 20 . . . W & J Willson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Brand new concept in fiberglass draperies . . .

Many fiberglass draperies . . . while desirable from several points of view . . . have been pretty gucky-looking in the past, we've always thought . . . For one thing, the pattern shows right through . . . and lining them defeats the whole purpose . . . But in Standard Furniture this week we saw a brand new concept in fiberglass draperies . . . full-bodied, rich-looking fabrics to which a white fiberglass lining has been bonded . . . so you see a nice, clean white from the outside . . . This bonded lining also increases the stability of the fabric . . . which, at the moment, comes in solid green, gold, orange or ivory with a textured pattern running through . . . These new fiberglass draperies . . . with pleated tops, complete with hooks . . . are hand-washable, require no ironing . . . they're shrink-proof, sun-proof and fire-proof . . . and you can get them in any size you choose . . . enough to cover 4 feet of window costs a mere $16! . . . Easy to shorten yourself, too, if need be . . . Only Standard have these . . . and we think you'll like them very much . . . On our visit the other day, we saw some very attractive curtain fabrics, too . . . uncrushable, washable, perma-press, very soft fabrics in imaginative designs . . . priced at $2.25 and $2.50 for a 45" yard . . . Some of the designs are great for summer dresses . . . which is exactly what many women are buying them for! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 383-5111.

Square Neckline

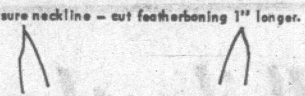
When it comes to creating beautiful necklines, designer Biki of Milan has no peers.

She not only knows the secret of cutting a most feminine and becoming neckline, but even more importnat, she knows how to effectively control the more difficult ones.

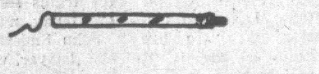
Of all the lovely necklines, the wide square is without doubt one of the most dramatic and flattering. Yet this is one that requires control to retain its clean pure lines.

Whether the side square is cut demurely high or revealingly low, the method of control is the same. To eliminate any possible sag, droop or gap, all it takes is a brilliant bit of ingenuity and a length of featherboning. It really works beautifully — try it and see!

1. Cut a length of narrow featherboning 1-in. longer than the horizontal front neck edge.



2. Cover featherboning with a casing of lining fabric. If lightweight fabric is used, cover with matching fabric. Turn in raw ends of casing and slip-stitch



3. Sew covered featherboning to inside of dress just below neck edge, sewing casing against facing or lining.

Them As Pays, Stays

TORONTO (CP) — Three Toronto researchers say a study has shown that women whose health insurance pays the most are kept the longest in hospital after giving birth.

The three report their findings in the current issue of Canadian Hospital, the journal of the Canadian Medical Association.

They are professors David Hewitt and Jean Milner of the department of epidemiology and biometrics at the University of Toronto and Anne Pettypiece, formerly with the Metropolitan Toronto Hospital Planning Council.

The researchers say the study of Toronto hospitals showed a marked difference between the length of stay by patients with minimum hospital insurance and those who had additional coverage that paid for more expensive rooms.

They also say some hospitals kept maternity patients, rich and poor, far longer than others did.

One hospital, they say, kept 92 per cent of maternity patients more than five days. Another kept only 23 per cent of such patients longer than five days.

The study showed that women with standard ward insurance or whose bills were paid by welfare were 1½ times as likely to go home early in at least six hospitals.

Dr. D. J. Twiss of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission said the commission "is having a look" at the situation described by the study.

DEAR ABBY . .

See It Right

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of two daughters. Cynthia is 18, Claudia is 13. Cynthia has had to wear eyeglasses since she was nine years old. When she became 15, she asked for contact lenses. We felt that they were quite expensive, and possibly hard to manage, so we put her off until her 18th birthday. After she got them, her whole personality changed. She adjusted to them quickly and it has improved her appearance 100 per cent. To be perfectly honest, Abby, we are sorry we didn't let Cynthia have them when she first asked.

Claudia also has been wearing eyeglasses since she was nine and now she is begging us for contact lenses. We want to give them to her, but Cynthia is up in arms, saying she had to wait until she was 18, and if we get contact lenses for Claudia before she is 18, she will never forgive us.

We have tried to tell Cynthia that parents make mistakes, too, and we are sorry we didn't give her contact lenses sooner, but now that we know how much they do for a young girl we want Claudia to have them now. Please, Abby, tell us how to handle this. We love both girls equally, but now Cynthia accuses of favoring Claudia—New Haven Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: If you make Claudia wait until she is 18 for those contact lenses because of Cythia's threats, shame on you! Cynthia knows her demands are unreasonable. Get Claudia the lenses now. Cynthia will get over it.

DEAR ABBY: Please set us girls in the office straight about a recent letter. Did you mean a husband actually tied his wife up with ropes to get his kicks? Or did you mean that wife felt like she was "tied up" in ropes?

We could understand how a man would want his wife to put on sheer lingerie and high heels, but tying her up with ropes for fun didn't make any sense to us.—No Names in Rock Hill, S.C.

DEAR NO NAMES: The man actually tied his wife up with ropes. This is a fetish, and not as unusual as you think. Many wrote to chastise me for my answer. The wife asked if her husband could be "dangerous?" I replied, "Your guess is as good as mine, but I wouldn't stick around too much longer to find out."

I am aware of far-out fetishes, and know that many are harmless sex play, with which I have no quarrel, if both parties find it fun. But when a wife tells me she is terrified, but her husband insists on her submitting to that kind of "play," I say, run for the nearest exit!

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my daughter. She is married to a good man, has four lovely children, but she has lost all interest in her home and family. She rarely goes out because she's so overweight she doesn't want anyone to see her. There is no work done in her home unless I help her out occasionally.

Her children bathe, dress and feed themselves. They even do the marketing for her while she sleeps. (The oldest is 10 and the youngest is six.) Her in-laws have given up on her and her husband is thinking of leaving her and I can't blame him.

This girl is only 29. She can sleep 20 hours out of 24, and often does. What do you suggest?—Sad Mother.

DEAR MOTHER. The poor woman needs help—not criticism. No normal, healthy woman sleeps 20 hours out of 24, and neglects her home and family in the manner you describe. She's sick. "Helping her out occasionally" is no help at all. Get that young woman to a doctor.

DEAR ABBY: I am 12 years old and in the 7th grade. My parents make me go to bed at 8:30 on school nights. This is very embarrassing to me when someone at school asks me if I saw the good movie on TV last night and I have to say no.

All the other kids in my class can stay up intil 10 p.m. or 10:30. I'm sick of it.

There is a girl who knows me real well and she's spread it all over the whole school that I go to bed at 8:30. What time do you think I should go to bed, Abby? I have heard that dumb old saying, "Early to bed, early to rise, makes a person healthy, wealthy, and wise," but it hasn't done much for me, and besides, they didn't have television then.—To Bed With the Chickens

DEAR TO BED: Of all the reasons for wanting to do something, "because everybody else does" is the weakest. Every family has its own life style, and your bedtime should be when your parents say it is. (P.S. Cheer up — Summer vacation is here.)

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write too ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Letter writing can be a breeze. For Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Talkative Moms Encourage Children to Speak Easily

TORONTO (CP) — Mothers must talk frequently to their children to prevent them from having language difficulty, says Dr. Alex Bannatyne, director of the Bannatyne Learning Centre, Miami, Fla.

The psychologist told the Canadian Association for Children with Learning Disabilities Thursday that many children have language problems—written and oral—if they have disinterested, depressed or angry mothers.

He told of one woman who was depressed because her oldest son was killed and then her father died. She rarely spoke to her other son. By the age of nine the boy could not read and hardly spoke.

He said children often turn away from words when they have angry mothers who use abusive language. It was essential that a child be spoken to frequently up to the age of four.

After the age of six it was more difficult to teach a child language skills although some can be salvaged at kindergarten even though they come from silent or abusive homes.

But for many such children learning English is like learning a new language. Teachers who were fluent forgot they themselves had trouble in learning new words, just as the children do.

Dr. Bannatyne criticized the delay in teaching a second language until a child reaches hfgh school. Children learned language through their ears.

He told of the children of a friend of his who are truly trilingual and switch from language to language without mixing them up. One parent is English, the other is German and the family lives in the French-speaking section of Switzerland.

INHERENT DIFFERENCES

"They had no formal training," he said. "It was just a case of people talking to them."

Another speaker, Dr. Edward Frierson of the Nashville Learning Centre, Nashville, Tenn., said there were sometimes subtle impairments in school children of which teachers should be aware.

Teachers knew something was wrong but preferred to think the children could do better if they worked hard. They did not realize there were sometimes inherent differences in the nervous system that can interfere with learning.

Angie Nall of Beaumont, Tex., an educationist and conference delegate, said in an interview that television can be harmful to children with learning disabilities.

Miss Nall said the flickering effect of television can heighten disorders.

HEY, THAT WASN'T IN THE SCRIPT

Centre Offers Hope to Frustrated Learners

By ROBIN BURGESS

In one corner of the room a small boy was typing, slowly and carefully, oblivious to the buzz of children's voices all around him.

From his vantage point on the other side of a window fitted with one-way glass, Dr. Ron Tinney explained briefly what was happening.

"That child has a writing-language kind of problem. He can read just fine but we found he can't complete a school assignment because of problems with motor skills."

In school the child has faced the constant frustration of knowing the correct answer but being unable to handle the next step — writing it down, said Tinney.

If he can be taught to type, even 15 to 20 words per minute, a much simpler motor requirement than writing, he will be able to function all right, said Tinney.

Dr. Tinney, of the University of Victoria education faculty, is a remedial consultant at a unique new centre in Victoria that is offering children with learning problems another chance to succeed in school.

The Victoria Learning Assistance Centre, the only one if its kind in the Pacific Northwest, was opened last November as a joint venture of the Victoria School Board and the Uvic education department.

The centre is intended to act both as a training and a service facility, explained Tinney. Its purpose is, first of all, to diagnose and then, if possible, remedy children's learning difficulties, and secondly, to give university education students a chance to do some practical research, he said.

INTENT ON WORK

He indicated the scene behind the one way glass again. All over the room children were working intently, typing, wiring on the blackboard, tossing rubber numbered pegs, each under the supervision of an individual instructor.

All the instructors are university education students who holding a teaching certificate.

Each student is assigned one "problem" child for a period of five weks. During that time the student instructor works with his child for several hours each day trying to pinpoint the root of his learning difficulties and find someway of helping him to overcome it.

Dr. Tinney and his associate Dr. Peter Newell, from Seattle, act as consultants and the students use textbooks as resource material but other than that they are on their own.

At the moment, said Tinney, the centre is handling two classes of 20 children aged about six to fourteen years. ("The younger the child the better chance to helping him.")

He outlined some common sources of children's learning difficulties: bad visual or auditory perception; bad eye-hand co-ordination; faulty language formulation; inability to organize, both mentally and concretely.

FEAR FAILURE

The children who come to the centre are all referred by the learning assistance teacher at their respective schools, Dr. Tinney explained.

Before any remedial work is begun the child is first run through a "diagnostic work-out" that generally takes from eight to 10 hours.

"The biggest problem we face here at the centre is trying to get rid of the child's fear of failure," said Tinney.

"These children have reached the point where they're afraid to try. They are convinced that they can't learn."

"The instructors take the children out and get them skipping or playing ball. Then the moment we see they can do something we say, 'Hey! You can learn. See, you learned how to skip rope'."

Having an adult encourage him and act interested in him goes a long way towards improving the child's self-concept or image of himself, said Tinney.

If the child seems to be responding to treatment after five weeks the sessions at the centre are discontinued.

The child's teacher is then given specific, practical recommendations on how to deal with the child in the classroom to ensure his learning progress continues.

"Ideally we hope to be able to check each child after a month to see how our recommendations are working. This is very important. We can't just throw these children back at the schools and say 'OK. We've done the miracle cure. You're on your own','" said Tinney.

The school board has provided the facilities for the centre — four main rooms in the lower floor of the Ewing Building at the Institute of Adult Studies.

Ted Callbeck, co-ordinator of special education for the Victoria School Board demonstrated some of the modern teaching aids that are available to the instructors.

First, he said, are the one-way windows that allow an instructor to observe his own child and guage, for example, how long the child can work at one activity unattended.

MECHANICAL AIDS

The University of Victoria has supplied the centre with a stock of mechanical teaching aids such as language master, a piece of equipment that records the child's voice on a card with the phrase to be repeated printed on the front in large type, said Callbeck.

So far, response from the schools has been extremely enthusiastic, he said.

Over 100 children were referred to the centre for the summer session though 40 was the maximum they could handle. In September, he said, the centre hopes to be able to hire two full-time staff members.

"I would estimate about five to eight per cent of all the children in the school system have learning difficulties of some kind. You can see how crucial the need for this kind of centre is," said Callbeck.

In the top picture, Children at the Victoria Learning Assistance Centre concentrate on mastering the tricky art of standing upright on balancing disks. The disks, along with the plastic tunnel in the background and ball or ring-toss games, help the instructors evaluate any motor skill problems while the child learns to feel the pride of accomplishment. In the lower picture, an instructor encourages a child to learn to express himself in writing. The Centre is the only one of its kind in the Pacific Northwest. (Bill Halkett Photo)

NURSING EDUCATION IN A CHANGING SOCIETY, edited by Mary Q. Innis, was compiled to mark the 50th anniversary of the University of Toronto School of Nursing. The Ontario emphasis of many of the articles is therefore understandable.

However, there are contributions which would be of value to all nurses as an overall look at nursing in Canada.

Oswald Hall, sociology professor, weaves the nursing profession into the tapesty of Canadian society; Dr. Helen K. Mussallem, executive director of the Canadian Nurses' Association, projects nursing in the year 2020; and Dr. Morley A. R. Young considers nursing education from his vantage point as a general practitioner.

These authorities, plus others, provide an abstract description of a specific profession. (University of Toronto Press, $2.50).

Who Influences Government Most?

BY THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

(World Copyright Reserved

Despite Prime Minister Trudeau's election promises of "participatory democracy" the average Canadian has little belief in any influence average people have on the future of their country. Almost seven in ten (67 per cent) of the voters say they have practically no weight at all. This point of view is almost the same as in Great Britain, where 71 per cent hold the same opinion.

In Canada, big business tops the list of groups having most effect of what happens to the country (67 per cent). In Britain, Labor is considered most important (55 per cent). Canadians give their prime minister a level of 56 per cent as having great influence; in Britain 49 per cent think this is true.

A similar study in both countries was based on the question:

"How much influence would you say these groups have on the country's future — the prime minister, cabinet ministers, the average MP, big business, labor unions, people like yourself?"

The table below shows how, in the main, voters in both democracies rate the importance of the various groups at much the same level, with some significant difference.

Political Pact Sought in Laos

By GEORGE ESPER

SAIGON (AP) — Diplomatic sources in Saigon report indications that the Soviet Union is urging a political settlement for the war in Laos, and has quietly told North Vietnam it will not increase its military aid.

"Russia has told North Vietnam to cool it in Laos and pull out its 30,000 troops in the northern part of the country," one source said.

Diplomats in Vientiane and Saigon have expressed cautious optimism that preliminary peace talks now under way will eventually lead to some kind of a settlement, but that it will be a long process.

Sources said the Soviet Union is anxious to get a settlement in Laos for two reasons:

—The Soviet Union has an embassy in Vientiane and recognizes the Laotian government of Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma, whose adversaries are the North Vietnamese-backed Communist Pathet Lao. The Soviet Union is co-chairman with Britain of the Geneva agreements that guaranteed a neutral Laos and set up a coalition government dividing power among the Communist, anti-Communist and neutralist factions. Russia backed Souvanna Phouma as the neutralist leader.

—The Soviet Union wants to diminish the influence of China in Laos and elsewhere in Indochina.

Sources said the Pathet Lao apparently have softened their latest bargaining position, proposed full discussions among all Laotian factions without the precondition of a halt in all U.S. bombing.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Thunder storms which were numerous Friday in the central and northern interior dissipated overnight. As the upper level disturbance continued eastward a band of showers moved through the Okanagan overnight and was expected to reach the Kootenays today. Behind the system rising pressures and drier air gave an improvement to most regions today with sunshine over much of the interior.

Along the coast cloud predominated with sunny periods in the south coast and a few showers in the north coast. Another minor system now east of the weather ship will move towards Vancouver Island and is forecast to hold cloud into coast regions through Sunday. Temperatures will remain much the same along the coast and show some warming for Sunday in the interior.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

In the town of Nadi (pronounced Nandi) in the Fiji Islands, I met a Chinese woman of advanced years who was known all over the area for her thoughts and sayings about the weather. Both the Fijians and the Indians (Hindus) liked to listen to her stories.

She talked to me one sunny day as I was waiting for the time to pass before I boarded an aricraft for Honolulu. Her ideas were not at all scientific. You and I think that disease comes from germs. She knew that disease is related to the stars and the seasons.

The Chinese woman, her wrinkled face and gnarled fingers alike animated by her thoughts, told this story to me:

"In ancient China, the people of all provinces believed that five of the elements found in nature corresponded to the seasons and thus in turn to the five human organs. Wood and the spring of the year were identified with the liver. Fire and summer were of the heart; metal and autumn were of the lungs and water and winter of the kidneys. The last 18 days of each season represented the spleen."

She said it worked for her and her friends.

Police Court

A pregnant 20-year-old woman was sentenced to a total of four months in prison and two years probation Friday when she appeared in provincial court on two charges of forgery involving seven counts.

Marjories Jamieson of 1653 Fell, had already pleaded guilty to the seven counts when she appeared at an earlier sitting of court.

She first appeared before Judge J. A. Byers for sentence on a three-count charge and was sentenced to four months.

On the second charge she appeared before Judge William Ostler, who imposed a concurrent four month sentence on each count, but lengthened her probationary period to two years.

Court was told that all the offences took place between June 27 and July 3 as a result of influence from a friend.

"I am firmly of the view ... that children should not be born when the mother is in custody," Ostler said in imposing the concurrent sentence.

He was told she would return home to live with her parents when she got out of prison and would try to straighten out her life.

Anderew Robb, 52, address unknown, who pleaded guilty Thursday to four counts of theft under $50, was sentenced Friday to a year on each count to be served concurrently.

Court was told Thursday that Robb had served two one-year sentences since 1967, and had been released from prison only in December.

A charge of attempted theft against Douglas Charlie, 25, of 710 Kings, was dismissed by Ostler because he said the prosecution had not established beyond a reasonable doubt that Charlie had tried to steal from a gas station cash register July 31.

Court was told by a prosecution witness that Charlie pressed buttons on the cash register while making a telephone call in the service station office. The prosecution alleged he was attempting to enter the till.

The witness, an attendant at the station, said he knew Charlie because he sometimes bought gas there.

Charlie, however, told court: "I don't own a car. I can't even drive a car."

Ostler said that "while sitting waiting to make a phone call the accused was fiddling with the buttons on the cash register," but ruled that did not provide enough grounds for a charge of attempted theft.

Carol Block, 22, of no fixed address, was sentenced to seven days in jail by Byers on two charges of theft under $50.

Court was told she stole two air mattresses valued at $15.90 from Jeune Brothers July 30, and later the same day stole $11.50 in merchandise from Eatons.

Mosport Crowd 'Well Behaved'

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP) — A crowd estimated by provincial police at between 40,000 and 50,000 was jammed into Mosport Park today on the second day of a weekend rock festival.

But a police spokesman said the youthful crowd "was very well behaved."

Although drugs were being sold openly, uniformed policemen did not enter the park Friday and a spokesman said police would stay out unless trouble erupts at the site 40 miles northeast of Toronto.

Nude bathing, marijuana smoking, LSD and amplified music was the main occupation of the youths Friday night. Some even watched the trials for the motorcycle races to be held today.

ROCK GROUPS PLAY

The main entertainment started late in the afternoon the stand, followed by such major groups as Delaney, Bonnie and Friends, Melanie and Jethro Tull.

Earlier court manoeuvrings centred on the provincial government's attempt to stop the festival, and uncertainty over whether major groups actually would perform, had been forgotten.

About 300 provincial police officers patrolled in shifts outside the 500-acre park area, while about 250 uniformed private security guards maintained a discreet presence in the park itself.

"We're treating it as a normal police function. So far there has been no trouble," said provincial police Constable Ray Brooks, attached to the force's news bureau.

Police reported only four arrests on drug charges, all young Americans arrested at nearby Newcastle while on their way to the park. No arrests were reported in the park itself.

MARSHAL MEDICS

The Ontario Addiction Research Foundation was working in co-operation with the emergency services unit of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission in supplying clinical, nursing and counselling services.

Provincial Health Minister Thomas Wells toured the festival site Friday and said later he would bill the promoters at least $30,000 for health services.

Bill Huard, secretary-treasurer of Productions Sportives Ville Marie Inc., the festival promoters, said he didn't think any bill from the government would be justified.

"So far as I'm concerned, we are all paid up."

Assisting the ARF under the direction of Dr. Norman McNally and Lawrence Purdy, director of the foundation's Metropolitan Toronto region, were three free youth clinic groups associated with the ARF.

Doctors and aides at the three medical tents were not keeping a count of the bad trippers, but said it had been quiet during the day and increasingly busy as night wore on.

Richard Elston, administrator of Memorial Hospital at nearby Bowmanville, said three or four bad trippers had been treated there, including a 15-year-old girl. The hospital was placed on an alert status.

The drug business was described by one reporter as being "really flourishing—wide open."

One youth took over an empty concession booth, wrote the word Acid (LSD) across the front and did a thriving business.

Other enterprising youths were selling marijuana, assorted narcotics, Mickey Mouse sweaters and underground newspapers.

The mill pond at the village of Tyrone north of the park was overrun by dozens of young people, many of them nude, who used the pond as a swimming hole. Police gave up attempts to clear the pond.

Many families were in evidence, with small children running through the crowds or lining up at the ferris wheel and two other rides in a small midway area.

FEED HUNGRY

Free rice kitchens and food buses were ready for the hungry, and many persons set up campstoves or built fires to cook food brought with them. Barrels of drinking water were located around the park, and portable toilets also were available.

Doctors at the medical centre said there was no problem with sanitary facilities, and one reporter noted that the grounds generally were "pretty tidy garbage-wise."

Americans continued to dominate the scene. U.S. flags, most of them flown upside down, were much in evidence.

The event had been heavily advertised in the northeastern U.S. The organizers had not advertised as heavily in Canada for fear publicity would nullify their attempts to by-pass official opposition to the festival.

Meantime, both U.S. and Canadian customs and immigration officials were busy at border crossing points where thousands of young people streamed both ways—either on their way to Mosport or to a rock festival at Goose Lake Park at Jackson, Mich.

Arrests on drug charges were reported at several border points, and officials stopped many youths from crossing the border who had insufficient funds or lacked proper identification.

LONG-TERM PROBLEMS SEEN

Mideast Truce Splits Israel

By ALFRED FRIENDLY

JERUSALEM (WP) — The internal political problems created by Israel through its acceptance of the American peace initative are minor in the short term. In the longer run, they may become massive.

For the short term, the consequence is the rupture of Prime Minister Golda Meir's wall-to-wall (virtually) all-party government. The right-wing element in the coalition, Gahal, walked off but its depatrure in no way endangers either day-to-day administration or the maintenance f the general purposes and philosophy of the regime.

To some degree, it may make Mrs. Meir's daily chores easier, with internal dissidents out of the way. For the long term, the consequence can be a crucial division, a harrowing political battle, among the Israeli people over what kind of a peace settlement they are willing to accept — in the event, that is, that the proposed cease-fire-cum-negotiations gets as far as developing a proposed settlement (few Israelis, incidentally, think that it will).

Being at hand and easy to see, the immediate repercussions can be considered first:

Gahal's ultimate parting of the ways with the rest of the coalition was, in any event, inevitable. It had long since been foreseen. In an interview in March, Mrs. Meir said that she knew Gahal would walk out, and that she would be reconsiled to it, whenever matters came to a point of decision on a peace treaty that called for the return to Arab hands of any territory conquered during the six Day War.

For the sake of national unity, in fact and in image, she hoped to delay the split as long as possible. In her speech Tuesday formally spelling out the government acceptance of the American peace initative, she made clear that she thought Gahal mistook the occasion: matters were a long way, indeed, from any settlement entailing an Israeli pull-back.

But for the first time, the Israeli government uttered the word "withdrawal," and for the majority of Gahal there had to be an unyoking of the common harness.

Gahal's position on the issue is essentially religio-political, however much it may appear to the world outside as extremist "territorial aggrandizement."

Its thesis is that Eretz Israel, or "the land of Israel," is all of biblical Palestine, including Judeah and Samaria on the West Bank. Once in possession of it, as now, no Israeli government dare relinquish it because it belongs, by biblical sanction, to the Jewish people. If the proposition seems archaic or even fantastic, it must nevertheless be considered in the context of the religious and ethnic history that are such important threads in the fabric of the Zionist state.

Gahal is itself an amalgam of two parties, Herut (meaning fredeom) and the Liberals. Herut espouses the foregoing proposition much more dogmatically and emphatically than its partner.

So it was that in the final vote of the group's central committee, early Tuesday morning, the result was a close thing, 117 to 112, indicating that the bulk of the Liberals, at least, agreed essentially with Mrs. Meir that the point had not been reached where the question of withdrawing from the West Bank was really being posed for decision.

On the basis of such a narrow vote, Gahal's withdrawal is sure to present it and its leader, Menachem Begin (also leader of Herut) more problems that it does the government and Mrs. Meir. Begin, a remarkably able man and far from the ravening werewolf-warhawk he is often portrayed abroad, is in his element as opposition leader. But he does not have an easy bed to lie in.

On handing her his resignation, he kissed Mrs. Meir's hand in token of esteem, friendship and pledge of functioning as the "loyal" opposition. But the role of an opposition is to oppose, and if Begin's voice grows shrill and the fiery oratory for which he is famous begins to flame, he risks splitting his own coalition.

The Liberals, as the vote showed, are unhappy enough at the outcome. They have always felt that they could protect their position of the integrity of "Eretz Israel" against dovish concessions better inside the government than out, so also, on economic affairs by helping fashion budget, fiscal and financial policy from within rather than by opposition attack. Begin can lose them if his opposition tactics grow too furious.

Turning from government politics to popular attitudes, it would be the gross overstatement of the year to say that the Israelis are happy with the American proposal or their government's acceptance of it. But, in deep melancholy and malaise, the majority appears to have concluded that the government had no option. Most Israelis support, therefore, what they take to have been the reasoning of Mrs. Meir, of Foreign Minister Abba Eban, of Defence Minister Moshe Dayan, that Israel had to bow to what is known here as proposal of the American secretary of state — lest it lose the support of its great protector and partner.

Heat Kills Children As Babysitter Chats

The babysitter, Mrs Virginia O'Donnell, 62, of Canoga Park, was caring for Hugh Flynn III, 3, and his 6-month-old brother John, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Flynn when her daughter called and asked her to babysit for her grandchild.

Police said Mrs. O'Donnell drove to her daughter's home, which she shared, and left the Flynn children in the car while she went inside to chat.

After about 45 minutes, Mrs. O'Connell and her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Hendricks, went out to the car and discovered the children's bodies.

Both children were pronounced dead on arrival at a Northridge hospital.

Police said temperatures in the Canoga Park area reached about 105 degrees and the interior of the car probably reached 120 degrees.

Mrs. O'Donnell was booked on two counts of manslaughter based on alleged negligence.

Militants Cancel Parade in Ulster

LONDONDERRY (AP) — Militant Northern Ireland Protestants bowed to government pressure today and called off the traditional parade that last August touched off bloody street riots between Roman Catholics and Protestants.

The Protestant Unionist Association had earlier threatened to defy a government ban on parades and threatened to mobilize 5,000 followers for the traditional Aug. 12 celebration of the relief of the city from besieging Roman Catholic troops of King James II in 1689. But the association announced today it will observe the government ban Wednesday and instead celebrate the occasion with a large rally in a Protestant area of the city. Londonderry now is largely Roman Catholic.

It was this parade which last year touched off religious rioting and brought British troops into the country last fall to put them down. Even with thousands of British troops still stationed in Ulster, riots regularly break out on weekends—here and in the capital city of Belfast.

So far this summer 13 persons have died and hundreds more have been injured in clashes.

AP Newsfeatures

Asian Highway Car Rally Set

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — A motor rally will be staged late this year over a portion of one of the world's most ambitious highway projects—the billion-dollar Asian Highway linking 14 countries in an over-all network of more than 37,000 miles.

The aim is to call attention to the growth of the project, approved 10 years ago by the UN Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East (ESCAFE), and now 83 per cent open to all weath traffic.

Motor cars will start from Tehran, the Iranian capital, touch Kabul in Afghanistan, thence to Islamahbad in Pakistan, New Delhi in India, Katmandu in Nepal, go to Calcutta in India and end in the Pakistani city of Dacca.

M.I.F. Uptight About Sensitivity

By REV J. A. DAVIDSON

My Irritable Friend is not notably responsive to unsolicited advice, especially when proffered with excessive enthusiasm. When we were sharing a jug of coffee a couple of weeks ago he spluttered a little as he told me about a recent encounter he had had with a neighboring minister, young Fred Grool.

This Grool is a decent sort, but he does have some wild enthusiasms. And he seems somewhat accident-prone when he tries out his enthusiasms on his kindly neighbor. M.I.F. admits that young Fred is a very genial fellow — "an ecclesiastical Liberace," he once called him — and he said that sometimes to choke him off seems rather like kicking a puppy.

Grool's latest enthusiasm is for Sensitivity Training — which apparently also goes under a number of other titles, such as Training Groups, Basic Interpersonal Encounters, Group Dynamics, Behavior Laboratory, etc. M.I.F. said that he recognizes some values in this very fashionable enterprise but that he worries about the extravagance of some of its claims and the curious insensitivities it seems to develop in some of its devotees.

Fred Grool has had a couple of short bouts of Sensitivity Training and he has become convinced that it is the great new way to self-realization, salvation, redemption, fulfilment, integration of personality, and, M.I.F. thinks, good digestion and keeping your blood pressure normal. And it is awfully good for dealing with one's peculiar uptightnesses.

Grool advised M.I.F. that whatever it is that ails him and makes him so uptight could probably be healed if M.I.F. will attend a three-day session at the recently established Sensitivity Laboratory next month. Grool said that he will be attending and would be happy to show M.I.F. the ropes. (I worry about such things. If M.I.F. became too sensitive, would I have to start calling him "My Ritable Friend"?)

NO, THANKS

At one stage in his presentation Grool said that it would be very good for M.I.F. to "lay his guts on the table and have a good look at them — figuratively speaking, of course." (M.I.F.'s eyes twinkled a little as he mumbled something to me about his "coffee-corroded tripes.")

M.I.F. politely declined Grool's invitation. He said that some years ago he had attended a Group Dynamics Workshop — and all it had done for him was increase his ordinary irritability. He added that he is really too old to indulge in group psychological nudism and that he finds himself unable to accept the theory that one becomes more "real" by laying one's emotional innards on a table before others who are doing the same thing.

He said that he values openness and responsiveness toward other persons as agencies of authentic personhood. But he contended that one's psychic discs are in danger of being ruptured if one does not balance openness and responsiveness with certain reticences and inner privacies.

Grool found all this very hard to accept. He asked M.I.F. what made him so terribly uptight. M.I.F. smiles benevolently at Grool and said that he has a theory that one of the indispensible qualities of personal maturity is in knowing which aspects and dimensions of life one should try to be uptight about, at least with respect to most persons most of the time.

Then M.I.F. told Grool that he was thinking of organizing a sensitivity seminar on How to Choose the Uptightness that Will Help You Most in Achieving Authentic Personhood. It was then Grool stomped out of M.I.F.'s study without even saying "Goodbye." "How insensitive can you get?" asked M.I.F. with a wicked smile.

Superior Quits Redemptorists

TORONTO (CP) — Very Rev. Edward Boyce, 37, says he has resigned as head of the Eastern Canada region of the Roman Catholic Redemptorist order and has applied to Rome for dispensation of his priesthood vows.

"I have reached a decision to take a leave of absence with a view to seeking complete dispensation from the obligations of the priesthood and religious life," he said in an open letter to the order.

Father Boyce, the youngest provincial superior of the Redemptorists, said he still believes in the Church but feels that he can make a greater contribution as a layman.

"I have reached that crucial point in life where integrity is more important than respectability."

He said the Roman Catholic hierarchy is opposed to radical change, and he hopes his leaving will convince it that change is necessary.

Aussies Halt Marauding Mice

By ROSS CAMERON

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters) — The marauding mice of eastern Australia have been halted by a harsh winter, but farmers fear a fresh onslaught on their next grain crops.

The mice plague reached its peak in December, a summer month in the Southern Hemisphere, with hordes of thousands of the rodents marching on the eastern Australia grain belt of 20,000,000 acres.

Farmers hoped for a severe Australian winter to wipe out the plague. But while heavy rains early in the season killed many mice, others took refuge in deep burrows and found supplies of food in the warmth of storage shelters and silos.

Farmers throughout the grain belt reported large numbers of mice gnawing steadily into their winter crops. In the "rice bowl" in southwestern New South Wales, the area hardest hit by the plague, the mice have survived in the stubble of the previous summer crop.

Desperate for food, the mice have been known to gnaw through thick concrete walls of grain silos.

An agriculture department official said that reports from farmers throughout the grain belt showed damage was "pretty heavy."

Farmers hoped that an extremely cold winter would cause disease in the mice. But the official said that although several diseases have been found in the mice by field research teams, none was widespread enough to get rid of the mice.

With the advance of winter, farmers used less and less poison in their efforts to control the mice. Earlier, officials had been alarmed at the widespread use of strychnine and a poison known as 1080, which permanently pollutes the soil.

But the poisons proved almost useless and farmers and officials still hope for a natural end to the plague.

No one knows just what puts an end to mice plagues, the agriculture department official pointed out.

"They just seem to fade out with one disease or a nother," he said. "Here's hoping one comes along soon."

Meanwhile, the department continues to investigate the problem, and farmers have gone ahead with plans for next summer's crop.

An agriculture department report said farmers have reported uneven germination in some early summer crops they have sown and attributed this to the bodies of dead mice blocking seed shoots during sowing.

India Goes Slow With China Ties

By DILIP MUKERJEE

NEW DELHI (WP) — India is having second thoughts about sending an ambassador to North Vietnam.

This is in contrast to New Delhi's cautious first step towards establishing full diplomatic relations with East Germany, where India has decided to upgrade its trade representative office to a consulate-general.

At one time this summer it seemed India would act simultaneously to improve relations with both Communist countries. The cabinet's foreign affairs committee considered the two together, but apparently preferred discretion to valor.

REPERCUSSIONS

The most important reason for India's hesitation about upgrading the Hanoi office is possible repercussions at home. Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's right-wing critics have launched a bitter campaign to prove that her minority government's dependence on Communist votes — even though she does not need them to survive — is jeopardizing India's national interests.

Hanoi's past posture toward India is a handicap to Mrs. Gandhi in this regard. When Jawaharlal Nehru wrote to Ho Chi Minh explaining India's position after the Sino-Indian border conflict of 1962, the North Vietnamese leader advised India to make peace on Chinese terms. The hurt this caused to Indian sentiment still rankles.

In addition, right-wing parties claim to have unearthed more recent documents from Hanoi hostile to India. The Indian foreign office, after checking with Hanoi, has denied their authenticity, but the controversy continues. This hamstrings the government in political debate at home.

U.S. REACTION

India's freedom of action also is limited by external constraints. New Delhi's policy-makers have to take into account the U.S. reaction to an upgrading of relations with Hanoi.

U.S. aid, although much reduced from the high levels of the early 1960s, is still of great importance to the Indian economy. But more than that, New Delhi can scarcely wish to do anything that would provoke Washington into political retaliation — by supplying arms to Pakistan, for example, or by becoming less neutral than the United States is today in the Kashmir dispute between India and Pakistan.

Since relations with East Germany do not pose such grave problems at home or abroad, Mrs. Gandhi has gone ahead there while holding back with Hanoi.

LONG-TERM AIMS

But there is no mistaking India's long-term aims to improve its leverage in Indochina through closer ties with Hanoi and its allies. The foreign office is convinced that the future of the region lies with Hanoi and its allies, rather than with regimes the United States is helping.

In geopolitical terms, Indochina is of particular interest to India because an extension of Chinese influence there would be a serious threat to India's security.

The best way to avoid this, as New Delhi sees it, is to support viable national regimes that can command the loyalty of their own peoples. This would give these regimes strength to withstand pressures from Peking, as Hanoi has demonstrated over the years by refusing to take sides in China's wrangles with the Soviet Union.

RANCHERS TURN ON

VANCOUVER (CP) — Do-it-yourself electrical power will be turned on Sept. 9 in the Kispiox Valley, 15 miles north of Hazelton, B.C.

Ranchers asked for power in February but British Columbia Hydro said there weren't enough customers and the line would be too expensive for Hydro to build.

Dr. Gordon Shrum, Hydro chairman, reached agreement with them: the ranchers would get the power if they built the line; Hydro would pay the costs.

He estimated Friday total costs will be about $147,000—almost $100,000 cheaper than if Hydro had done the job.

Hydro will buy the power line for $1 and 53 customers have been signed up by the Kispiox Valley Community Association.

Weddings

Aaronson — Lovric

A double ring ceremony was solemnized on June 20th at 7:30 p.m. in St. Mary's Anglican Church when Paula Alexandra, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter P. Lovric, 3273 Henderson Road, exchanged marriage vows with Mr. Robert Gordon Aaronson, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon A. Aaronson, 2787 Dunlevy Street. Archdeacon A. Hendy officiated and the choir boys of St. Mary's were accompanied at the organ by their director Charles Palmer.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a floor-length gown of white Thailand Silk featuring an empire waist and high stand-away neckline. The back of the dress was gathered at the empire waist falling to the floor, giving a slight entrain effect. The full cathedral train which was softly gathered in at the back shoulder seams, was of silk French lace, featuring a raised floral pattern and scalloped edges. The semi-full sleeves of the same lace had scalloped tight cuffs fastened by a series of tiny buttons. The single tier illusion silk veil flowed gracefully from a headpiece of silk petals and borealis and extended beyond her train. She wore a white gold bracelet, a gift of the groom. She carried a cascading bouquet of three white orchids and stephanotis.

Her four attendants were gowned alike in floor-length sleeveless dresses of white silk ottoman cord, featuring high standup necklines. The empire waists were encircled with pale yellow peau de soie ties which fell gracefully to the floor from half bows at the back. They carried cascading bouquets of white and yellow Shasta daisies and white ribbons. Tucked in their hair were Shasta daisies matching their bouquets. Matron of honour was Mrs. Pamela Vandale of Langley, B.C., bridesmatron was Mrs. June Cross and the bridesmaids Miss Barbara Reilly and Miss Wendy Aaronson, sister of the groom. Mr. Brian Vandale attended as best man and ushers were Mr. David Politano, Mr. Tip Shaffer and Mr. Bonbon Hu.

The mother of the bride was attired in a pale green French silk ensemble consisting of an A-line dress with matching coat featuring a standing beaded roll away collar. Matching silk shoes, and stephanotis dyed to match her dress completed her ensemble. The mother of the groom chose a slim dress of pale silk highlighted by beading around the neck and a coat fastened with a bead frog. Pale pink shoes, and pink roses in her hair added the final touches to her outfit.

A reception was held at the Uplands Golf Club. Mr. Arnold Mann gave the toast to the bride. The attractive, tiered wedding cake, made by the bride's mother centred the bridal table. Mr. Edmond Rogers was Master of Ceremonies and music for the evening was supplied by the Velvet Brass.

Following the reception Mr. and Mrs. Aaronson left on a wedding trip Up-Island. The bride chose a yellow finely corded silk dress and coat ensemble with matching yellow kid shoes and bag. In her hair she wore a yellow orchid. They will make their home in Vancouver where Mr. Aaronson will continue his studies in dentistry at UBC.

Out-of-town guests included relatives and friends from Burlington, Ontario, Vancouver, Langley, Kelowna and Parksville.

Oraas — Melvin

A double ring ceremony on July 25, 1970 at 7 p.m. in Centennial United Church united in marriage Brenda Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Melvin, 3130 Carman Street, and Mr. Sherman Roy Oraas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orren Oraas, 1652 East 13th Avenue, Vancouver. Reverend John Travis officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a floor length gown of white chiffon over taffeta with lace applique. The lace bodice was trimmed with pearls and sequins. Her lace train fell from a bow at waist back. The full length tulle veil studded with seed pearls misted from a dainty floral headpiece. She carried a sheaf bouquet of yellow roses and baby's breath. Matron of honor Mrs. Barbara Walker, sister of the bride, and bridesmatron Mrs. Marie Schur and bridesmaids Heather Brayshaw and Gail Oraas, sister of the groom, wore identical full length gowns of yellow embossed sheer over taffeta and carried sheaf bouquets of white daisies, yellow mums, white and yellow carnations and baby's breath. They wore white daisies in their hair. Best man was Mr. Allan Stewart and ushers were Mr. Robert Wieser, Mr. Gerald Roberts and Mr. George Vandenberg. Four little girls Lisa Garner, Lori Oliver, Andrea Powell, Sylvia Schaddellee, of Brenda's Explorer Group, sang three lovely selections.

A reception followed at the Carlton Club, where the toast to the bride was proposed by her uncle Mr. Albert Koch. Following their honeymoon the young couple will make their home in Vancouver.

Out of town guests were from California, Washington, Alberta, Creston and Vancouver, B.C.

Mimnagh — Loader

Mr. and Mrs. W. Loader are pleased to announce the marriage of their daughter, Frances Lillian, to AB Glen Mimnagh, son of Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. J. Mimnagh, Ottawa. The wedding took place Saturday, July 25 in Naden Chapel, Chaplain Bingham officiated.

Wedding vows were exchanged on August 7, 1970 in St. John's Anglican Church, when Canon Grahame Baker officiated at a double ring ceremony uniting in marriage Patti Ellen, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Musgrave, 4505 Pipeline Road, Victoria, B.C. to Mr. Richard Kenneth Brown, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Brown, 3845 Ascot Drive, Victoria, B.C. Soloist Robert Hall, sang "The Lord's Prayer" accompanied by organist Elizabeth Chinnich.

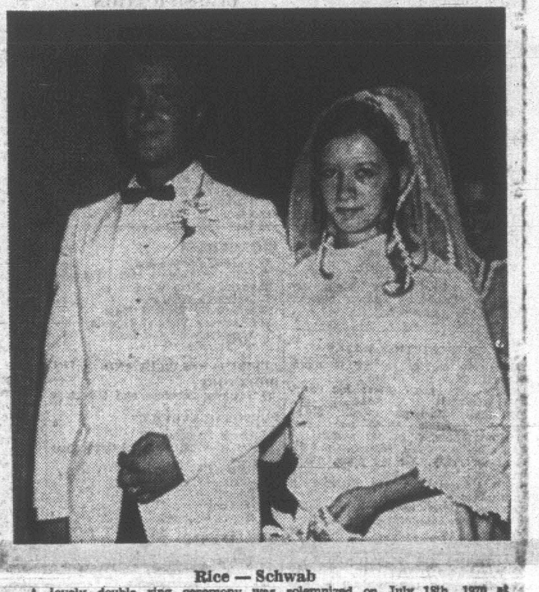
Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a floor length gown entrain, of white lace over peau de soie. Her elbow length veil of tulle was held in place by a lace headpiece. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink carnations centred by a mauve catta laya orchid. Her only jewelry was her grandmother's brooch. The bride was attended by her three sisters, matron of honor, from Saskatoon, Mrs. John Sargeant in rose sheer over taffeta, her headpiece, a garland of small rose flowers. Bride's matrons Mrs. Gordon Cumming of Victoria, and Mrs. John Jacobson of Victoria, were both attired in gowns of mauve sheer over taffeta with matching garlands in their hair. They all carried crescent bouquets of pink and mauve gladiolas. Mr. Bill Cliff was best man and Mr. Doug Dowsley and Mr. Cliff Brown, brother of the groom were ushers. Mr. Ron Brown, younger brother of the groom, was keeper of the Guest Book.

At the reception held at Holyrood House, Mr. William Blevins proposed the toast to the bride. Following the reception, the happy couple left for a honeymoon along the Oregon Coast. The bride chose a pink fortrel coat-dress ensemble with matching accessories and a white orchid corsage for her going away outfit. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Brown will reside in Nanaimo. Out of town guests were from Saskatoon and Up-Island points.

Lambert — Irvine

Oaklands Chapel was the setting on July 25, 1970 at 2 p.m. when Mr. J. Robertson united in marriage Tanga Delane Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Irvine of Victoria, to Mr. Ronald Gregory Lambert, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Lambert, of Victoria. Miss Mary Mackey played the organ.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length white gown and carried a white Bible overlaid with an orchid and stephanotis. Matron of honor, Mrs. Bonnie Curl, sister of the bride, and bridesmaids, Misses Vicki Irvine and Debbie Lambert wore blue floor length gowns and carried bouquets of yellow and white chrysanthemums. Mothers of the bride and groom wore orchids in keeping with the bride's bouquet. Mr. Barry Hansen was best man, and Messrs. Stan Ball and Victor Powell were ushers. The reception was held at the Tally-Ho where Mr. Carl Frayn proposed the toast to the bride.



Rice — Schwab

A lovely double ring ceremony was solemnized on July 18th, 1970 at 7 p.m. in St. Alban's Anglican Church, Victoria, when Penny Glee, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Schwab, 3034 Doncaster Drive, exchanged wedding vows with Mr. Karl Laughton Rice, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Dafoe of Victoria. Reverend F. W. Hayes officiated, Mr. W. Hamilton was organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the petite bride was radiant in a floor length gown of peau d'elegance, empire line with stand-up collar, bell sleeves, long train trimmed with daisies and bows. Her chapel length veil, trimmed with daisies, was held in place by a daisy trimmed headband. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses, stephanotis and two lucky horseshoes sent from England by her aunts and uncles. Maid of honor, Miss Mary Brook, bridesmatron, Mrs. Beverley Earnshaw, sister of the bride, bridesmaid Miss Donna Fleming, wore identical floor length gowns of mauve satin crepe trimmed with white daisies. They carried bouquets of mauve and pink ribboned roses, and had matching rosebuds in their hair. The church was decorated with baskets of mauve and pink flowers. Best man was Mr. John Balmer; Mr. Pat Haywood and Mr. Bob Dalziel ushered the guests. Philip Earnshaw, nephew of the bride was ring-bearer.

At the reception Mr. Dennis Turnbull proposed the toast to the bride. A three-tiered wedding cake centred the head table. For her going away accessories. A corsage of blue and white carnations complemented her ensemble. Out-of-town guests were from Ottawa, Medicine Hat, Vancouver, and outfit, the bride chose a matching blue dress and sleeveless coat with white Courtenay. After the honeymoon, the happy couple will reside in Victoria.

Lazeo — Jones

A double ring ceremony on July 18, 1970 at 4 p.m. in St. Aidan's United Church united in marriage Susan May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Jones, 316 Brunswick Place, Victoria, and Mr. Lawrence Andrew Lazeo, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Fullop, North Vancouver. Reverend Griffiths officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked lovely in her floor length gown, she had made herself, of lily-of-the-valley brocaded satin featuring high waist with white velvet ribbon and bell sleeves, her cathedral length veil made with three tiers, each tier trimmed with fine Italian lace, was held in place with lily-of-the-valley and white satin roses. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and white stephanotis. She wore a gold heart-shaped necklace given to her mother on her wedding day, by her father. The bride's only attendant Mrs. Madeline Long, Vancouver, wore a floor length gown of aqua with yellow and white daisies and had white and yellow daisies in her hair. Best man was Mr. Brian Newmen, Vancouver; Mr. William Jones, brother of the bride, from Whitehorse and Mr. Gary Lazeo, brother of the groom, from Vancouver were ushers. The mother of the bride was attired in blue with white accessories and corsage of white sweetheart roses. The mother of the groom wore pink with white accessories. Her corsage was red sweetheart roses.

A reception was held at Holyrood House, where the bride and groom cut a three tier wedding cake, made by Mrs. Allan, friend of the bride's family. Reverend Chapman gave the toast to the bride.

After the reception the young couple left for a motor trip up-Island. For her going away outfit, the bride made a sheath dress of pink and mauve with full sleeves and sleeveless mauve coat, pink picture hat, white accessories and corsage of white sweetheart roses. They are making their home in New Westminster.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Michael Fullop, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lazeo, Miss Beth Bonner, Mrs. Irene Veldhuizen, Mr. Stephen Hall, Mr. Ron Nelson, all of Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Russell, Ladysmith, Mr. Jack Sherry, Nanaimo.

Richards — Taylor

The double ring wedding united in marriage Loraine Wendy Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Taylor to Mr. Martin James Julian Richards, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Richards, Sidney, in St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, at 7:30 p.m. July 18, 1970. Archdeacon Hywel J. Jones officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor length gown of lagoda crepe with bodice and front panel of Guipure lace. Her full length cathedral train fell in graceful folds from bridal bows at the waist. The headpiece was cloche styled, fashioned from lace, trimmed with pearls, a setting for a four-tiered veil with hand rolled edge. The bride's bouquet was orchids and lily-of-the-valley placed on her Bible, given to her by her godparents. Matron of honor, Mrs. Jill Horn and the attendants, Miss Nancy Gonnason and Mrs. Dianne Norwood were in matching gowns of soft pink lagoda crepe with white daisy trim. They carried baskets of pink carnations and lily-of-the-valley. Best man was Mr. Brian Smith and Messrs. Robert Norwood, Barry Taylor and Robin Richards ushered the guests.

During the reception at the Queen Victoria Inn, the toast was proposed by the bride's uncle, Mr. Howard Taylor. On returning from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Richards will reside in Sidney.

Lewis — Ward

Wedding vows were exchanged on the afternoon of July 4, 1970 in St. Matthias Anglican Church, Victoria, B.C., when Canon J. Rogers officiated at a double ring ceremony, uniting in marriage Nancee Marian, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald D. Ward, 887 Bank Street, and Mr. David Samuel Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Lewis, 1587 Despard Avenue.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a floor length gown of white trevira crepe and Chantilly lace with train styled on medieval lines. Her chapel veil of silk illusion and Chantilly lace fell from a cap of white crepe encrusted with seed pearls and she carried a white Bible with a spray of yellow sweetheart roses and blue cornflowers. She wore an heirloom pendant of seed pearls that belonged to her great-grandmother. The bride was attended by Mrs. Juergen Deterding, as matron of honour, and Mrs. Lutz Bauersachs as bridesmatron, wearing identical gowns in medieval style of yellow and mauve floral voile with daisy headpieces. They carried baskets of yellow and mauve daisies. The gowns of the bridesmaids and the bride's gown were designed and made by the bride. The bride's brother, Mr. Douglas Ward was best man, and ushers were Mr. John Holland, and Mr. Richard Ward, cousin of the bride.

The bride's mother was attired in an ensemble of apricot color colored trevira with white accessories and wore a corsage of sweetheart roses. The groom's mother wore a dress and jacket in beige brocade with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at The Inn, where Mr. James O. Smith proposed the toast to the bride. For a honeymoon trip to Banff, the bride chose a three-piece pant suit in white, navy and red with corsage of red carnations. The happy couple now reside in Victoria.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gyori of Bentley, Alberta and Mr. and Mrs. G. Stemson of West Vancouver.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Rev. and Mrs. Leslie D. Wallwork, Helen and David wish to express their deepest gratitude to all those who have shown such great kindness during and since the death of our dear son and brother, Tony. We would especially like to thank Rev. Bob Henderson for his great practical help and wise words of comfort and Drs. Jain and Williams of Lions Gate Hospital. Thanks also to all those kind folk from Bowen Island, Victoria, Vancouver, etc., who helped us so much during this time of sorrow, with a special word to Tony's young friends. God bless you all.

9 IN MEMORIAM

—BENJAMIN WILLIAM TINDALL
Pap
He was tall and strong,
He always had an answer.
He was a little girl's pal . . .
forever, Pap.
His eyes were grey and gentle,
His hair was thinning and matched his eyes.
He spread his love . . .
to everyone, Pap.
His friends loved him,
Even his enemies were his friends.
Everyone thought he would never die . . .
but he did, Pap.
The world was shattered,
For a day or two.
His friends all sent flowers . . .
then forgot, Pap.
We go to his grave now and then,
He still lives for me.
and I'll remember him . . .
forever, Pap.
—Always remembered by the family.

DAVIES—To Gary, who is always with us. Aug. 9, 1967.
I walk in the evening sun
Alone in the evening sun
And I think of the night ahead
When this old ground I walk will be my bed.
I wish I could travel on Alone until the dawn
But I'm weary
And time has come to sit alone in the evening sun.
—Ann, Gord and children.

A CRUISE TO FRIENDLY COVE

This interesting water trip takes place every Wednesday and Saturday afternoon up to September 12th.

MV. UCHUCK III leaves the Gold River Dock at 1:15 p.m. and journeys to Friendly Cove in Nootka Sound. She returns to Gold River at approximately 7:00 p.m.

The ship lies at the Friendly Cove Dock for one hour and you have the opportunity of setting foot on the same land that Captain Cook did in 1784.

You will enjoy the scenery during the voyage and much of the view looks exactly as it did when H.M.S. "Resolution" made her land-fall in the area.

There is a coffee shop on board and you are welcome to visit any part of the ship.

U.S. Rail Firemen May Be Phased Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential emergency board has recommended railway firemen's jobs gradually be abolished as a means of settling a long-standing labor dispute.

The White House disclosed Thursday the board called for the phasing out of the jobs of most railway firemen. The recommendation won immediate approval of the White House.

The board said the National Railway Labor Conference, which represents more than 130 railways with 95 per cent of the country's track, is on the verge of a settlement with the United Transportation Union which bargains for the firemen.

USED FOR STEAM

The settlement would combine the duties of firemen and brakemen under a new job classification acceptable to the railways and union. No new workers would be classified as firemen but no firemen would be fired. The classification would be eliminated gradually through retirement and death.

At issue in the dispute are the jobs of firemen who stoked boilers on engines burning coal and wood.

The railways insist—and the presidential board agreed—there is no use for firemen on diesels. But the union contends a third man is necessary for safety reasons.

The provision will allow firemen holding seniority to bid for more desirable jobs as firemen or firemen-brakemen.

The dispute over having a third man—in addition to engineer and brakeman—in diesel locomotives is the longest in the history of U.S. collective bargaining. Since the 1930s, when diesels were introduced, management and labor have sparred over whether firemen are essential to safe and efficient operations.

Hovercraft Inventor Runs Out of Money

LONDON (Reuters) — Sir Christopher Cockerell, the man who invented the Hovercraft, is in acute financial trouble.

The 60-year-old scientist said Friday night he has been completely rejected by the government body which has sponsored his invention since 1961.

"I can't even afford a car or a summer holiday," he said from his home at Southampton in southern England.

Cockerell produced the first prototype Hovercraft in 1956. Since then it has been used by the U.S. forces in Vietnam and by the Japanese government. It is also in constant use as a car ferry link between Britain and France.

"I don't mind being exploited by my own country, but I do mind being exploited by America and Japan," he said.

The government's National Research Development Corp. has decided to end its £4,000-a-year (about $10,000) fee for Cockerell's services as a consultant.

It came at a time when the corporation is negotiating the patent rights with the Japanese government for Cockerell's latest brainchild, the Hover-train.

The 150-mile-an-hour Hover-train runs on a single railway track on the same principle as the air-cushion Hovercraft.

Jailers Red-Faced

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Police launched an intensive manhunt for a convict reported to have escaped from jail — and four hours later found he was still in prison. Embarrassed prison officials telephoned the headquarters of Rhodesian television, which had been flashing the picture of Aiden Diggeden, 31, on screens, and police dismantled roadblocks. Diggeden is serving 15 years for armed robbery.

10-Year-Old Good Fiddler

SHELBURNE, Ont. (CP) — Youth had winning ways Friday in the annual Canadian Old-Time Fiddlers Contest when 10-year-old Don Reed of Sudbury elected to play in the 18-years-and-under class instead of the 12 and under.

The boy was among the three survivors who will compete today in the semi-finals and final. He beat out four older youths in the competition. He also survived among older contestants in the novely class.

Earlier, another Sudbury pair, Robert Reed, six, and his sister Karen, eight, placed first and second respectively in the 12-and-under.

BRITISH COLUMBIA PARLOUR CAR TOURS
Our last scheduled tour to the CANADIAN ROCKIES
for 1970
This fabulous all Canadian Tour will leave our depot at 8:00 A.M. September 8th and will travel the new YELLOWHEAD HIGHWAY to Jasper, the spectacular COLUMBIA ICEFIELDS HIGHWAY, down the very spine of the Rockies, into Banff for two nights.
Leaving Banff, through the SELKIRK MOUNTAINS viewing the famous "Spiral Tunnel", the Autumn coloring should provide a spectacular view of the Rocky Mountain Trench and into the serene and beautiful Okanagan Valley, past fruit stands now laden with the bounty of the orchards. This tour has been planned to enjoy the Rockies at a time when crowds are less and coloring gorgeous.
Full price for this six-day tour:

DELFT POTTERY from the Netherlands is world famous; here a master craftsman shows why. Each piece is hand painted, as is this huge vase, before it undergoes final processing. Delft, a short distance from the Hague, is one of the most popular tourist meccas in the Netherlands, and the products of the area's craftsmen have been carried home by visitors from all over the world.

BIG LITTLE HOLLAND

Everyone Says It With Flowers

By BILL WALKER

LISSE, The Netherlands — Any mention of Holland has to include flowers, even for a rank thumber like your agent is when it comes to gardening.

Because flowers just have to be a Dutchman's joy. There are more flowers to be found in The Netherlands for its size, than anywhere else in the world.

And that statement is not hard to believe, because along with cheese, windmills, and wooden shoes, the tulip has emerged as a national emblem of the country.

In the spring, when we were there at the invitation of CP Air and the Dutch Tourist Bureau, the countryside was alive with color. There were literally millions upon millions of daffodils, tulips and hyacinths.

Flower gardens abound in every village and most homes but one of the most famous of all is the Keukenhof Gardens, near Lisse, and a short drive from The Hague.

UNUSUAL DISPLAY

Keukenhof means "kitchen garden," and on the 60-acre site there is a most unusual display.

It is here that 85 of the leading bulb growers display their products, in completely varying displays, all of which are delightfully arranged amid trees and shrubs.

In addition, in the huge greenhouses, gardeners can enjoy a special delight — there they can get new ideas, see how bulbs can be used to the best advantage, learn to experiment with a good chance of success later on and also be introduced to several new varieties.

The Keukenhof Gardens are usually open from the end of March to Mid-May.

However, there is another and equally famous flowering village. That is Aalsmeer, 10 miles south of Amsterdam. This is a village where it is said the population has doubled in the last 25 years, and all because of flowers.

It is the heart of the Dutch flower industry, with 821 acres being almost wholly covered with greenhouses. More important, however, it is the home of the world famous flower auction where auctions are held every day except Sunday in a covered-in area of over five acres.

But then, everybody says it with flowers in Holland. There is not a house without a flower garden or few windows without a flower pot on the sill. Flowers hang from balconies, adorn lamp posts, are growing in the Malls, and the petals are linked together, and sold to tourists in their own national colors as a garland for their cars.

Last of a Series

It is custom, too, to present flowers to the hostess when visiting a Dutch home.

Bulbs are a national industry, but don't try to take any home. It's against the law. It's just look, but don't touch, so enjoy the view.

ONE PLACE TO GO

There were other highlights on the tour, far too numerous to dwell on. Suffice to say that if you are planning a trip to Europe in the future, and plan to stop in Holland as well, there is only one place to go for advice.

That is the local VVV office. Every town of any size has a tourist information office. The insignia is a triangular sign bearing the letters VVV.

Sure the Dutch have a name for it, just as they have shops which ra, eeldcl, shops, which are called Broodjeswinkels.

If you can't remember VVV, then call it by its proper title.

Vereniging voor Vreemdelingenverkeer.

The Dutch will understand.

5,000 Scouts Quarantined In Camp

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — More than 5,000 Boy Scouts were quarantined on the sprawling Philmont Scout Ranch Friday until tests can determine the nature of a mysterious disease which killed a 12-year-old boy at the camp.

The office of Governor David Cargo said preliminary tests indicated the disease might be pneumonic plague, a communicable disease which can be spread through the air.

Bruce Storrs of the health and social services department, however, said health officials did not know and "will not speculate" on the nature of the disease. He said tests were being run to determine exactly what the disease was.

The victim, James Morris, of Jackson, Mich., died after taking a long hike at the Philmont Ranch, summer camp for some 10,000 Boy Scouts.

John Jasper, director of the health and social services department, said he felt it was "dangerous to speculate on the type of disease." He also said it appeared that no other youths had shown symptoms of the ailment.

Sacrifice Needed, U.S. Told

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (AP) — The United States may have to sacrifice some of its goods and services to improve the environment, Sen. Henry M. Jackson told the Northwest Rivers and Harbors Congress here Friday.

He told the congress' final session that adjustments to develop environmental quality can be made by redirecting the nation's "astronomic growth" into new channels rather than trying to stifle it.

A panel of Army Corps of Engineers officials discussed projects in progress or being planned for the Northwest in the groups' morning meeting.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

Every pet owner should keep a current ID card for each pet. This should be a photograph — color, preferably — hopefully, a sharp side view (from his or her most photogenic side). Remember to have the maximum contrast for a background. (Photos of a samoyed on a sheet, or a schiperke in the shade would hardly be standouts.) On the back of the dated picture should be the dog's shoulder height, weight and breed, if known. A mixed breed should be described as fully as possible including length of hair coat and any identifying marks or characteristics not apparent in the photograph. This ID card kept handy at home or taken along with the pet on trips can prove invaluable in helping you track down your pet should it become lost or strayed.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Because we both work, my wife and I thought our cat, Peter, would enjoy a companion. He seemed to get by all right but we thought that at two years of age he must be getting somewhat lonesome even though he was fixed at eight months. So we brought him this female under a year of age. It hasn't worked out well. She became the boss immediately, much to our surprise. He seemingly tolerates her and that's about all. A few weeks ago, he started becoming unhousebroken occasionally. The doctor checked him for bladder infection but couldn't find one. He treated him anyway just in case for a while but it didn't help. Every few days he still makes messes outside of his box. It has been suggested this is his way of getting even. Do you think this is it? If it is, would tranquilizers help any? — B.D.

DEAR B.D.: Resentment could indeed be the reason. If so, tranquilizers might help temporarily. Probably, though, the pattern is too well-established by now to cure with happy pills. More than likely Peter's petulant piddling would recur once tranquilizing effects were gone. You could verify the female's being the causative factor here by farming her out with a friend for a few days. Chances are Peter would again be completely housebroken. If so, in fairness to Peter, the female should be permanently farmed out.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I was just given a squirrel monkey and am getting rather attached to him already. He's attached to me, too. In fact, he hardly ever lets go of me but I do have a cage for him when I can get him in it and I wondered if it is big enough. It's 22 inches deep, 20 inches wide and 16 inches high.—B.G.

DEAR B.G.: Your cage is a little short on height, primarily because your monkey has a tail. He would appreciate, and should have, a perch inside the cage. It should be high enough from the floor so that his tail, when uncurled, won't touch. If you could raise the ceiling another six inches the dimensions will be entirely adequate.

TIPS FOR THE HOME GARDENER

Cut Down Water for Shrubs

by JACK BEASTALL

The most important item on the gardening schedule for August is probably the one which receives least attention. That is the reduction of water given to shrubs and trees.

To many gardeners this seems ridiculous in midsummer, yet it holds its own in the cold light of reason.

Plants require water at the roots in order to obtain food. Chemicals in the soil are disolved in soil water and picked up by the plant roots.

So long as plants can obtain plenty of water (hence food) they continue to make new growth.

Native plants on wild land depend on rainfall for their food supplies, and rain is conspicuous by its absence in our coastal summers.

Therefore, native plants in the wild make most of their growth in spring when soil water is adequate, and growth stops by midsummer when the water table has dropped considerably.

It's quite common to find native shrubs and trees with a browned and wilted appearance during late August, a fact noted by observant people and cited as proof of a dry summer.

While the observers may say the plants "look dreadful," the process i part of nature's careful plan to preserve native vegetation.

The apparent drying out causes early summer soft growth to cease and become hardened, or as the gardener says, to ripen. This hard, or ripe, growth will then go through a severe winter with a minimum of damage.

What at first appears to be a drastic condition proves later to be beneficial.

The value of allowing our permanent trees and shrubs to ripen their early summer growth has been amply proven in past severe winters.

Gardens carefully tended and freely watered the previous summers suffered considerable losses, while uncared for gardens with the same kind of plants came through practically unscathed.

It is a case of killing plants with kindness because of a built-in form of selfishness from which we all suffer.

We feel our gardens must look their best through the summer, and we tend to do everything in our power to maintain that appearance without a thought as to what is best for the plants.

Many of our spring flowering shrubs and trees are now initiating buds for next year's display.

These buds can only form on well ripened wood. If young growth continues at the same rate as earlier in the season, the plant's energy is expended on making growth instead of flower buds. The result is poor flowering the following spring.

Our actions at this time of year must be tempered with knowledge and judgment.

Plants receiving insufficient water in late spring and early summer will also fail to produce flower buds.

Our problem is when to apply lots of water and when to decrease that amount of water without detrimental effects.

Experience has shown the beginning of August to be a reasonable time to judiciously lengthen periods between watering. In no case should plants suffer from drought. The method is comparable to a slimming diet, the same foods may be eaten but in a much smaller quantity. There is no intent to starve, only to reduce.

But when we try to put this reduced watering schedule into practice we run into other problems. All the late summer and fall flowering perennials must have water and food at this time of year.

Since the perennials are herbaceous, their top growth dying in late fall, there is no fear of their being damaged during winter. Only those plants with top growth and foliage through winter need to ripen now.

Our lack of foresight in laying out the garden causes one problem. We plant fall flowering perennials and evergreen trees and shrubs side by side, then find it impossible to reduce water to one and give adequate water to the other.

Under these condtions the gardener needs more than the wisdom of Solomon. In labor-saving gardens of the future, those being planted now, we shall use our experience to reduce this problem.

Our permant trees and shrubs that require late summer ripening will be planted well away from plants needing an abundance of water, and we shall find our winter losses due to severe weather greatly reduced.

Trees and shrubs that have been watered every second day should now receive water every fourth day. After two weeks this can be stretched to once in six or eight days.

Those thoroughly soaked every seven to ten days may need the period between waterings retained but should receive one-half the quantity.

Each hardener will solve the problem according to his soil, plants, and the climate within his garden, but the important point is to see that trees and shrubs go on a reduced diet from now on.

WEEK'S WORK

A last clipping of evergreen hedges can be done now. Holly, yew, privet, box and lonicera will make a little growth, slowly after this, but hardening and ripening will be sufficient to go through winter.

Don't forget to plant Oriental poppies, Madonna-lily, fall crocuses and colchicums this weekend.

In a leisure hour or two, thoroughly clean greenhouse inside and out. Soap and water scrub, then follow with a good hosing while sunshine will quickly dry the wood.

Freesias need starting in pots for January flowers. Leave outdoors in sheltered sunny place until early October.

Abutilons, the Flowering-maples, can have cuttings taken now for growing into nice bushy plants.

Early apples will be ripening. These will not keep more than a few days, so enjoy them while fresh.

Pictorial Honors Mowat

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

On Aug. 12, Canada will place on sale a 6-cent pictorial paying tribute to Sir Oliver Mowat, one of our Fathers of Confederation, observing the 150th anniversary of his birth.

Mowat was born in Kingston, Ont., July 22, 1820, the son of Scottish-born colonists. He began studying law in 1836, in John A. Macdonald's Kingston office. In 1841 he became a lawyer, and in 1856 a Queen's council. First elected to parliament in 1857, he proved to be an adept politician, and in 1863-64 he served as postmaster-general. He is, I suppose, best remembered for being a delegate to the Quebec Conference (1864) which led to Confederation on July 1, 1867.

From 1872 to 1896, when be became federal minister of justice, and leader of the Liberals in the Senate, he was Ontario's able premier. Mowat was made a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George in 1892.

Mowat was lieutenant-governor of Ontario from 1897 to his death on April 19, 1903, in Toronto.

The Mowat adhesive was designed by Ernst Roch of Montreal. The Canadian Bank Note Co. Ltd. printed it in black and two shades of red by one color steel and two color gravure.

Canada will probably be issuing new 1c, 2c, 3c, 4c, 5c and 6c definitives in 1971, and they will likely reproduce a more recent portrait of Queen Elizabeth. New higher value definitives (possibly including $2, $3, $4 and $5 values) may be out in 1972.

A trio released Aug. 3 by Cyprus is for European Nature Conservation Year.

Aug. 4 was the date on which the Turks and Caicos Islands placed on sale a quartet commemorating the 100th anniversary of the founding of the British Red Cross Society. Denominations: 1c, 5c, 15c and 30c.

Four photogravure-printed multicolors issued July 28 by Jersey honor the "Battle of Flowers" — an annual festival which is held on the island. Highlight of the event, which originated in 1902 as a celebration of the crowning of King Edward VII and Queen Alexandra, is a floral parade. (After the parade, the floats used to be pulled apart and used as ammunition in a mock battle).

Featured on the stamps are four of 1969's notable floats. They are: 4d, "A Tribute to Enid Blyton" (writer of books for children); 5d, "Rags to Riches" (the Cinderella story is its theme); 1s 6d, "Gourmet's Delight" (some of Jersey's delicacies); and 1s 9d, "We're the Greatest" (ostriches and trees).

Anti-pollution is the topic of a stamp which the United States will release later this year.

On Aug. 5, New Zealand issued their two 1970 health semi-postals. (Values: 2½c plus 1c, and 3c plus 1c). The first depicts three girls playing basketball, and portrayed on the second are four boys playing soccer.

PM Seeks Unemployment Cut

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—National pride may be soaring as the Canadian dollar almost bumps parity with with U.S. currency, but here in the capital the bouncy buck is only raising some goosebumps.

The federal finance department has been remarkably loath to acknowledge let alone comment on the situation.

Strange, Compelling Explanation

However, one eminent economist — no names, no pack drill — suggested a strange but compelling explanation for the government reluctance to chat about the development.

He pointed out that while there are several reasons traced for the strong foreign demand for Canadian currency, there is total silence on why there is no countervailing Canadian demand for foreign currencies.

In other words, the imbalance of payments producing the demand for Canadian dollars is a measure of the growing weakeness rather than strength of the national economy — the direct result of the government's own deflationary policy.

"What is happening is that domestic demand is being curtailed because our economy is slowing down — indeed, as the unemployment figures show, it is slowing down much more than any other industrial nation — and consequently there is a much weaker demand for imports," the economist said.

Export Markets Relatively Strong

"This is occuring at a time when export markets are still relatively strong, a not infrequent conjunction. The same sort of thing happened in the 1950s when there was much slack in our economy at home but the Canadian dollar rose six cents above the U.S. dollar."

Thus when financial experts point out that foreign tourists are buying up Canadian dollars heavily for visits here it doesn't necessarily mean there are unusually larger numbers of them heading this way.

It also could mean that with a 6.6 per cent unemployment rate there are just fewer Canadians around this year with Canadian dollars to sell to finance American Express vacations abroad.

In that case, domestic weakness rather than external strength would account for the developing imbalance which the exchange rates reflect.

"Of course, as the Canadian dollar keeps going up, it will tend to discourage exports and encourage imports — but this compensating effect could take same time to show itself and thereby intensify the slackening of economic growth," the economist observed gloomily.

In any event, he contended it would be highly dangerous to re-peg the Canadian dollar at its current level, as hard experience in the 1950s proved.

Looking Ahead Three or Four Years

"First, looking ahead three or four years when export levels might taper off, it wouldn't be the right rate for Canada but it would be hard to get it down again — to devalue our dollar."

(Remember Donald Fleming's ordeal as finance minister in 1962?)

"And second, having just shown again that we will unpeg our dollar when forced, it would be very difficult indeed to defend a high-pegged dollar against the natural pressures of the exchange market.

He added that it would be mostly unlikely the international monetary fund would increase pressure on Canada to peg its currency when going through a volatile period.

"Certainly, it would be very, very difficult to make a judgment now on what the appropriate rate for the Canadian dollar should be," he said.

There are some indications that the cabinet thinks so, too, and it's one judgment it won't rush into.

Truce Stills Gunfire In Suez Canal Zone

By The Canadian Press

The banks of the Suez Canal were reported "quiet" today for the first time in three years.

But, only hours after a United States-initiated ceasefire went into effect along the canal at midnight, 3 p.m. PDT Friday, there were two reports of firing along the frontier with Jordan, with three Israeli soldiers wounded.

"The southern command reports quiet," an Israeli military spokesman said as the ceasefire became effective along the canal area.

But, several rockets were reported fired from Jordan at the Israeli Dead Sea potash works within hours of the ceasefire and the military command said Arab gunners in Jordan wounded three Israeli soldiers in an ambush early today. The Israelis returned the fire after the ambush in the southern Golan Height of Syria, a spokesman said.

NO CASUALTIES

The military said in Tel Aviv there were no casualties in the rocket attack on the potash works and no information on who fired the rockets. Arab guerrillas were believed responsible.

Israel's deputy premier, Yigal Allon, said in an interview on the state radio that his government would hold Jordan responsible for any failure to control guerrillas operating from her territory.

"If terrorists or any other forces should renew attacks on Israeli villages and towns, then Israel would be obliged to invoke its right of self-defence," he said.

The ceasefire is viewed as a first step toward indirect Arab-Israeli peace talks. It was announced Friday in Washington, Cairo, Jerusalem and the United Nations in New York.

The ceasefire prompted limited optimism for settlement of the hostilities that have existed among the Middle Eastern neighbors since Israel became a state in 1948.

At the United Nations, special envoy Gunnar V. Jarring of Sweden scheduled meetings today with Israeli, Egyptian and Jordanian diplomats on mechanics of the ceasefire, which is to continue at least through Nov. 5.

They were expected to discuss possible cities for the negotiations — presumably New York, Geneva or Nicosia, Cyprus. The U.S. proposal called for the governments involved to name representatives for talks "according to such procedure and at such places and times" as Jarring might recommend.

'Winning Price Battle'

Times News Services

OCEAN FALLS — Ottawa is ending its battle against inflation and beginning to fight against unemployment, Prime Minister Trudeau indicated here Friday.

The federal government is in a position to ease restraints because Canada has been more successful than any other western nation in its battle against inflation, he told a meeting in this coastal logging town of 2,500.

"The next priority is unemployment," he said.

The prime minister was winding up a six-day tour of B.C. and the north.

OTTAWA ACTIONS

Current unemployment — 6.6 per cent of the labor force — has been partly a result of government actions that slow the economy and defeat inflation, he said.

Because some sectors were still trying "to take more out of the economy than they put in," there were still inflationary pressures.

He said labor costs were a major cause of inflation as wage and salary boosts in the second quarter of this year had outpaced price and profit increases.

"Who's inflating now? It's labor."

CAN BORROW NOW

The prime minister told a later meeting of about 1,200 people in Prince Rupert that the government now is in a position to borrow new funds in the money market and reinvest them as a stimulant to the Canadian economy.

Trudeau appeared to take great enjoyment from question and answer sessions.

The audiences have been generally large, friendly and loud in their applause for the prime minister. Aides described the trip as an outstanding success. He was to return to Ottawa today.

Trudeau told audiences Friday his reason for making the trip, which covered many areas never visited by a prime minister, was to talk and explain the overall context in which government operates.

Trudeau's stiffest test had been expected here when he was confronted by fishermen, angered at what they claim is interference from Soviet fishing vessels off the west coast.

Guidelines Don't Apply To Postmen

MONTREAL — Postmaster-General Eric Kierans held out hope Friday for an early settlement of the national postal dispute.

He said his optimism was based on new-found "manoeuvrability" stemming from his understanding that six per cent guidelines do not apply to postmen.

"Both sides should move from their original positions," he said in an interview. "The momentum will then pick up, leading to a settlement."

Kierans said the six per cent guideline "has nothing to do with the post office" in its negotiations with the unions.

He said the negotiations had already started and "the guidelines came along later."

The postmaster-general said he has exerted pressure on the treasury negotiators in their talks with the Canadian Council of Postal Unions.

Tie Boosts To Inflation —Bennett

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier W. A. C. Bennett said Friday he's suggested to Ottawa that its wage guidelines should be for increases amounting to three per cent more than the current rate of inflation.

"If the inflation is six per cent, the workers should get a nine per cent increase. If inflation is zero, they get only three per cent."

TOLD OTTAWA

Bennett said he has passed on the idea to Ottawa and the federal Prices and Incomes Commission.

He told a press conference he supports restraint "but I didn't suggest six per cent" — Ottawa's guideline.

"The six per cent is not a sound business approach," the premier said.

"That's Ottawa's trouble, they do not have any businessmen in their cabinet. How can you sell workers on a six-per-cent increase if inflation is eight per cent?

"I advocated a three per cent basic genuine increase in wages. We can expect a normal three per cent growth in economy to take care of that."

COMMITTEE HIT

The committee members, said Bennett, were just on a political junket trying to whitewash the white paper on taxation.

Mail Strike Ends —Until Next Week

VANCOUVER (CP) — Postal workers returned to work in British Columbia today following a 24-hour strike that shut down mail service throughout the province.

Jim McCall, strike zone co-ordinator for the lower B.C. mainland, hinted that post offices in the province would be hit by rotating strike again next week.

"We don't usually strike on the weekends, because it doesn't affect the service that much," he said. "But next week they will all be strikeable days.

"Monday is another era entirely."

Post offices in B.C. and the Yukon were shut down by the strike Friday. In B.C., only the dispatch office at Vancouver International Airport operated.

TEAR GAS ENDS SITDOWN IN B.C. PENITENTIARY

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — About 320 British Columbia penitentiary prisoners who staged an eight-hour sit-down protest overnight returned to their cells after an early-morning confrontation with prison guards and RCMP at the New Westminster penitentiary.

The death last Tuesday of Walten Brass, a 27-year-old Saskatchewan prisoner, was believed to have sparked the protest. A coroner's jury later ruled his death was caused by cerebral hemorrhage.

Prisoners said Brass was beaten by prison guards, and Friday night at 8 p.m. prisoners refused to return to their cells at the end of an exercise period.

Bonfires were started with recreation room ping-pong tables but were extinguished by RCMP and guards.

Off-duty guards and police reinforcements were called as the prisoners continued to protest in the exercise area, surrounded by a 10-foot wire fence and 30-foot guard towers equipped with searchlights.

ORDERED BACK

At 3:20 a.m. an order was given to the men to return to their cells, but only a handful obeyed.

Several canisters of tear gas then were lobbed into the exercise area, which was surrounded by an estimated 125 members of the RCMP and 75 prison guards.

About two-third of the men then returned to their cells voluntarily and the remaining 100 men were lined up agapnst the prison wall and escorted back.

The prisoners demanded an end to so-called "skin-frisks," in which they were stipped naked, and asked that the incident of Brass' death be referred to the parliamentary committee on justice.

A penitentiary spokesman said the demands were unjustifiable and would not be met.

NEW OFFICIALS FOR ISLAND RCMP

The 320-man Vancouver Island RCMP detachment has a new superintendent.

James Nelson, 48, newly promoted from the rank of inspector, has been busy flying to the Island's 25 detachments since taking over the job in early July.

He has visited seven of the detachments and will see the other 18 within a month.

In another change recently, the RCMP announced the retirement of Chief Superintendent E. A. Pennock, Victoria administrative officer. He has been replaced by Superintendent W. R. Pilkey of Ottawa, who will take over administrative duties in E Division.

WELFARE REBUTTAL

Runaway Costs B.C.'s Problem

B.C.'s welfare costs are "out of control," Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said today, but it's up to the provincial and federal governments, not the municipalities, to do something about it.

Curtis, speaking as president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, said Phil Gaglardi, minister in charge of welfare, does not appear to understand how his department functions.

Gaglardi said in Kamloops Friday this province is getting a reputation in the rest of Canada as a "soft touch" for welfare aid.

He said cities like Vancouver and Victoria which this year have high welfare costs should screen applicants and cut down on the number of people who receive aid.

Curtis, in a prepared statement, said:

'OUT OF CONTROL'

"Welfare costs in B.C. are pretty well out of control, and it isn't sufficient for the welfare minister to rather childishly suggest municipalities on their own can reduce costs."

"Municipalities in dispensing social assistance are acting under very strict rules imposed from above. In each civic welfare office the administrator functions under provincial government acts, regulations and policies.

"Admittedly our people have the right to interpret, but that gives them comparatively little latitude.

'SHOULD RESIGN'

"If Mr. Gaglardi does not understand this basic truth he should resign as Minster of Rehabilitation and Social Improvement," Curtis said.

"His suggestion that municipalities should screen applicants is quite absurd because he must know that our refusal to grant aid to a bona fide recipient would be overruled very quickly.

"If in fact some recipients are not totally entitled to the form and quantity of the assitance they now receive, then some rules should be changed at the federal and provincial levels."

Ratepayers to Study View Royal Proposal

Last December they rejected a sewer referendum, mainly on grounds installation of sewers would be followed by an influx of developers.

Now Green Isle Estates Ltd. has renewed an application to the regional board for rezoning 38 acres astride the old highway on the east side of Craigflower Creek.

WAREHOUSE FIRST

A warehouse is the first building planned. It would be followed by a town house or condominium.

A previous application was turned down because of the lack of sewage facilities, but the company now intends to build its own sewer and join to the regional sewer system.

"This is nothing but a plan to bring in sewers by the back door," said Capt. A. R. Trail, president of the ratepayers association.

Al Beasley, View Royal's representative on the regional board, will attend Monday's meeting which will be held in the community hall at 8 p.m.

'URGENT'

"We don't usually meet during the summer months," Trail said, "but this is sufficiently urgent that the ratepayers executive felt we should have a meeting for those who are still in town so that we can let the regional board know how we feel."

Residents got a shock earlier this year when, just after the defeat of the sewer referendum, a B.C. Supreme Court decision approved a 38-suite condominium on septic tanks.

ing with government plans for handling the Russians.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, accompanying the prime minister on the last leg of the trip, said Canada wants to control shipping and mining in all coastal waters on its continental shelf.

This was the government's aim but it would try to get the support of a majority of member countries in the United Nations before taking action to exert such control.

He told the Prince Rupert meeting Canada is at a stage where it had to decide in some cases between rapid industrial development and a slower rate allowing more careful pollution control.

The U.S. had surged ahead economically since the war, "but now they have massive cities with great problems; New York is incredible."

Canadians could still choose what direction to take.

He told a civic meeting that the government plans to continue reducing the share of the budget allocated for defence.

He said research in Canada into chemical and biological warfare is purely a defensive matter.

About half of the 2,000 people in Bella Coola turned out to greet the prime minister.

Pope's Nephew Dies

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — Price Carlo Pacelli, counsellor-general of the Vatican City state, has died of a heart attack in a Rome hospital, the Vatican announced. The 67-year-old prince was a nephew of the late Pope Pius XII.

Threat Issued By Tupameros

MONTEVIDEO (AP) — Leftist guerrillas who are holding three foreign officials for ransom threatened today to retaliate against foreign diplomats if two guerrilla leaders in a Uruguayan government jail are tortured.

The communique from the Tupamaros guerrillas, delivered to a radio station, made no mention of the two Americans and one Brazilian they now hold. The guerrillas have demanded that the Uruguayan government free an estimated 150 political prisoners as ransom for the kidnapped trio, but the demand so far has been ignored.

The message from the kidnappers did not specify what retaliation would be taken against foreign diplomats in Uruguay.

It was the first word from the kidnappers since a deadline of midnight Friday night for release of the political prisoners was ignored by the government.

'OUT OF MY HANDS'

Friday night, a radio station had quoted police sources as saying that one of the jailed guerrilla leaders, Raul Sendic, had promised the lives of the captives would be spared. Later, unofficial sources said Sendic told them the matter is "out of my hands."

Sendic is a former law student credited with being one of the founders and a key leader of the terrorist organization that has harassed the Uruguayan government since 1963.

The Tupamaros had warned the government of President Jorge Pacheco Areco that they would "terminate this affair and do justice" if the ransom demand was ignored.

They had not, however, clarified whether their warning was a threat to kill Claude L. Fly, 65, Dan A. Mitrone, 50, and Aloysio Mares Dias Gomide, 41, Brazilian consul in Montevideo.

In appeal to the kidnappers shortly before midnight, the three victims' wives—Myriam Fly, Henrietta Mitrone and Maria Aparecida Leal De Dias Gomide—said: "The sacrifice of human lives has always beeen useless." Mitrone was shot and wounded during his abduction.

STANDS FAST

Despite increasing pressure from the U.S. and Brazilian governments, Pacheco Areco remained firm in his refusal to bargain with the Tupamaros, who his government regards as "common criminals," not political prisoners.

Meanwhile, police and soldiers tightened a dragnet around Montevideo, a city of nearly one milliom, in an effort to capture the kidnappers and free the three men. A wedding ring belong to Dias Gomide was reported found during an apartment search.

Sendic and 14 other suspected Tupamaros were arrested in a raid in the seaside suburb of Malvin. One suspect, Raul Bidegain Creissing, had been sought for several months in murders of police, kidnappings, bank robberies and other terrorist activities.

He was reported to have in his possession personal documents belonging to Mitrone, a U.S. Agency for International Development adviser to Uruguayan police. The Tupamaros have accused Mitrone of being an American spy, but the U.S. embassy has denied this.

Fly was kidnapped Friday by two men posing as policemen as he worked in a laboratory in suburban Colon. The two others were abducted July 31.

Fly was on contract for International Development Services, Inc., a Washington, D.C. firm.

Provincial Novice Boxla Tournaments

Two B.C. novice lacrosse championships will be on the line when a three-day tournament begins next Friday at Memorial Arena.

Victoria, Esquimalt, Coquitlam and either South Vancouver or North Burnaby will be vying for the "A" division title while Saanich, Kitimat, Richmond and Coquitlam battle for the "B" crown.

South Vancouver and North Burnaby are currently playing for the berth.

The "A" series will involve round-robin competition while the "B" squads will compete under a knockout format.

Action begins at 6:30 p.m. Friday and continues at 10 a.m. Saturday and Sunday.

THE WEATHER

Today's sunshine was nice, but the weatherman says it isn't going to last.

The weather office at Victoria International Airport expects mostly cloudy weather again overnight and Sunday. Temperatures will reach an overnight low of 50, and a high Sunday of 70.

Mideast Mission

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Envoy Gunnar V. Jarring began his newly reactivated Middle East peace mission by talking over procedural matters with Arab and Israeli delegates here today.

He had successive appointments in his office here with Ambassadors Abdullah El-Erian of Egypt, Muhammad H. El-Farra of Jordan and Yosef Tekoah of Israel.

Secretary-General U Thant told a reporter Jarring "is entering into intensive contacts and discussions" with the parties "on procedure—the site, the time and designation of their representatives" for new peace talks.

Jarring is Thant's special representative to the Middle East and Thant announced the reactivation of the envoy's long-suspended peace mission Friday after Egypt, Jordan and Israel all had accepted a United States peace proposal.

Egypt and Israel tossed up a hefty problem for him even before his peace mission was reactivated, it was apparent today.

Outgrow Bedwetting

When?

Half the children wetting the bed at age 5 will still be wetting at age 11. And bedwetting can go ON and ON. Walter C. Alvarez, M.D., Prof. Emeritus, Mayo Clinic, says: "What can the doctor prescribe . . . He can send the child to a urologist or psychiatrist, but rarely can they help . . . We physicians should know that 1 in 100 Navy recruits are quickly dismissed because of enuresis." Pacific International has ended bewetting for tens of thousands in the past two decades, and if not caused by organic defect or disease, we can end the problem for both children and adults. Submerged Cities Found

PALERMO (AP) — The Sicilian Superintendency for Antiquities says two ancient cities that sank following an earthquake 1,808 years ago have been found off Sicily with presumably "priceless treasures" preserved under sea mud.

Umberto Masocco, supervisor for Sicily's antiquities, said Friday divers spotted the ruins of Iocara on the bottom of the sea, near Palermo, and the ruins of Osteode in shallow waters off the island of Itaca.

Masocco said the divers reported they had seen a 3,000-foot stretch of walls with arches on the site of Iocara.

In Rome, the Superintendency for Antiquities of Etruria said an archeological campaign had discovered a Greek temple among the ruins of the Etruscan city of Gravisca, on the Tyrrenian north of Rome.

The superintendency said it was the first time a Greek building was found on Etruscan soil.

THEY WANT JOBS, EDUCATION . . .

. . . AND END TO DISCRIMINATION

Indian Stereotype Is Only in White Mind

One of white society's favorite myths about the Indian is that he is lazy, shiftless, doesn't like work and prefers to take life easy on social selfare.

Research by a sociologist and an anthropoligist from the University of Voctoria says that the stereotype is nothing more than a myth, and lays a good deal of the blame for current Indian problems at the door of white society.

In a paper entitled Expectations and Demands of Urban and Reserve Indians in Southwest British Columbia, Dr. Godwin Chu and David Stevenson argue that:

"The old stereotype about Indians taking life easy and not wanting to work is clearly untrue. Most of the Indians we interviewed wanted to work, but many could not find jobs.

"Their top priority demand seems to be jobs as well as vocational training that can better qualify them for holding jobs."

The demands and expectations of Indians, both on reserves and in urban settings, remain largely pragmatic and are relatively few, the paper says.

"Nothing in our data would support the impression current among some people that Indians would want to rely on social welfare.

"Quite on the contrary, our data suggests that most of those we interviewed wanted to be on their own. All they expected from the Canadian society in general, and the federal agencies in particular, seemed to be some amount of assistance, not in terms of give-away money, but in terms of training and jobs."

The fault lies, the paper argues, not necessarily with Indians but with the "perceptions about Indians held by the controllers of power and position, the givers of jobs, the renters of houses, and the teachers of basic English."

"While it is usually recognized that Indian people ought to have equal rights and privileges . . . This problem has often been the subject of discussion rather than the focus of objective, empirical research.

"The Indian people can no longer be regarded as a depository of an old, indigenous culture to be observed, analyzed and perhaps even preserved.

"The Indians, other than being carriers of a unique and exotic culture, have as much right as anyone else in Canada to make an adequate living, to have a voice in the running of their own affairs, and to participate in the decision-making process in Canada as a whole."

Stories
By Steve Hume

The paper suggests that Indians expect better communication, more involvement and more interest from Indian Affairs, and they expect more job opportunities, education and vocational training from Canada Manpower.

Moving to the city reflects a kind of demand on the outside society, the paper says.

Most of the Indians moving to the cities "expeoted to get jobs or schooling.

"Of those looking for jobs, all but four were counting heavily on Canada Manpower to help them. None were depending on friends or relatives to get them jobs, contrary to the popular notion about mutual reliance among the Indians."

But in examining expectations regarding Canada Manpower counsellors, the researchers found that "just as many were concerned with discrimination as those concerned with the practical issues of efficiency and job assistance."

Most Indians interviewed wanted help from Indian Affairs with housing, financial difficulties and jobs. "Others wanted to see an end to discrimination and favoritism." Only a few wanted to see better efficiency.

"The problem of discrimination appears to be of greater importance to them than the working efficiency of the federal agencies concerned," the paper says.

The data gathered also indicate that education ranks high in the Indians' expectations of society.

"Most of them want their children to have at least high school graduation. To them, education appears to be the only way to get ahead in Canada. Practically none of them were holding onto the old myth that good luck is all you need to get ahead."

The paper also states that the researchers found evidence that the Indian is faced with the decision of choosing between two worlds — the Indian and that of white society.

For example, the data indicated that those Indians with "a high sense of kinship obligations" have low demands on Canadian society, "perhaps because they are too much bound by the kinship ties to care about what they can expect from the outside soiciety."

Indians who have "succeeded in shedding their traditional kinship obligations," on the other hand, were more apt to have high demands on Canadian society, perhaps because they were no longer tightly bound within the world of the Indians.

"By moving to the city, these Indians have already taken a major step of bringing their demands to the attention of the Canadian society," the paper states.

Conducted last year on grants provided by both the university and Canada Manpower, the study used a questionnaire interview method of gathering data.

Research was carried out in the field by Indian women, except for the field supervisor who was white. Some 56 urban and 40 reserve Indians were interviewed.

The majority of urban Indians interviewed were from Vancouver and Victoria, while samples were taken from 13 reserves in Vancouver Island and the lower mainland area.

East Saanich, Koksilah, Quamichan, Cowichan, Westholme, Sooke, Becher Bay and Chemainus were among those researched.

The paper is to be published as a chapter in a volume which will be edited by Professor H. J. Massey of York University.

An Exotic Culture Amid Urban Pressures

Getting It Together With the B.C. Chiefs

Dressed casually in sweater and slacks, leaning back from his littered desk with a hot coffee in one hand and a telephone in the other, he looks a far cry from a revolutionary.

The federal department's public relations firm had just released a statement that some 16 young Indian students hired for the summer by the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs was in fact a government program to train them for jobs with Indian Affairs.

Wilson, as administrator of the union, didn't like the implications. The students, of which he is one, were hired by the union, for the union, and didn't want to be associated with the government, he said.

WILSON
. . . a little hell

His response was straightforward. A phone call to the ranking federal agent in the area. A demand for an apology. The raising of a little hell.

He hung up the phone and came back to the interview at the union's crowded office in the Squamish band's administrative headquarters in North Vancouver.

"This is the kind of thing they always do. You get something gong well and then they screw you. And this is going to screw us with a lot of people because it infers we are being trained for departmental positions."

Wilson's militant tone is typical of the attitude towards white bureaucracies that exists within the fledgling union of chiefs which was born in November, 1969 at a Kamloops conference of chiefs.

Despite a tight budget of $60,000 scraped together from independent sources and "no-strings-attached" grants from the federal government, the union recently rejected an offer of money from the B.C. government's First Citizen Fund.

"We shouldn't have to go hat in hand," Wilson says, "we should be able to administer the money ourselves if it is ours."

"I don't think there could be anything more racist than Bennett's remark that he's responsible for the people's money, he can't turn it over to the Indians. It infers Indians aren't people in this province."

The primary aim of the union is to provide a unified voice for B.C.'s 47,000 officially registered Indians.

It consists of delegates from 188 bands in the province, a 14-member chief's council, a three-man executive committee and an administrative post.

A graduate of the University of Victoria in political science who will pursue a law degree at the University of British Colubmia this fall, Wilson is representative of the kind of yonug, militant Indian that currently works with the union.

Only three of the present 20-man administrative staff is over the age of 30, Wilson points out, and the energy and exuberance of youth are reflected in the union's drive to weld the fragmented, often isolated Indian bands of the province into a viable political and economic force.

"The biggest priority now lies in keeping the thing together. This unity thing is something you have to keep harping on. The union has come to the point where people recognize it is the last chance," Wilson says.

From its original staff of three, the union has expanded rapidly. Four students were hired May 1, and since then more students have been added.

"We have to expand even more," Wilson says. "We need another 15 staff—a health liaison officer and a communications worker are priorities."

Wilson says he's sad to leave what he describes as "THE Indian job in the province," but his law degree comes first.

"The union has guaranteed me a job as soon as I years from now. And that's the only place I'd want to work."

He sees the union as an "umbrella organization" that complete my degree four will unite B.C. Indians at a natural, grass-roots level.

"I like to compare it to a parliamentary system—you have elected representatives, the chiefs, and the union provides the parliament.

"I hate to compare it to a white system of government, but speaking with one voice is the over-riding philosophy."

The union, he says, will hopefully end the "lip-service co-operation" offered by white society in the past and encourage a real and co-operative effort to right past wrongs.

"We recognize that white people won't go away. We want true integration and not the disguised assimilation that's been offered in the past. We want an end to the missionary attitude.

"Despite our differences we should be able to get together. We're all people, after all. Under the skin we're all one.

"If the people of the province would live up to the principles they pay lip-service to, the Indian people would be a unified, financially independent minority with a strong voice."

The E&N: Small Gains While the Feds Decide

Will the CPR's Dayliner continue to roll between Victoria and Courtenay in the years ahead?

It's a decision in the hands of a federal agency now and it may be months before an announcement.

But there are some more immediate results from a public hearing on the question which concluded in Victoria Friday.

The railway has promised a new schedule which will allow connections with ferries and likely a bigger Dayliner.

The commission, a federal agency controlling the evolution of rail service in the country, has authority to:

- Permit CPR to discontinue the Dayliner service.
- Order it to maintain the service if the commission views it 'in the public interest," and possibly award the railway a subsidy. The subsidy could run from a nominal $1 up to 80 per cent of the loss from operating the Dayliner.

The Dayliner united a diverse group of champions this week. Among those who stood up for it at the 2½-day hearing were:

Two provincial MLAs, one of them also a mayor, two other mayors, two aldermen, a writer, a former railway engineer, Indian band representatives, a former American lawyer, a labor officer, a bookkeeper, a psychiatrist, a university student and representatives from ratepayers' association, a regional district, local merchants and a tourist bureau.

In addition, lawyers holding watching briefs for the city of Victoria and the province of Ontario did some close questioning.

The hearing at the Law Courts Building was before the railway traffic committee of the Canadian Transport Commission. Panel members were D. H. Jones, chairman, and J. M. Woodard.

The application to discontinue the Dayliner service, because it is uneconomic, was made by the Canadian Pacific Railway on behalf of the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, which CPR owns. But just who was and who should have been making the application was the subject of a legal argument and is part of the picture the commission will have to resolve.

By Don Vipond

"We're here as long as necessary to hear everybody," Jones told a crowd of over 100 when the hearing got under way Wednesday morning. And everybody was heard.

At the conclusion of the hearing Friday the chairman said the committee will continue to accept written submissions for the rest of the month. It had received some briefs prior to the hearing.

The CPR, through counsel T. G. Mathers, made only a brief presentation on its application. The Dayliner service has lost over $100,000 in each of the years 1966 through 1968. That wasn't at issue. The commission has already audited and accepted operating loss figures.

The opposition hammered away on three main themes:

- The CPR is running the Dayliner service so inefficiently it couldn't help lose money.
- Profit or loss, the railway is obligated to provide the service under the terms of an agreement dating from before the turn of the century and involving a whopping land grant.
- The service is essential.

A sample of some of the arguments advanced by those who want to see the railway application refused:

Herb Bruch, Esquimalt MLA: "The policy of the CPR is quite obvious. They are trying by every means they can devise to lose money on passenger runs so as to make a case for dropping them . . .

"They have a 'what is good for Bull Moose is good for the country reputation . . .

"The grants to the E and N have a special status in that they were given in trust to Canada, with the agreement of a full service in return . . .

"It would be an unfair imposition on the taxpayer of Canada and especially the British Columbian to be taxed to subsidize a passenger service that has already been more than adequately subsidized by excessive land, timber and mineral grants as well as tax exemptions . . .

"The CPR has not been a good corporate citizen. They have proven incompetent and inept by failing to recognize the trends and changes of our times . . . I for one have no confidence in their intentions and policies and ask you to order them to fulfil their part of the agreement with the people of Vancouver Island . . ."

Paul Hutchison, Uvic student: "It is stated by officials of CPR that people have deserted the railway. It is quite the opposite . . ."

Margaret Kier, bookkeeper living in View Royal: "I'm making a plea from my heart because I just love that trip . . ." Of management of the Dayliner operation she added: ". . . this deadly lethargy has set in."

Duncan Mayor James Quaife: The Esquimalt and Nanaimo rail operation is "somewhat of a joke and nothing short of a farce . . ."

There are many elderly citizens on Vancouver Island, about 1,600 in the Duncan area alone, he said, for which the Dayliner is the main mode of transportation.

"It would appear that if anything is lacking in the Dayliner service it's good management . . ."

Mrs. Lydia Wilks of Qualicum Beach, representing the Bowser-Horne Lake and district ratepayers: "We are ever mindful of the (CPR grant) incumbrances on land against our title deeds . . ."

She suggested an increase to two trains daily, including Sunday, with dining car during the summer months. And the trains should originate in Courtenay, not Victoria.

John Smissaert, an American lawyer who has moved from San Francisco to Victoria: "It's too bad the CPR has developed such a negative attitude . . ."

After outlining successful rail tourist operations in the U.S., he offered to help design advertising material plugging the Dayliner trip and said he was ready to donate slides for post card promotion.

Donald Beaton of Qualicum Beach, chairman of the Nanaimo regional board, said he had watched since 1933 as the rail service deteriorated.

He proposed a two-year delay on the application to give Island communities a chance to make a united presentation.

Larry Ryan, secretary-treasurer of the Victoria Labor Council, argued the dominant factor is a legal agreement with the railway to provide the service.

Arthur Mayse . . .

WHILE WEST COAST trollers were having their troubles with Soviet trawlers this summer, Gulf of Georgia commercial fishermen were coping as best they could with an armada of a different sort. From advices received, they are still doing so.

According to David Prosser of 1124 Mt. Newton Cross Road, commercials who fish the Gulf are losing their tie-up spaces at island wharves to such a host of American pleasure craft as our waters have never carried before.

"They're everywhere," says Prosser, after a holiday voyage that took him and his family north as far as Stuart Island at the mouth of Bute Inlet.

"Last year, we found it interesting. This year, it's an epidemic, and the fishermen aren't at all happy about it. They used to be able to count on wharf space. Now, they're sometimes forced to tie up four abreast."

Dave Prosser, a lean pipe-smoker, is a business machine salesman whose idea of a perfect summer vacation used to be a cruise among the islands. In the second week of July, he set out with his wife and two daughters in his 26-foot Danish Spitzgatter, "Judy."

They followed the Gulf Island chain to Northwest Bay, then crossed under sail to the mainland. It was then that they began to realize the extent of the American pleasure-boat invasion.

"There weren't too many on the Vancouver Island side," Prosser told me, "because a lot of American boatmen prefer to avoid a Gulf of Georgia crossing. But from Powell River on, wherever we put in, U.S.-registered boats had virtually taken over."

They swarmed north from Washington, Oregon and California ports. Some came from Idaho—Prosser figured these must have been trucked or trailered over the mountains—and one cruiser even sported Montana registration.

Dave Prosser is by no means anti-American. As a boatman himself, he sympathizes with American sport sailors whose only good U.S. West Coast cruising ground centres on the San Juan Islands.

"Still," says he, "when you see 80 or 90 per cent of cruisers flying the American flag, you begin to feel like a stranger in your own land. When you spot a Canadian flag, you wave."

The irony, as he sees it, is that the visitors, by their numbers, are destroying the solitude and the sense of wilderness they came north to find. They are creating problems that can't be ignored.

There's the matter of those over-crowded landings. The federal government has rebuilt and enlarged a number of wharves.

But the extra space provided fails to meet the demand imposed, and fishermen who depend on those landings become increasingly hostile.

Since wharf-tending is casual and garbage disposal facilities are rarely provided, water and shore pollution increases.

"The garbage goes overboard," Prosser said. "I doubt there's a beach this side of Queen Charlotte Sound that doesn't have its beer cans and plastic bottles."

Part of the Up-coast grumble is that American spending is largly confined to boat fuel and beer. The cruiser parties bring their own supplies, and, according to islanders the Prossers talked with, load up on oysters and salmon.

What should Ottawa do about a situation that can be expected to grow more acute each year?

Prosser's suggestions:

Levy a tax, to be used for wharf maintenance and control, on U.S. pleasure craft at their point of entry into Canadian waters. Install garbage disposal facilities—if such are provided, boatmen will use them.

Set up a water-borne tourist patrol. It's needed now, and will be urgently required if the Gulf of Georgia becomes a federal marine park.

And his summation:

"We're taking in next to no tourist revenue from this American cruiser congestion, and we're losing a great deal in the quiet, the unspoiled beauty, the solitude that could be found up there even a few years ago."

That, Dave Prosser tells me, is why he means to take spring or fall cruising holidays in future.

His decision formed on the evening he dropped hook in an anchorage where only waterfowl voices once were heard. The inevitable U.S. cruiser pulled in on his heels. From it presently rolled the strains of an organ, played plenty fortissimo.

"I've nothing against organ music in its place," says Dave, "but we'd sooner have listened to the ducks."

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—National pride may be soaring as the Canadian dollar almost achieves parity with U.S. currency, but here in the capital the bouncy buck is only raising some goosebumps.

The federal finance department has been remarkably loath to acknowledge let alone comment on the situation.

Strange, Compelling Explanation

However, one eminent economist — no names, no pack drill — suggested a strange but compelling explanation for the government reluctance to chat about the development.

He pointed out that while there are several reasons traced for the strong foreign demand for Canadian currency, there is total silence on why there is no countervailing Canadian demand for foreign currencies.

In other words, the imbalance of payments producing the demand for Canadian dollars is a measure of the growing weakeness rather than strength of the national economy — the direct result of the government's own deflationary policy.

"What is happening is that domestic demand is being curtailed because our economy is slowing down — indeed, as the unemployment figures show, it is slowing down much more than any other industrial nation — and consequently there is a much weaker demand for imports," the economist said.

Export Markets Relatively Strong

"This is occuring at a time when export markets are still relatively strong, a not infrequent conjunction. The same sort of thing happened in the 1950s when there was much slack in our economy at home but the Canadian dollar rose six cents above the U.S. dollar."

Thus when financial experts point out that foreign tourists are buying up Canadian dollars heavily for visits here it doesn't necessarily mean there are unusually larger numbers of them heading this way.

It also could mean that with a 6.6 per cent unemployment rate there are just fewer Canadians around this year with Canadian dollars to sell to finance American Express vacations abroad.

In that case, domestic weakness rather than external strength would account for the developing imbalance which the exchange rates reflect.

"Of course, as the Canadian dollar keeps going up, it will tend to discourage exports and encourage imports — but this compensating effect could take some time to show itself and thereby intensify the slackening of economic growth," the economist observed gloomily.

In any event, he contended it would be highly dangerous to re-peg the Canadian dollar at its current level, as hard experience in the 1950s proved.

Looking Ahead Three or Four Years

"First, looking ahead three or four years when export levels might taper off, it wouldn't be the right rate for Canada but it would be hard to get it down again — to devalue our dollar."

(Remember Donald Fleming's ordeal as finance minister in 1962?)

"And second, having just shown again that we will unpeg our dollar when forced, it would be very difficult indeed to defend a high-pegged dollar against the natural pressures of the exchange market.

He added that it would be mostly unlikely the international monetary fund would increase pressure on Canada to peg its currency when going through a volatile period.

"Certainly, it would be very, very difficult to make a judgment now on what the appropriate rate for the Canadian dollar should be," he said.

There are some indications that the cabinet thinks so, too, and it's one judgment it won't rush into.

Truce Stills Gunfire In Suez Canal Zone

By The Canadian Press

The banks of the Suez Canal were reported "quiet" today for the first time in three years.

But only hours after a United States-initiated ceasefire went into effect along the canal at midnight (3 p.m. PDT Friday) there were two reports of firing along the frontier with Jordan, with three Israeli soldiers wounded.

"The southern command reports quiet," an Israeli military spokesman said as the ceasefire became effective along the canal area.

But several rockets were reported fired from Jordan at the Israeli Dead Sea potash works within hours of the ceasefire and the military command said Arab gunners in Jordan wounded three Israeli soldiers in an ambush early today. The Israelis returned the fire after the ambush in the southern Golan Height of Syria, a spokesman said.

NO CASUALTIES

The military said in Tel Aviv there were no casualties in the rocket attack on the potash works and no information on who fired the rockets. Arab guerrillas were believed responsible.

Israel's deputy premier, Yigal Allon, said in an interview on the state radio that his government would hold Jordan responsible for any failure to control guerrillas operating from her territory.

"If terrorists or any other forces should renew attacks on Israeli villages and towns, then Israel would be obliged to invoke its right of self-defence," he said.

The ceasefire is viewed as a first step toward indirect Arab-Israeli peace talks. It was announced Friday in Washington, Cairo, Jerusalem and the United Nations in New York.

The ceasefire prompted limited optimism for settlement of the hostilities that have existed among the Middle Eastern neighbors since Israel became a state in 1948.

At the United Nations, special envoy Gunnar V. Jarring of Sweden scheduled meetings today with Israeli, Egyptian and Jordanian diplomats on mechanics of the ceasefire, which is to continue at least through Nov. 5.

They were expected to discuss possible cities for the negotiations — presumably New York, Geneva or Nicosia, Cyprus. The U.S. proposal called for the governments involved to name representatives for talks "according to such procedure and at such places and times" as Jarring might recommend.

'Winning Price Battle'

OCEAN FALLS — Ottawa is near the end of its battle against inflation and beginning to fight unemployment, Prime Minister Trudeau indicated here Friday.

The federal government is in a position to ease restraints because Canada has been more successful than any other western nation in its drive against inflation, he told a meeting in this coastal logging town of 2,500.

"The next priority is unemployment," he said.

The prime minister was winding up a six-day tour of B.C. and the north.

OTTAWA ACTIONS

Current unemployment — 6.6 per cent of the labor force — has been partly a result of government actions that slow the economy and defeat inflation, he said.

Because some sectors were still trying "to take more out of the economy than they put in," there were still inflationary pressures.

He said labor costs were a major cause of inflation as wage and salary boosts in the second quarter of this year had outpaced price and profit increases.

"Who's inflating now? It's labor."

CAN BORROW NOW

The prime minister told a later meeting of about 1,200 people in Prince Rupert that the government now is in a position to borrow new funds in the money market and reinvest them as a stimulant to the Canadian economy.

Trudeau appeared to take great enjoyment from question and answer sessions.

The audiences have been generally large, friendly and loud in their applause for the prime minister. Aides described the trip as an outstanding success. He is to return to Ottawa Sunday.

Trudeau told audiences Friday his reason for making the trip, which covered many areas never visited by a prime minister, was to talk and explain the overall context in which government operates.

Trudeau's stiffest test had been expected here when he was confronted by fishermen, angered at what they claim is interference from Soviet fishing vessels off the west coast.

Guidelines Don't Apply To Postmen

MONTREAL — Postmaster-General Eric Kierans held out hope Friday for an early settlement of the national postal dispute.

He said his optimism was based on new-found "manoeuvrability" stemming from his understanding that six per cent guidelines do not apply to postmen.

"Both sides should move from their original positions," he said in an interview. "The momentum will then pick up, leading to a settlement."

Kierans said the six per cent guideline "has nothing to do with the post office" in its negotiations with the unions.

He said the negotiations had already started and "the guidelines came along later."

The postmaster-general said he has exerted pressure on the treasury negotiators in their talks with the Canadian Council of Postal Unions.

Tie Boosts To Inflation —Bennett

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier W. A. C. Bennett said Friday he's suggested to Ottawa that its wage guidelines should be for increases amounting to three per cent more than the current rate of inflation.

"If the inflation is six per cent, the workers should get a nine per cent increase. If inflation is zero, they get only three per cent."

TOLD OTTAWA

Bennett said he has passed on the idea to Ottawa and the federal Prices and Incomes Commission.

He told a press conference he supports restraint "but I didn't suggest six per cent" — Ottawa's guideline.

"The six per cent is not a sound business approach," the premier said.

"That's Ottawa's trouble, they do not have any businessmen in their cabinet. How can you sell workers on a six-per-cent increase if inflation is eight per cent?

"I advocated a three per cent basic genuine increase in wages. We can expect a normal three per cent growth in economy to take care of that."

COMMITTEE HIT

The committee members, said Bennett, were just on a political junket trying to whitewash the white paper on taxation.

Mail Strike Ends —Until Next Week

VANCOUVER (CP) — Postal workers returned to work in British Columbia today following a 24-hour strike that shut down mail service throughout the province.

Jim McCall, strike zone co-ordinator for the lower B.C. mainland, hinted that post offices in the province would be hit by rotating strikes again next week.

"We don't usually strike on the weekends, because it doesn't affect the service that much," he said. "But next week they will all be strikeable days.

"Monday is another era entirely."

Post offices in B.C. and the Yukon were shut down by the strike Friday. In B.C., only the dispatch office at Vancouver International Airport operated.

TEAR GAS ENDS SITDOWN IN B.C. PENITENTIARY

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — About 320 British Columbia penitentiary prisoners who staged an eight-hour sit-down protest overnight returned to their cells after an early-morning confrontation with prison guards and RCMP at the New Westminster penitentiary.

The death last Tuesday of Walten Brass, a 27-year-old Saskatchewan prisoner, was believed to have sparked the protest. A coroner's jury later ruled his death was caused by cerebral hemorrhage.

Prisoners said Brass was beaten by prison guards, and Friday night at 8 p.m. prisoners refused to return to their cells at the end of an exercise period.

Bonfires were started with recreation room ping-pong tables, but were extinguished by RCMP and guards.

Off-duty guards and police reinforcements were called as the prisoners continued to protest in the exercise area, surrounded by a 10-foot wire fence and 30-foot guard towers equipped with searchlights.

ORDERED BACK

At 3:20 a.m. an order was given to the men to return to their cells, but only a handful obeyed.

Several canisters of tear gas then were lobbed into the exercise area, which was surrounded by an estimated 125 members of the RCMP and 75 prison guards.

About two-thirds of the men then returned to their cells voluntarily and the remaining 100 men were lined up against the prison wall and escorted back.

The prisoners demanded an end to so-called "skin-frisks," in which they were stripped naked, and asked that the incident of Brass's death be referred to the parliamentary committee on justice.

A penitentiary spokesman said the demands were unjustifiable and would not be met.

Mosport Crowd 'Well Behaved'

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP) — A crowd estimated by provincial police at between 40,000 and 50,000 was jammed into Mosport Park today on the second day of a weekend rock festival.

But a police spokesman said the youthful crowd "was very well behaved."

Although drugs were being sold openly, uniformed policemen did not enter the park Friday and a spokesman said police would stay out unless trouble erupts at the site 40 miles northeast of Toronto.

Nude bathing, marijuana smoking, LSD and amplified music was the main occupation of the youths Friday night. Some even watched the trials for the motorcycle races to be held today.

ROCK GROUPS PLAY

The main entertainment started late in the afternoon the stand, followed by such major groups as Delaney, Bonnie and Friends, Melanie and Jethro Tull.

Earlier court manoeuvrings centred on the provincial government's attempt to stop the festival, and uncertainty over whether major groups actually would perform, had been forgotten.

About 300 provincial police officers patrolled in shifts outside the 500-acre park area, while about 250 uniformed private security guards maintained a discreet presence in the park itself.

"We're treating it as a normal police function. So far there has been no trouble," said provincial police Constable Ray Brooks, attached to the force's news bureau.

Police reported only four arrests on drug charges, all young Americans arrested at nearby Newcastle while on their way to the park. No arrests were reported in the park itself.

MARSHAL MEDICS

The Ontario Addiction Research Foundation was working in co-operation with the emergency services unit of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission in supplying clinical, nursing and counselling services.

Provincial Health Minister Thomas Wells toured the festival site Friday and said later he would bill the promoters at least $30,000 for health services.

Bill Huard, secretary-treasurer of Productions Sportives Ville Marie Inc., the festival promoters, said he didn't think any bill from the government would be justified.

"So far as I'm concerned, we are all paid up."

Assisting the ARF under the direction of Dr. Norman McNally and Lawrence Purdy, director of the foundation's Metropolitan Toronto region, were three free youth clinic groups associated with the ARF.

Doctors and aides at the three medical tents were not keeping a count of the bad trippers, but said it had been quiet during the day and increasingly busy as night wore on.

Richard Elston, administrator of Memorial Hospital at nearby Bowmanville, said three or four bad trippers had been treated there, including a 15-year-old girl. The hospital was placed on an alert status.

The drug business was described by one reporter as being "really flourishing—wide open."

One youth took over an empty concession booth, wrote the word Acid (LSD) across the front and did a thriving business.

Other enterprising youths were selling marijuana, assorted narcotics, Mickey Mouse sweaters and underground newspapers.

The mill pond at the village of Tyrone north of the park was overrun by dozens of young people, many of them nude, who used the pond as a swimming hole. Police gave up attempts to clear the pond.

Many families were in evidence, with small children running through the crowds or lining up at the ferris wheel and two other rides in a small midway area.

FEED HUNGRY

Free rice kitchens and food buses were ready for the hungry, and many persons set up campstoves or built fires to cook food brought with them. Barrels of drinking water were located around the park, and portable toilets also were available.

Doctors at the medical centre said there was no problem with sanitary facilities, and one reporter noted that the grounds generally were "pretty tidy garbage-wise."

Americans continued to dominate the scene. U.S. flags, most of them flown upside down, were much in evidence.

The event had been heavily advertised in the northeastern U.S. The organizers had not advertised as heavily in Canada for fear publicity would nullify their attempts to by-pass official opposition to the festival.

Meantime, both U.S. and Canadian customs and immigration officials were busy at border crossing points where thousands of young people streamed both ways—either on their way to Mosport or to a rock festival at Goose Lake Park at Jackson, Mich.

Arrests on drug charges were reported at several border points, and officials stopped many youths from crossing the border who had insufficient funds or lacked proper identification.

LONG-TERM PROBLEMS SEEN

Mideast Truce Splits Israel

By ALFRED FRIENDLY

JERUSALEM (WP) — The internal political problems created by Israel through its acceptance of the American peace initative are minor in the short term. In the longer run, they may become massive.

For the short term, the consequence is the rupture of Prime Minister Golda Meir's wall-to-wall (virtually) all-party government. The right-wing element in the coalition, Gahal, walked off but its depatrure in no way endangers either day-to-day administration or the maintenance f the general purposes and philosophy of the regime.

To some degree, it may make Mrs. Meir's daily chores easier, with internal dissidents out of the way. For the long term, the consequence can be a crucial division, a harrowing political battle, among the Israeli people over what kind of a peace settlement they are willing to accept — in the event, that is, that the proposed cease-fire-cum-negotiations gets as far as developing a proposed settlement (few Israelis, incidentally, think that it will).

Being at hand and easy to see, the immediate repercussions can be considered first:

Gahal's ultimate parting of the ways with the rest of the coalition was, in any event, inevitable. It had long since been foreseen. In an interview in March, Mrs. Meir said that she knew Gahal would walk out, and that she would be reconsiled to it, whenever matters came to a point of decision on a peace treaty that called for the return to Arab hands of any territory conquered during the six Day War.

For the sake of national unity, in fact and in image, she hoped to delay the split as long as possible. In her speech Tuesday formally spelling out the government acceptance of the American peace initative, she made clear that she thought Gahal mistook the occasion: matters were a long way, indeed, from any settlement entailing an Israeli pull-back.

But for the first time, the Israeli government uttered the word "withdrawal," and for the majority of Gahal there had to be an unyoking of the common harness.

Gahal's position on the issue is essentially religio-political, however much it may appear to the world outside as extremist "territorial aggrandizement."

Its thesis is that Eretz Israel, or "the land of Israel," is all of biblical Palestine, including Judeah and Samaria on the West Bank. Once in possession of it, as now, no Israeli government dare relinquish it because it belongs, by biblical sanction, to the Jewish people. If the proposition seems archaic or even fantastic, it must nevertheless be considered in the context of the religious and ethnic history that are such important threads in the fabric of the Zionist state.

Gahal is itself an amalgam of two parties, Herut (meaning fredeom) and the Liberals. Herut espouses the foregoing proposition much more dogmatically and emphatically than its partner.

So it was that in the final vote of the group's central committee, early Tuesday morning, the result was a close thing, 117 to 112, indicating that the bulk of the Liberals, at least, agreed essentially with Mrs. Meir that the point had not been reached where the question of withdrawing from the West Bank was really being posed for decision.

On the basis of such a narrow vote, Gahal's withdrawal is sure to present it and its leader, Menachem Begin (also leader of Herut) more problems that it does the government and Mrs. Meir. Begin, a remarkably able man and far from the ravening werewolf-warhawk he is often portrayed abroad, is in his element as opposition leader. But he does not have an easy bed to lie in.

On handing her his resignation, he kissed Mrs. Meir's hand in token of esteem, friendship and pledge of functioning as the "loyal" opposition. But the role of an opposition is to oppose, and if Begin's voice grows shrill and the fiery oratory for which he is famous begins to flame, he risks splitting his own coalition.

The Liberals, as the vote showed, are unhappy enough at the outcome. They have always felt that they could protect their position of the integrity of "Eretz Israel" against dovish concessions better inside the government than out, so also, on economic affairs by helping fashion budget, fiscal and financial policy from within rather than by opposition attack. Begin can lose them if his opposition tactics grow too furious.

Turning from government politics to popular attitudes, it would be the gross overstatement of the year to say that the Israelis are happy with the American proposal or their government's acceptance of it. But, in deep melancholy and malaise, the majority appears to have concluded that the government had no option. Most Israelis support, therefore, what they take to have been the reasoning of Mrs. Meir, of Foreign Minister Abba Eban, of Defence Minister Moshe Dayan, that Israel had to bow to what is known here as proposal of the American secretary of state — lest it lose the support of its great protector and partner.

Heat Kills Children As Babysitter Chats

The babysitter, Mrs Virginia O'Donnell, 62, of Canoga Park, was caring for Hugh Flynn III, 3, and his 6-month-old brother John, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Flynn when her daughter called and asked her to babysit for her grandchild.

Police said Mrs. O'Donnell drove to her daughter's home, which she shared, and left the Flynn children in the car while she went inside to chat.

After about 45 minutes, Mrs. O'Connell and her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Hendricks, went out to the car and discovered the children's bodies.

Both children were pronounced dead on arrival at a Northridge hospital.

Police said temperatures in the Canoga Park area reached about 105 degrees and the interior of the car probably reached 120 degrees.

Mrs. O'Donnell was booked on two counts of manslaughter based on alleged negligence.

Militants Cancel Parade in Ulster

LONDONDERRY (AP) — Militant Northern Ireland Protestants bowed to government pressure today and called off the traditional parade that last August touched off bloody street riots between Roman Catholics and Protestants.

The Protestant Unionist Association had earlier threatened to defy a government ban on parades and threatened to mobilize 5,000 followers for the traditional Aug. 12 celebration of the relief of the city from besieging Roman Catholic troops of King James II in 1689. But the association announced today it will observe the government ban Wednesday and instead celebrate the occasion with a large rally in a Protestant area of the city. Londonderry now is largely Roman Catholic.

It was this parade which last year touched off religious rioting and brought British troops into the country last fall to put them down. Even with thousands of British troops still stationed in Ulster, riots regularly break out on weekends—here and in the capital city of Belfast.

So far this summer 13 persons have died and hundreds more have been injured in clashes.

Its thesis is that Eretz Israel, or "the land of Israel," is all of biblical Palestine, including Judeah and Samaria on the West Bank. Once in possession of it, as now, no Israeli government dare relinquish it because it belongs, by biblical sanction, to the Jewish people. If the proposition seems archaic or even fantastic, it must nevertheless be considered in the context of the religious and ethnic history that are such important threads in the fabric of the Zionist state.

Gahal is itself an amalgam of two parties, Herut (meaning fredeom) and the Liberals. Herut espouses the foregoing proposition much more dogmatically and emphatically than its partner.

So it was that in the final vote of the group's central committee, early Tuesday morning, the result was a close thing, 117 to 112, indicating that the bulk of the Liberals, at least, agreed essentially with Mrs. Meir that the point had not been reached where the question of withdrawing from the West Bank was really being posed for decision.

On the basis of such a narrow vote, Gahal's withdrawal is sure to present it and its leader, Menachem Begin (also leader of Herut) more problems that it does the government and Mrs. Meir. Begin, a remarkably able man and far from the ravening werewolf-warhawk he is often portrayed abroad, is in his element as opposition leader. But he does not have an easy bed to lie in.

On handing her his resignation, he kissed Mrs. Meir's hand in token of esteem, friendship and pledge of functioning as the "loyal" opposition. But the role of an opposition is to oppose, and if Begin's voice grows shrill and the fiery oratory for which he is famous begins to flame, he risks splitting his own coalition.

The Liberals, as the vote showed, are unhappy enough at the outcome. They have always felt that they could protect their position of the integrity of "Eretz Israel" against dovish concessions better inside the government than out, so also, on economic affairs by helping fashion budget, fiscal and financial policy from within rather than by opposition attack. Begin can lose them if his opposition tactics grow too furious.

Turning from government politics to popular attitudes, it would be the gross overstatement of the year to say that the Israelis are happy with the American proposal or their government's acceptance of it. But, in deep melancholy and malaise, the majority appears to have concluded that the government had no option. Most Israelis support, therefore, what they take to have been the reasoning of Mrs. Meir, of Foreign Minister Abba Eban, of Defence Minister Moshe Dayan, that Israel had to bow to what is known here as proposal of the American secretary of state — lest it lose the support of its great protector and partner.

Heat Kills Children As Babysitter Chats

The babysitter, Mrs Virginia O'Donnell, 62, of Canoga Park, was caring for Hugh Flynn III, 3, and his 6-month-old brother John, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Flynn when her daughter called and asked her to babysit for her grandchild.

Police said Mrs. O'Donnell drove to her daughter's home, which she shared, and left the Flynn children in the car while she went inside to chat.

After about 45 minutes, Mrs. O'Connell and her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Hendricks, went out to the car and discovered the children's bodies.

Both children were pronounced dead on arrival at a Northridge hospital.

Police said temperatures in the Canoga Park area reached about 105 degrees and the interior of the car probably reached 120 degrees.

Mrs. O'Donnell was booked on two counts of manslaughter based on alleged negligence.

Militants Cancel Parade in Ulster

LONDONDERRY (AP) — Militant Northern Ireland Protestants bowed to government pressure today and called off the traditional parade that last August touched off bloody street riots between Roman Catholics and Protestants.

The Protestant Unionist Association had earlier threatened to defy a government ban on parades and threatened to mobilize 5,000 followers for the traditional Aug. 12 celebration of the relief of the city from besieging Roman Catholic troops of King James II in 1689. But the association announced today it will observe the government ban Wednesday and instead celebrate the occasion with a large rally in a Protestant area of the city. Londonderry now is largely Roman Catholic.

It was this parade which last year touched off religious rioting and brought British troops into the country last fall to put them down. Even with thousands of British troops still stationed in Ulster, riots regularly break out on weekends—here and in the capital city of Belfast.

So far this summer 13 persons have died and hundreds more have been injured in clashes.
